Nazi Army Marching Into Czechoslovakia

Woodring Hits Moseley Political Talk As 'Disloyal'

General, 64, Retires Fears Dictatorship Sees 'Sinister Motive' Army Regrets Words

Secretary Woodring yesterday branded as "flagrantly disloyal" a blast against President Roosevelt's New Deal Administration issued by Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley, who retired from active duty yesterday at 64.

Commander of the Fourth Corps Area and the Third Army up to the time of his retirement, Moseley declared at Atlanta, Ga., that "increased Government responsibility . . . and resultant Federal paternalism will inevitably become dictatorship."

Immediately Secretary of War Woodring charged Gen. Moseley with disloyalty, inasmuch as President Roosevelt is commander in chief of the Nation's military forces, and declared the attack was inspired by the general's disappointment "in his ambition to become chief of staff of the American Armies."

Asserting that the tenor of Gen. Moseley's remarks explained why he never attained his ambition, Secretary Woodring bluntly added that, "Obviously the general is entitled to his own views on governmental and other policies but I have an idea that Gen. Moseley's brother officers will be as much astonished and dismayed by this exhibition of pique and bad taste as the general run of American citizens who believe and have always accepted the theory that an American officer's loyalty to his chief did not cease when he went off active service. Though he retired today he continued to be an officer of the Army, receiving the inactive pay which in his case is approximately $6,000 a year."

Denies He Was Piqued

Gen. Moseley last night denied that his retirement statement was "actuated by feeling of pique" because he was not appointed chief of staff.

Moseley said he was not eligible for the post of chief of staff when Gen. Malin Craig was appointed.

"It is well known that during the Hoover Administration I was in the War Department, working very closely with the Secretary of War, often with Mr. Hoover and the leaders of the Administration," Moseley said in reply to Woodring. "That association in itself eliminated me from consideration for the position as chief of staff.

"Further, when the appointment was made I did not have sufficient time to serve according to the rule, and that fact itself would have eliminated me from consideration. Gen. Malin Craig was the best choice by far . . ."

Spoke "as a Citizen"

"In retiring . . . I gave out a statement in an effort to assist in the solution of some of the serious problems that now confront us . . . as an American citizen I do not agree with many things that have been done in the name of democracy."

Gen. Moseley declared in his earlier statement that the Federal Government was suffering not only from a "lack of outstanding leadership," but also "from an indigestible mass of untried theories and ideas."

Many of the ideas can be incor-

English Screen Star Married

BENITA HUME,

Ronald Colman Weds Actress Benita Hume

Both Married Before Tim McCoy Attends Secret Honeymoon

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 30.—Bulldog Drummond got married today and added another surprise to those he has so often dished out to film fans.

At the Montecito home of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Weigand, Ronald Colman was married quietly to Benita Hume, British movie actress.

Their only attendants were Heather Thatcher, another English actress; William Hawks, motion picture agent, and Col. Tim McCoy, whose Wild West show laid an egg in Washington last spring. So secret were their plans that not even their application for a license was known to the public.

Fought in World War

Known to talkie audiences for his handsome profile, his mellow voice and his debonair manner, Ronald Colman was born February 9, 1891, in Richmond, Surrey, England. After a normal English boy's climb to manhood, he was flung into the World War at its opening as one of Kitchener's "Old Contemptibles."

He fought in the first Battle of Ypres as a member of the London Scottish regiment. Wounded at Messines Ridge, he was given clerical work and served behind the lines until the end of the war.

In 1920 he came to America, reaching New York with $37, three clean collars and two letters of introduction. Living in furnished rooms in Brooklyn, he finally got a small part in support of Robert Warwick and then with George Arliss in "The Green Goddess." Two years later, in 1922, he had his first major screen role in "The White Sister," playing opposite Lillian Gish.

Both Divorced

"Beau Geste" brought him sharply to the attention of the American movie public, and his success continued in talkies.

Married in 1920 at St. George's register office in London, he and his wife, Thelma Ray, were separated in 1924. She divorced him in August, 1934.

The new Mrs. Colman also has been married before and divorced. She is 32 and brunette. Not so well known to movie fans as her famous husband, she has made many pictures in England and has taken secondary roles in several in America. She was born in London.

Colman and his bride left after the marriage on a honeymoon motor trip as secret as the wedding. Rumors of their marriage had been current for two years, though Miss Hume was, about five years ago, rumored to be romantically attached to Jack Dunfee, a British automobile racer.

Vigilantes Quit

Liberty, N. Y., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—The Liberty Horse Thief Detecting Society disbanded today, and its 30 members divided the $315 in the treasury. Organized 30 years ago, the society decided the automobile is now here to stay.

Roosevelt's 'Snub' Angers 'Cotton Ed'

Refused Audience Roars His Protest Seeks Farmer Aid Conference Today

By Robert C. Albright.

A wrathful and unpurged Senator, "Cotton Ed" Smith, last night roared a furious protest at refusal of President Roosevelt to receive a delegation of cotton and wheat Senators.

A special committee headed by Smith had waited all afternoon for a White House appointment to present a resolution for higher cotton-wheat loans.

Word came it would be "impossible" for the President to see them. Acting Secretary of Agriculture Brown and Assistant AAA Administrator Tapp instead were assigned to the conference.

Smith was aroused by the refusal. He made an informal speech to a group of cotton farmers attending the conference, some of whom were to join in the White House talk.

"I thought we were Senators representing sovereign States, but perhaps this isn't a democracy any more," said Smith.

The South Carolinian hadn't cooled when reporters interviewed him later in his office.

"I have been here with five Presidents preceding the present one," he said. "I never was refused an audience and I never was asked what my business was before this."

5 Senators in Group

Asked if he wished to be quoted, Smith shouted his retort:

"Hell, yes, I do! Damn it, why not?"

There were five Democratic Senators on the special committee, including two recently renominated despite Administration efforts to "purge" them. These were Smith, who defeated the Roosevelt-supported Gov. Johnson in South Carolina, and George, who emerged on top in the three-way Georgia melee. Others to have made the White House call were Senators Harrison and Bilbo, of Mississippi, and Thomas, of Oklahoma.

Smith had called Senators and farmers in conference here to consider more Government aid for surplus-laden cotton and wheat farmers. They had agreed to seek a raise in the Government loan rate on cotton from 8.30 cents to 11.85 cents and a proportionate increase in wheat loans to the maximum 75 per cent of parity basis provided in the farm act.

Farmers Called

The following resolution was adopted on motion of Senator Bilbo:

"Be it resolved that it is the sense of this meeting that the tragic condition of the cotton growers of this country is such that we go on record requesting the President and Secretary of Agriculture to increase the present loans on cotton and wheat to at least 75 per cent of the parity prices of said commodities at the earliest possible moment."

Smith was authorized to appoint the sub-committee of five Senators to wait on the President. The clerk of the committee called the White House and relayed the request. The farmers gathered in the com-

Md. Youth Shoots Father, Blames 'Nightmare'

Frederick, Md., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—State's Attorney Sherman P. Bowers said tonight he would charge Curtis Houck, 26, of Woodsboro, with assault with intent to kill in the "nightmare" shooting of the youth's father.

Houck was held without bail, insisting tearfully he shot his father, Raymond, 49, a trackman for the Pennsylvania Railroad, twice while in the throes of a nightmare early this morning.

Bowers, however, said he had been told the two quarreled last night prior to the shooting.

Physicians reported the wounded man was in a critical condition tonight after an emergency operation.

Frankfort, Ky., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Ballard Rucker, jr., 9, was fatally wounded early today, police said, by a pistol bullet fired by his stepfather, George Taylor, during a nightmare.

A coroner's jury absolved the father of all blame.

Reich, Britain Will 'Never Go to War' Under Pact, Chamberlain Avers

Entry Begun at 1 A.M. March From Austria Infantry in the Van 30,000 Follow Today

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, (Saturday) Oct. 1.—The first contingent of German troops crossed the Czechoslovak frontier near Aigen, upper Austria, early today starting Reichsfuehrer Hitler's occupation of territory granted him by the four-power Munich accord.

The gray-clad German infantrymen marched over the border shortly after 1 a. m. (7 p. m. E. S. T., Friday) little more than an hour after the midnight deadline Hitler had set for his occupation.

About 600 infantrymen were in the vanguard which first stepped across the Czechoslovak frontier.

The infantry battalion advanced along several roads from Aigen to take possession of posts immediately behind the Czechoslovak frontier in southwestern Czechoslovakia.

Merely a Vanguard

It was explained this movement was regarded as merely a vanguard, reconnoitering the terrain and preparing for the main army of occupation to march in later today, taking over the first of four Sudeten districts granted Hitler by the Munich pact.

The main body of troops, some 30,000 men, assembled along the border of German Austria, was expected to follow up the vanguard shortly after 6 a. m. (12 midnight E. S. T.).

Asch, Czechoslovakia, Sept. 30 (A.P.). Four Czechoslovak soldiers and two Sudeten Germans were killed today in crossfire outside Eger in the farthest western tip of territory being ceded to Germany.

Otherwise all fighting stopped in this Sudeten region as the Free Corps prepared to march back into Czechoslovakia behind the German army of occupation.

Czechoslovakia's 'Death' Described

The crossing of the frontier of Czechoslovakia by advance guards of the German Army in fighting formation was described last night by Walter B. Kerr, correspondent of the New York Herald Tribune and The Washington Post, in a broadcast from Prague carried in the United States by the combined red and blue networks of the National Broadcasting Co.

"Grey infantrymen with rifles in their hands felt the way for armored cars, tanks and artillery," Kerr said. "Before them retreated the army of Czechoslovakia, a country in the heart of Europe, deserted by its allies, which could not fight alone against the armed might of Nazi Germany.

"This border scene in the south will be duplicated all along the German border in days to come, and the German troops will push forward until Czechoslovakia is another Liechtenstein, small and undefendable both economically and politically.

"Czechoslovakia was born a thousand years ago and reconstructed

The European Situation

LONDON—Cheering thousands greeted Prime Minister Chamberlain on his return from Munich, bringing the four powers' agreement regarding Czechoslovakia and a new pledge of Anglo-German friendship with Hitler. Four battalions of crack British guardsmen are to leave for police duty in Czechoslovakia.

PRAGUE—German troops entered Czechoslovakia at Aigen, while Czech crowds demonstrated against the falling back of their army and Premier Syrovy described acceptance of the four powers' agreement as a "choice between death and diminution of power."

WARSAW—Poland, with 1,000,000 men under arms, gave Czechoslovakia until 7 a. m. today (Saturday) E. S. T., to make a "satisfactory reply" to a demand the Teschen area of Czechoslovakia be handed over immediately to Poland.

PARIS—Premier Daladier, amid demonstrations of enthusiasm on his return from Munich, summoned Parliament to meet Tuesday to ratify the four-power Czechoslovakian pact.—Page 5.

ROME—Premier Mussolini moved to consolidate his four-power pact advantages by inviting Prime Minister Chamberlain to Rome to discuss Anglo-Italian relations. Reports from London stated Chamberlain would soon take a Mediterranean vacation cruise and the visit might take place then.

BUDAPEST—Hungary decided to present soon to Czechoslovakia a demand for unconditional surrender of all territory in which a purely Hungarian population lives and a plebiscite for other southern Czechoslovak regions adjoining this area.—Page 4.

Chamberlain And Daladier May Visit Duce

Talks Planned at Rome Briton Already Invited 'Volunteers' Are Issue

By the United Press.

Rome, Sept. 30.—Premier Mussolini, moving swiftly to consolidate the "peace gains" made in the historic four-power conference at Munich, was understood tonight to have invited British Prime Minister Chamberlain to Rome to discuss Anglo-Italian relations.

The invitation, according to unofficial but reliable sources, was tendered at Munich during the parley over the German-Czech crisis. It was not known whether Chamberlain had accepted.

The reports said Premier Daladier of France might also visit Mussolini, either at the same time as Chamberlain, or immediately afterward.

Spain Figures in Plan

Chamberlain's visit, if it materializes, was expected to coincide with the application of the Anglo-Italian agreement, which awaits only the withdrawal of Italian volunteers from Spain to be put in force.

The Anglo-Italian agreement was reached after conversations between Lord Perth, the British ambassador to Rome, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, and was made provisional upon the withdrawal of Italian troops from Generalissimo Franco's insurgent armies in Spain.

At the time, both Italy and Britain believed Franco's complete triumph was only a matter of days,

Poland Gives Czechs 'Final' Ultimatum

1,000,000 Troops Ready Noon Set as Deadline Report New Incidents

By the United Press.

Warsaw, Saturday, Oct. 1.—Poland delivered its "final" ultimatum to Czechoslovakia early today, informing Prague that unless it agreed immediately to hand over the Teschen area, Polish troops would cross the frontier and seize it.

It was reported from well-informed sources the note, handed the Czech minister almost on the hour of the previous deadline for a Czech surrender to Polish demands, set noon today (7 a. m. Saturday E. S. T.) as the final hour for a "satisfactory" reply.

The Polish note, which official quarters said was the "final demand" before an armed attack on the Czech border, was delivered shortly after the Prague government had replied to an earlier demand with what a Polish spokesman called "a maneuver for delay."

Meanwhile more than 1,000,000 Polish troops were reported under arms, ready to march.

An official government broadcast from Teschen said:

A government communique said

Adm. Pye's Son Dies in 2-Plane Crash at Sea

San Diego, Calif., Sept. 30 (A.P.).—Two Navy fliers, one of them the son of a rear admiral, were killed today when two land fighter planes from the aircraft carrier Saratoga collided in midair 15 miles south of the Coronado Islands, Navy authorities reported.

The dead were Lieut. W. S. Pye, jr., son of Rear Admiral William S. Pye, commander here of Destroyer Flotilla Q, Battle Force, and Charles Frederick Erickson, aviation cadet.

Erickson's body was recovered.

The planes were engaged in gunnery exercises when they collided and fell into the sea.

Erickson's next of kin is his mother, Mrs. O. F. Erickson, Sioux City, Iowa. Lieut. Pye is survived by his wife, Mrs. W. S. Pye, jr., Coronado, Calif.

Roosevelt 'Happy' as Lehman Says He'll Run Against Dewey

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 30.—New York State's Democrats met the Republican gubernatorial challenge of Manhattan's racket-buster, Thomas E. Dewey, today by renominating Gov. Herbert H. Lehman to head a ticket that won the praise of President Roosevelt.

Yielding to a draft by party leaders, the three-time chief executive immediately accepted the nomination for a fourth term in the President's home State. He opened his campaign on the convention floor by labeling "inexperienced" the 36-year-old district attorney he named special prosecutor in 1935.

The President, in a telegram to the convention, declaring himself "very happy" as Lehman was renamed on a platform indorsing the New Deal, lauded other candidates on the slate nominated by acclamation. They included:

United States Senator (six years)—Senator Wagner, author of the national labor relations act.

Representatives-at-Large — Mrs. Caroline O'Day, of Rye, and Matthew J. Merritt, of Flushing, L. I.

Lieutenant Governor — Supreme Court Justice Charles Poletti, of New York City.

Attorney General—John J. Bennett, jr., of Brooklyn, former State commander of the American Legion.

Comptroller—Morris S. Tremaine, of Buffalo.

Roosevelt's telegram was sent shortly after Gov. Lehman, whom he once termed "my good right arm," but who subsequently op-

London Gives Prime Minister Great Ovation It's 'Peace With Honor,' He Tells Throngs Added Anglo-German Treaty Signed Troops to Be Sent Abroad to Police Area

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, (Saturday) Oct. 1.—Prime Minister Chamberlain returned from Munich yesterday—bringing home what he described as "peace with honor"—and hundreds of thousands turned out to give him a grateful welcome in stirring street scenes, the like of which have not been seen in London since Armistice Day, 1918.

Chamberlain came back from a bloodless two-day war fought out over tea and beer and sandwiches by the "big four" who have taken over direction of European affairs from the League of Nations—Adolf Hitler, Benito Mussolini, Edouard Daladier and Chamberlain himself.

Germany won the diplomatic war in that she is permitted to march into Bohemia today to dispossess the Czechs, but all Europe and the world were victors to the extent that there has been averted, at the eleventh hour, a repetition of the World War of 1914-'18, in which over 8,000,000 were killed.

British Troops to Police Czechs

[It was learned reliably last night that six battalions of British troops, about 5,000 men, would be sent to Czechoslovakia soon to assist in police duties, carrying out the partition decreed by the four-power Munich agreement, the Associated Press said.

[It was considered likely that they would sail in the next few days.

[The detachment probably will consist of four battalions of Britain's famed Guards regiment and two battalions from regiments of the line.

[An international force was provided in the Munich accord to police areas, not immediately ceded to Germany, where plebiscites will determine their ultimate nationality.]

Honor Guards to Be Sent

[Four battalions will be selected from five regiments of footguards which supply sentries and guards of honor for King George at Buckingham Palace and other royal establishments, including Windsor Castle.

[These five regiments are the Grenadier Guards, Coldstream Guards, Scots Guards, Irish Guards and Welsh Guards.

[Details of how the troops would be sent to Czechoslovakia to help keep order under the Munich accord were not disclosed.—Editor's Note.]

Standing on the balcony of his home at 10 Downing street last night, Chamberlain told the cheering thousands below him:

"My good friends, this is the second time in our history that there has come back from Germany to Downing street peace with honor. I believe it is peace for our time."

Anglo-German Pact Also Signed

Early yesterday morning Chamberlain and the rest of the "big four had signed a peace treaty which authorized Hitler to take over the Sudetenland by gradual stages, beginning tomorrow.

Not satisfied with this alone, Chamberlain and Hitler got together again after breakfast and signed an Anglo-German pact of friendship, whereby the two nations resolved never to go to war against each other, and to settle all disputes by consultation and negotiation.

No one need be surprised if Chamberlain followed this up by arranging another conference in the near future in which Britain would attempt to appease Hitler's hunger for a colonial empire by offering him an African colony or two.

France may also be called upon to make a colonial contribution to the Chamberlain scheme for a general settlement of the old feuds which have prevented the reconciliation of Hitler's Germany with Britain and France.

Reads Text of Document

When his American Lockheed airliner brought him back to English soil at Heston yesterday afternoon, Chamberlain received his first hearty welcome. He responded by reading for the benefit of the newsreels and television apparatus the text of the peace pact to which he and Hitler had affixed their signatures. He read:

"We, the German Fuehrer and Chancellor and the British Prime Minister, have had a further meeting today and are agreed in recognizing that the question of Anglo-German relations is of the first importance for the two countries and for Europe.

"We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German naval agreement as symbolic of the desire of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again.

"We are resolved that the method of consultation shall be the method adopted to deal with any other question that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove possible sources of difference and thus to contribute to the assurance of peace in Europe."

May Mean Longtime Peace

News of this monumental pact—which may mean peace for generations, or may unfortunately turn out to be just another "scrap of paper"—had preceded the prime minister to his next stop, Buckingham Palace and Downing street.

In spite of drenching rain, thousands and thousands of men, women and children had packed the pavements around Buckingham Palace long before the minister drove up, accompanied by his wife.

Across St. James's Park, in which squads of men were still digging bombproof shelters and trenches, the bells of Westminster Abbey could be heard pealing joyously. Bugles shrilling from the Wellington Barracks in Birdcage Walk—where stood nine huge tanks, not to mention more trenches and barracks windows filled with sandbags—reminded the crowd of the martial preparations in which the Londoners have been engaged until the Munich four-power agreement and the subsequent Anglo-German pact brought peace.

When Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain drove up the crowds swept the police cordon aside and surrounded the car. Such was the press of people that the car came to a standstill, while the Chamberlains smiled appreciation

Board Opens Hearings on Railway Wages

Roads Urge Reduction
Warn of Business Loss
Unions See 'Nose-Dive'

Railroad arguments for a 15 per cent pay cut yesterday clashed with union attacks on present wage scales, as the President's emergency fact-finding board grappled with the threat of a general rail strike.

Opening the case for the roads, J. Carter Fort, chief counsel for the carriers, warned that unless the rails are able to meet new competition, their business will be lost and there will be "less and less employment opportunity."

"There will be further abandonment of mileage, fewer trains, more closed stations," said Fort. "The interest of the men lies in the preservation of their industry."

Unions Attack Cut

Charles M. Hay, representing 18 railroad unions, replied that a pay cut would delay and jeopardize any program for establishment of a sound transportation policy.

He said the effect would be "to stop the upward trend of business and send business into another nose-dive just as deflationary movements have done in previous periods."

Quietly weighing conflicting contentions was the special board named by the President Tuesday, headed by Justice Walter P Stacy, of the North Carolina Supreme Court. Stacy together with Prof. Harry A. Millis, of the University of Chicago, and Dean James M. Landis, of the Harvard Law School, must report their findings by October 27.

Strike Possible Dec. 1

A rail strike was voted for October 1 when railroads served notice of a pay cut on that day, but provisions of the railway labor act forestall possibility of a strike before December 1. After the fact-finding board reports, the status quo must continue in effect for another 30 days while a settlement is sought.

Justice Stacy at yesterday's initial hearings asked that evidence and arguments be completed by October 17.

The railroads are contending rail wages now are unreasonably high, averaging $1,785 a year. Union spokesmen have challenged this figure and argue the average works out to only $1,115 a year. The roads take issue with the union figure, contending it includes "casual workers" who are not "railroad men" and 110,000 who earn less than $10 a year for odd jobs.

Fort Assails Union

In opening arguments, Fort charged "the labor organizations and they alone are responsible for the present emergency." Pointing out that the roads agreed to voluntary arbitration under the mediation act, he charged the unions refused to arbitrate and "prejudged the case in their own favor before there was any opportunity to present facts and figures."

Fort said the railroad industry "is now in a critical and desperate condition, with business running about 20 per cent lower than last year" while employes still on the pay rolls "are receiving the most liberal wages in history."

Fort argued the cut would aid in restoring roads to financial health, adding:

"When a key industry of this kind is facing disaster it cannot aid national recovery."

Cites Hourly Earnings

Speaking for the unions, Hay replied that railroad average hourly earnings of 72.1 cents compare unfavorably with earnings in the industries from which railroads purchase supplies. He said earnings range from 75.2 to 97.5 cents an hour in the coal, steel, rubber, crude oil and locomotive industries.

While the average hourly earnings of rail workers have gone up 1.4 per cent since 1920, Hay said the average of workers in outside industries has increased 18 per cent in the manufacturing industry, 33.7 per cent in the automobile industry and 16.2 per cent to 32.5 per cent in other industries. He argued that railroad labor is a "distinct class" with above-average qualities of mind and character.

The rail union counsel said a railroad wage cut "would be the signal for a like movement in other industries."

"Nothing to Arbitrate"

He contended the cut would injure good will between employes and employers and "destroy" the possibility of working out an adequate national transportation program. He said many lines are carrying "impossible fixed charges" and said many should seek voluntary reorganization under Federal bankruptcy laws instead of reducing wages.

Questioned by Justice Stacy on why the unions refused voluntary arbitration, Hay said:

"We did not figure we had anything to arbitrate."

Fort earlier argued that railroads in many respects are in a worse condition than in 1932 and 1933, when employes took a voluntary 10 per cent wage cut.

PWA Fund Asked To Eliminate River Pollution

Public Works officials announced yesterday the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission had applied for a $528,661 loan and grant to eliminate pollution in the Anacostia River and its tributaries.

The application was made through a letter sent the PWA offices Thursday by T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the commission. Yesterday was the legal deadline for applications for PWA loans.

It was understood the sanitary commission proposes to use the funds to construct a system of sewers connecting with the District system for treatment at the sewage disposal plant at Blue Plains.

Inquiry Proposed Into 'Hunger-Riot' Forecast
Davis Cites Earle Remark to Dies

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30.—Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, disclosed today he had proposed a Congressional investigation of a statement in which he said Gov. Earle declared "hunger riots" would break out within six months if the Republicans win the general State election.

SEN. DAVIS.

In a letter to Representative Dies, chairman of the committee investigating un-American activities, Davis wrote:

"If the Communists propose to stage hunger-riots in Pennsylvania your committee would want to know of their plans as soon as possible. Gov. Earle's association with the Communists in view of their indorsement of his candidacy may enable him to give some additional advance information along these lines."

Beaver Falls, Pa., Sept. 30.—Charles Alvin Jones, Democratic candidate for Governor, accuses Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, his Republican opponent, of "peddling" legal opinions "in bulk from street corner to street corner."

Jones said in an address here that Judge James had referred to the Earle administration's legislative program as "the greatest mass of legal folly I ever saw" and continued:

"We have here the spectacle of a member of a high tribunal publicly, from the political stump, condemning laws wholesale. The sight is neither pleasant nor edifying to all who hold our courts in high esteem."

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said yesterday that voters had assured "an independent Congress" by renominating Democratic Senators whose defeat President Roosevelt had asked.

The 70-year-old South Carolina Democrat, back in the Capital for the first time since his State's primary, served notice that Administration leaders "will have to reckon with Jeffersonian Democrats" in the new Congress.

Smith said he did not expect Senate Democrats to try and unseat Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky as majority leader.

"But Barkley will have to reckon with this new element," Smith said.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 29.—W. Warren Barbour, seeking return to the United States Senate as the New Jersey Republican candidate for Gov. Moore's unexpired term, flung down the gauntlet tonight to President Roosevelt.

Addressing a dinner rally of more than 300 party leaders, the former Senator said:

Of his opponent, William H. J. Ely, New Deal supporter, Barbour declared:

"I am convinced the people of New Jersey want a representative of New Jersey in Washington, and not a representative of Washington in New Jersey."

New York, Sept. 30.—Benjamin V. Cohen, Government lawyer and confidential adviser of President Roosevelt, returned last night on the S. S. Manhattan from what he described as a two-week "vacation" in Europe. He was met down the bay by his close friend and coworker in the New Deal Administration, Thomas Corcoran.

Veteran ship newsmen and customs agents said they could not recall any arrival of celebrity, diplomat or incognito royalty protected by more elaborate precautions for secrecy.

Pursers, stewards and other members of the ship's crew denied Cohen was on board. Reporters found him on the promenade deck. One asked him:

"As a voter and citizen, do you favor a third term for President Roosevelt?"

"I'm not in politics," Cohen said.

"A lot of people think you are," an interviewer said.

Tydings Moves To Aid Dealers In Sea Food

Rehabilitation Aim
To Ask $275,000
Hits at Pollution

Rehabilitation of the seafood industry of the Chesapeake Bay was set as one of the goals of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday as he prepared to campaign for re-election.

Addressing a communication to the director of the budget, Senator Tydings outlined a program of Federal expenditure of $275,000 for the next fiscal year and pointed out that it would benefit the seafood industry of the Nation as well as that of Maryland.

One of the proposals is to construct a laboratory for the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries at the University of Maryland at a cost of $100,000. He also asked $50,000 for additional personnel in the bureau to conduct technical studies and $125,000 for a promotion campaign to induce the Nation to consume more fish.

He pointed out to the budget director that 200,000 fishermen and 300,000 persons in allied industries are dependent on the seafood industry for a living. The annual catch of seafood, he said, amounts to 5,000,000,000 pounds, from which fishermen get $93,000,000 and manufacturers $236,000,000.

Yet this country is far below other nations in the amount of seafood consumed per capita, and all seafoods are declining.

"In order to effect an annual increase rather than a decrease in our fish supply," he said, "we must build new hatcheries and employ other means to augment the supply of seafood of all kinds."

Senator Tydings said he also is interested in eliminating pollution of streams, bays, and rivers so that fish may have a chance to spawn.

"I am preparing legislation of a fact-finding nature to look into this subject," he said, "and hope from this examination ways and means can be found to protect the spawning grounds and the seafood waters."

Security Board Lists 12 Flaws In Ohio Relief

Charges Inefficiency
Blames Governor
'Politics' Cited

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board cited 12 instances of alleged inefficiency yesterday in the administration of Ohio's old age assistance and intimated these would have to be corrected if Federal contributions were to continue.

The board said in a formal statement:

"There is ample time before the next (monthly) checks are sent out to Ohio's needy aged for the chief of the Ohio division of aid for the aged to make the necessary improvements in administration as set forth in the findings of the board and as required by both the social security act and the Ohio law."

The board said the Federal share of September pensions was sent to Ohio in a quarterly payment in June and this money was included in checks which pensioners received in the last few days.

Under the social security law, the Federal Government pays half the pensions, up to a total of $30 a month. The State supplies the other half.

The board said it found these instances of "noncompliance as to efficient administration:"

Repeated interference by the Governor with orderly procedures, violation of Civil Service laws and rules, serious and excessive delays in the handling of applications for assistance, failure to establish adequate basic policies with respect to certain phases of administration, blanket increases in awards tending to nullify the granting of assistance on the basis of need, discrimination in handling complaints, irregularities in the accounting system, and various lesser items.

Burke Asks Roosevelt Call Trade Parley

Senator Ends Tour
War Causes Stressed
Currency Called 'Root'

Warmly commending the President's position in the European crisis, Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, proposed yesterday that Mr. Roosevelt follow up his peace pleas with a call for an international economic conference.

Back from a tour of Europe, Burke said economic conditions, rather than political considerations, "are the most fruitful cause of war in Europe today."

"President Roosevelt is in an ideal position to suggest to the leading countries that a conference be held to improve the relations of various nations in economic matters," Burke said.

"High Regard" Stressed

He said he thought the suggestion would be favorably received, "because of the high regard I found for him in Great Britain, France and even in Germany."

"The prospect of immediate war is lessened by the Munich agreement," he said, "but there are underlying economic factors that could bring one.

"The currency question is the root of much trouble, and an international conference could do much to solve it. Such a conference might also serve as a medium for Secretary of State Hull to advocate his reciprocal trade theories and for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to develop means of moving farm surpluses into foreign markets."

Praises Sudeten Settlement

Burke said he had no plans to present a formal proposal to the President. The Nebraskan, who has battled the Administration on the court, reorganization and labor relations issues, said he had only "highest commendation" for the President in his international course.

He said it was wise to cede Sudeten areas to Germany as the present boundary "was a mistake in the first place" and "there could have been no peace in Europe until the problem was settled."

Burke, who studied labor conditions in England, France, Germany, Holland and Italy, said he is "more convinced then ever that the Wagner labor relations act must be substantially revised."

"We should separate the judicial functions of the Labor Relations Board from its investigating and prosecuting functions," he said. "There is merit in continuing the board as an investigating agency, but it should not have the dual functions of prosecutor and judge."

Cites British Policy

He said the British system probably could not be applied here, but in England he found employes did not want the government to interfere, and "the employers generally are more willing to deal with labor on a voluntary basis."

"We could profit from their idea of voluntary collective agreements," he said. "They feel it would ruin matters if they had statutes compelling employers to deal with workers. The attitude of American employers in not wanting to bargain with labor could be overcome perhaps, if certain labor leaders were less arbitrary in their attitudes."

Burke predicted the Government reorganization bill would not pass the Senate again in the form it last went to the House, and commented that seven Senators who voted for the Wheeler amendment modifying the bill have been defeated. He said the President should follow the proposal of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and send specific reorganization proposals to Congress, rather than ask power for himself to reorganize.

Monopoly Inquiry MayWait onVoting

By the Associated Press.

Some members of the Government monopoly investigating committee said yesterday an informal agreement had been reached to delay open hearings until after the November general election. The hearings originally were scheduled to start next month.

One member, who asked that his name not be used, said the delay could be considered as an additional assurance to business that the investigators did not intend to make political capital of their findings.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, said he understood the material being assembled by the six Government agencies participatnig in the survey would not be ready for six weeks or two months.

Letts Is Better After Operation

Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District court was "coming along nicely" last night at Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, where a cataract was removed from his right eye.

The 63-year-old Justice will be unable to open the October term of court Tuesday but is expected to return to the bench in two weeks.

How Women in Their 40's Can Attract Men
Here's good advice for a woman during her change (usually from 38 to 52), who fears she'll lose her appeal to men, who worries about hot flashes, loss of pep, dizzy spells, upset nerves and moody spells.
Just get more fresh air, 8 hrs. sleep and if you need a reliable "WOMAN'S" tonic take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made especially for women. It helps Nature build up physical resistance, thus helps give more vivacity to enjoy life and assist calming jittery nerves and those disturbing symptoms that often accompany change of life.
Pinkham's is WELL WORTH trying.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

DOWN FROM Alaska has come Stanley Young, chief of the Biological Survey's Division of Predator and Rodent Control, with an amazing tale. He discovered, in Petersburg, Alaska, a fabulous citizen who has invented a bit that will bore a square hole! And bore it in the hardest metal. Even the Patent Office knows nothing of the discovery; for the inventor—as you shall see—is a fabulous man who has no time for cornering the market, much less the market on square holes.

The inventor, Young related, is Earl Ohmer, now acting chief of the Alaska Game Commission. In private affairs, Ohmer is a shrimp packer. Now, in the older times, he had a force of men to pick the shrimps' tails by hand; but this was slow, and Ohmer, with native genius, invented a shrimp tail picking machine. He immediately became disturbed.

SUCH A machine would join other machines in throwing men out of work, Ohmer reasoned. He put the machine aside; and competition in the shrimp packing business became so great that he was compelled to utilize his invention in order to stay at the old stand. Soon 12 machines were picking the tails from shrimp. Things were good.

But, occasionally, a machine would break down; and while fixing one Ohmer discovered the secret of a drill that would bore a square hole. Young saw it operate, and brought to Washington an exhibit of the work. And also an idea came with it. He may organize a companion group to the famous Order of Yellow Dogs, which flourishes in agriculture, and name it "The Square Holers." The insignia would be a square, caught in a circle, indicating square pegs in round holes, or something else significant.

YOUNG, A fabulous fellow himself, told of the inventor, a dark complexioned man under a tremendous Stetson; a gold nugget chain with a bear tooth and claw dangles from his middle. He wears riding breeches and leggings, and has a playful habit, expressed in moments of pique, of firing a couple of rounds from his six-shooter while pictures on the wall jig-dance off the bullets.

And then Young told of his own long trip, from which he has just returned. And, at the moment, he had just returned from the Museum of Natural History, where he donated the skull of a squirrel that he found 135 feet, in a strata of ice, below the Alaskan earth.

His office is a curiosity, a museum in itself. There is a large showcase holding the skulls of wolves and other animals and a beautiful skin of a mountain lion of the particular species that was named for Mr. Young.

Important Words:

"YOU HAVE already been advised of my intention with respect to hours of labor; that is, that we will develop with the Bureau of the Budget the merit of establishing an 8-hour day and will submit our estimated additional costs of this proposal at the time our regular 1940 appropriation estimates are being presented."—Frank T. Hines, Veterans Administrator.

"There will be developed a policy and a program for the orderly ascertainment and rapid transfer of employes fitted and needed for particular tasks in particular places at particular times."—Commissioner Ordway.

"There must be ascertained and introduced universally an effective method of hearing grievances of employes and reaching a swift satisfactory solution of their problems."—Commissioner Ordway again.

There are other important words going the rounds. It is simply to remind that all effort should be made to speed the day when the important projects are put in effect.

Concerning the squabble in the Labor Department over moving 72 Immigration employes from the Beautiful Building to the structure on 14th Street, whereby an important group of workers would be separated from the core, or central point of their field of work, one girl hit the nail on the head:

"The trouble is the same here as everywhere else in the Government—there is no single responsible and determining head for anything. An issue arises and is kicked all over the place like a football, while one chief passes the buck to another. It there were some one person with authority and courage to make a decision and stick to it, messes like this wouldnt' and couldn't arise."

TVA Would Quash Dr. Morgan's Suit

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Authority filed a motion in U. S. District Court here today seeking dismissal of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan's suit challenging the power of President Roosevelt in removing him last March 22 as chairman-director of TVA.

The authority declared Dr. Morgan failed to "state a claim upon which relief can be granted" and asserted the President acted within his rights in ousting Dr. Morgan for "contumacy."

Dr. Morgan, seeking to retain his office and win back salary of more than $4,000, filed suit July 6. He refused to recognize the removal order and asked an injunction to restrain TVA Directors David E. Lilienthal and H. A. Morgan from "interfering" with Morgan's duties as "chairman-director."

Gale Lashes Long Island, Heads North

Nantucket Is Next
No Loss of Life
Shipping Warned

The eastern end of Long Island's seacoast, devastated by last week's hurricane, was lashed yesterday by a 40-mile-an-hour gale but suffered little property damage and no reported loss of life.

The storm, which originated in eastern North Carolina, swirled northward in the wake of a drenching rain, piling up unusually high tides on the New Jersey Coast and Long Island before howling off toward Nantucket, Mass.

Long Island, Coast Guards said, probably felt only the outer wing. Seas raced up the beach of desolate Fire Island, causing some apprehension, but Capt. William M. Wolff of the Fourth Supervisory District said the Weather Bureau had assured him the winds shortly would shift to the northwest, flattening out the waves.

Freighter Safe

Earlier in the day the Coast Guard received word the 5,500-ton freighter City of Atlanta, bound from Boston to Savannah, was in distress with disabled engines off Cape Hatteras. Later, however, the Coast Guard cutter Modoc received assurances by wireless that the ship, carrying a crew of 54, was in no danger and was proceeding to Savannah.

Storm warnings were posted along the coast from the Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me., as the storm raced northward. Rain fell in Maryland and in the Philadelphia area, over New Jersey and metropolitan New York, but the fall was light.

Wilmington, N. C., fared worse. An 18-hour rainfall there left a large part of the city flooded. The official rainfall measurement was 9.4 inches.

Maryland Escapes

Connecticut and Boston also had rain and small craft along the coast sought shelter.

The Eastern Shore of Maryland which felt the fringes of a tropical storm last week, for the second time yesterday escaped comparatively unscathed from the tornado which swept Charleston, S. C.

The storm yesterday passed within 100 miles of the shore but the high wind and rain brought watermen to port, and flooded roads.

Storm signals were up for all navigation on Chesapeake Bay and at Ocean City the Coast Guard braved huge waves to tow in a fishing schooner with three men aboard who hoisted distress signals. Other fishing vessels scurried to port and stayed there.

Charleston Digs Out

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 30 (AP).—This historic city by the sea dug out today from the wreckage strewn by a raging tornado, and counted the storm's toll at 28 dead, 200 injured, some seriously, and property damage estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Tonight soldiers, marines and policemen worked to keep order in the stricken city's darkened streets. Although electric power service was restored in some sections, there were no street lights.

Col. Harry O. Withington, of the 118th Infantry, South Carolina National Guard, in charge of the State and Federal troops here, said there had been no looting in the wrecked areas.

Fifteen of the known dead were white persons, and 11 were colored.

The Charleston Chapter of the American Red Cross took charge of relief work, and provisions were quickly made for housing, clothing and feeding 1,100 persons. Charity and relief organizations offered every available facility.

Cots and beds were placed in the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Murray Vocational School, County Agricultural building, and the National Guard armories for the homeless. Emergency and Red Cross relief stations were established in the stricken areas.

An eye-witness account of death and destruction in the Charleston (S. C.) tornado came yesterday from Richard W. Janney, an inspector in the Federal Alcohol Control Administration here.

Janney, conducting an inspection trip through the South, had just driven his car into a Charleston filling station when the storm struck, the Associated Press reported.

"I missed death by inches," said Janney, describing how he ran for cover as flying debris smashed against his car.

Hardly had he stopped beside a gasoline pump, Janney reported, when he heard an "eerie noise that sounded like a fast express train roaring nearer."

"I looked up toward the sky," he said, "and there was a big, black cloud. I could see big pieces of sheet iron and timber flying through the air. What happened next didn't last over 3 seconds, I believe, but it was awful while it lasted.

"I started to duck under a shed," Janney continued, "but I changed my mind and ran into the filling station office. The shed crumpled as if it were made of matches.

"A brick building," Janney related, "exploded over a parked automobile. It was necessary to dig the driver out."

R. I. Democrats Pick Quinn and Other Incumbents

Providence, R. I., Sept. 30 (AP).—Gov. Robert E. Quinn and all other ranking officeholders of the Democratic Party in Rhode Island, except Representative John M. O'Connell, of Westerly, today were renominated at the State Democratic convention here.

O'Connell, who had announced his retirement, was replaced on the ballot by State Senator Edward J. Penelon, jr., of Westerly, in the Second Congressional District.

Gov. Quinn will be opposed for election by William H. Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt, son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt who was killed when the Lusitania was torpedoed in 1915, was nominated unanimously by the Republican convention yesterday.

Special Jury Slated to Hear A.M.A. Case

May Sit October 16
Antitrust Proceedings
Justice Dept. Silent

Anti-trust proceedings against the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society last night were scheduled for hearing by a special grand jury about the middle of October.

District Attorney David A. Pine said he understood the Department of Justice was planning an inquiry but that he had not been requested to call for a special grand jury. Announcement of proceedings, he added, normally would be made by the department.

The law requires that the district attorney certify to the chief justice of District Court that there is a need for a special grand jury.

The Department of Justice yesterday would not discuss its plans, but it was learned that the present intention is to call for a special jury to sit October 16 or 17. A special jury will be asked because the department is unwilling to add the burden to the regular routine of criminal cases.

Roosevelt Finds PWA Operating Fast, Successfully

By the Associated Press.

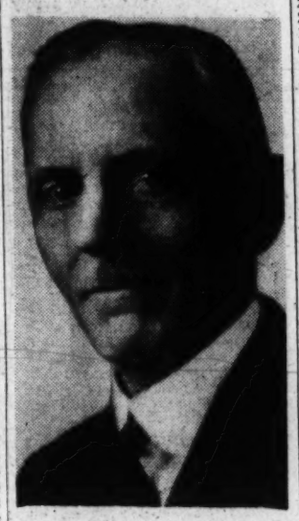
President Roosevelt reported yesterday that the $2,000,000,000 PWA program "Is now operating successfully on a fast time table and the recovery effects of the program are already being registered."

The deadline for filing PWA applications was midnight.

Mr. Roosevelt said that in the 101 days since he signed the 1938 PWA act June 21, communities all over the country had filed almost 10,000 applications for PWA projects. He added that more than 1,000 projects already were under construction "with dirt flying and walls rising." WPA Administrator Ickes estimated that PWA in the last 100 days had approved projects to cost $1,500,000,000.

Dr. Havenner, Civic Leader, Retires After 50-Year Service

Term Was Extended
U. S. Worker Is 72
Wrote U. S. Reports



DR. GEORGE HAVENNER.

Dr. George C. Havenner, liaison officer of Government Printing Office and District civic leader, retired yesterday after 50 years of Federal service. The former president of the Federation of Citizens Association had observed his seventy-second birthday last week.

A graduate of Howard University Medical School, Dr. Havenner began his Government career in 1887 as a typist in the Government Printing Office. For 13 years he served in various posts here, until in 1903 he resigned to take charge of publication work for the old Bureau of Statistics. Two years later he became chief of the Publication Division, Department of Commerce and Labor, and served 10 years.

On creation of Department of Labor in 1913, Dr. Havenner became its chief clerk. Six years later he was appointed investigator in the Bureau of Efficiency, and in 1933 was named liaison officer in the Government Printing Office. Twice President Roosevelt extended his term of service by executive order.

Wrote U. S. Reports

In 1909 Dr. Havenner investigated the Government Printing Office for President Theodore Roosevelt. He also wrote the Government's reports on Foreign Trade Promotion Work (1920) and Statistical Work of the United States Government (1922).

Long prominent in civic activities here, Dr. Havenner organized the Anacostia Citizens Association in 1895, and was active in obtaining many improvements in that section of the city. He was elected three times to the first advisory council to the District Commissioners, and headed the federation four times.

Dr. Havenner has served on many Presidential inauguration and ball committees. He is a member of the Public Library board of trustees, Forest Hills Citizens Association, Oldest Inhabitants, Citizens joint committee on fiscal relation between District and Federal Government, and Washington Club of Printing House Craftsmen.

In 1933 he was made Chief Howling Bear of the Kiowa tribe; he is an honorary member of Anacostia, Congress Heights, Washington Highlands, Hillcrest Citizens Associations, and Lodges 149 and 189 of American Federation of Government Employes. He resides at 2912 Albemarle street northwest.

Ralph L. Harding Resigns

Ralph L. Harding, chief of the Division of Metals and Minerals, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has resigned his position to rejoin the firm of architects and engineers he left to enter the Bureau in 1934.

He was tendered a farewell luncheon yesterday by fellow employes. South Trimble, jr., Commerce Department solicitor, and Guerra Everett, chief, Division of Commerce Laws, were the speakers. The parting token was an electric desk clock.

Two retirements occurred yesterday in the National Capital Parks Service. Patrick Dowd, employed there for 48 years and seven months, retired with the grade of chief plumber. He entered the service as a water boy. A native of New York City, he intends spending his retirement at 732 Hamilton street northwest.

John H. Inzer was retired as a general mechanic after 38 years' service. A native of Herndon, Va., he lives at 2460 First street, Capitol Heights, Md. He plans to live in California. Inzer and Dowd were presented with smoking sets by members of the National Capital Parks Club.

Numbers Row Leads to Killing; Suspect Held

His efforts to halt an argument betwen two alleged numbers runners resulted yesterday in the death of James Lloyd, 26, colored, of 915 Fourteenth street northwest.

Police arrested Benjamin Jordan, alias Pop Doodle, 28, colored, of 1407 W street northwest, and held him for the coroner's jury in connection with the killing.

According to Lust George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, Jordan was arguing on 1900 block Fourteenth street northwest with Thurman McCann, 31, colored, of 1341 T street northwest, about a numbers client. Lloyd stepped in and stopped the argument and the three went into a poolroom together. Here Jordan seized a billiard cue, Darnell said, and struck Lloyd over the head. Lloyd died a few hours later at Garfield Hospital.

Lloyd, a valet at a downtown hotel, while in a semi-coma begged police to let him go back to the hotel "because I have to press Jim Farley's trousers."

Red Cross Aid Sent Charleston Storm Victims

1,000 Families Hit
Rehabiliation Begun
Relief Fund Grows

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, said yesterday that approximately 1,000 families had suffered losses in the tornado that killed 27 persons in Charleston, S. C., Thursday.

Meanwhile, contributions to the Red Cross fund for hurricane relief in New England and New York reached a total of $335,443, Davis announced. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was listed as having sent in a "generous check," but the amount was not given.

The Red Cross, Davis said, is administering nursing care for the Charleston injured and will assume the task of rehabilitation for those whose homes were destroyed.

In a telephone conversation with Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chairman of the Charleston chapter of the Red Cross, Mr. Davis was informed that all the needs of the tornado victims were being met.

Red Cross chapters in South Carolina and a number of Southern cities have been asked to raise a relief fund to care for sufferers. A medical problem is developing in the care of the injured, Mr. Davis said.

Dr. William DeKleine, medical adviser of the Red Cross, and Miss Anna Gring, Red Cross nursing supervisor, arrived in Charleston yesterday to check on injury cases and to plan follow-up care.

Gen. Summerall estimated that 200 homes were damaged. Of the 27 killed, he said, 12 were white and 15 colored. Hospitals reported 37 still under care, 59 discharged after treatment and several hundred given first aid.

E. P. Grice, Works Progress Administration field representative in South Carolina, reported to Aubrey Williams, Assisant Works Progress Administrator, that more than 1,000 WPA workers were engaged in emergency rehabilitation work in Charleston.

7,107 New Memberships

New memberships in the Red Cross mounted to 7,107 yesterday, with the utilities division reporting more than 1,000, Edgar Morris, roll call chairman, announced last night.

Activities of the Red Cross, and the current roll call, were dramatized last night at Loew's Capitol Theater. The Chester Hale girls presented a tableaux showing Red Cross posters.

An exhibit showing the work of the Red Cross in handling emergency relief in disaster areas was set up in the theater lobby.

Nearby a roll-call booth was opened by Miss Martha Talley and Miss Elizabeth Ralston. They enrolled as their first volunteers Armando Villareal and Eduard Yanez, captains of the Mexican and Chilean teams here for the Inter-American Horse Show.

C. of C. Leader Calls for End of Deficit Spending

By the Associated Press.

Fred H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., chairman of the Federal finance committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, appealed to the next Congress yesterday to stop deficit spending.

He issued a formal statement saying also that provision should be made for progressive reduction of the Federal debt, that spending primarily to "stimulate business" should be stopped, and that provision should be made for auditing by the Comptroller General of all Federal expenditures.

Clausen added:

"The Federal Government should announce determination to place progressively larger responsibility upon State and local governments for expenditures in behalf of relief . . . Federal public works as a means of providing unemployment relief should be abandoned as a policy."

Street Car Breaks Outstretched Arm Of Traffic Officer

Add to the list of traffic victims the name of Traffic Policeman John J. Daly, 32.

While directing traffic at Thirty-first and M streets northwest yesterday, Private Daly extended his arm in semaphore fashion. At that moment, a Capital Transit street car struck Daly's arm and broke it below the elbow.

Pipe Line Sought 1,500 Miles Long

The Federal Power Commission yesterday disclosed that Public Service Gas Co., a Montana corporation, had applied for authorization of a 1,500-mile natural gas pipe line, estimated to cost $49,402,000.

This is the second application to be filed in ten days for construction of a gas pipe line to serve industrial projects in the Mesaba iron range where there are large deposits of low-grade ore. The Kansas Pipe Line & Gas Co. now has a petition before the F. P. C. to construct a gas line from Kansas to the Mesaba range.

Roosevelt 'Happy' as Lehman Says He'll Run Against Dewey

New York

President Lauds Wagner

"I am made very happy by the willingness of Gov. Lehman to accept renomination," the President said. "I am certain that the people of your State will continue to approve the forward-looking, business-like and clean government he has maintained."

At the same time, the President lauded Senator Wagner, one of his most ardent supporters, for his "services to humaninity" which, he said, "make our whole State proud of him."

Lehman, who in accepting renomination turned from an expressed preference for the short term United States Senate nomination, referred to District Attorney Dewey's "racket busting" activities, and asserted:

In spite of press reports, I did not believe that Mr. Dewey would abandon, almost before it started, that important work for which he was chosen by the people less than a year ago, and for which he accepted an obligation to the people."

Dewey to Keep Job Now

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey termed the Republican platform a "splendid liberal document" today, and said he approached the campaign "with enthusiasm and eagerness to do a big job."

"It is interesting," he said, "that the Democratic bosses should again so desperately implore Gov. Lehman to run again for an office from which he has twice stated his wish to retire.

"The issues in this campaign are larger and more important than the personality of any candidate."

Dewey said he intended to retain his office as district attorney—to which he was elected last year—during the guberhatorial campaign, retiring December 31 if elected to the governorship.

He indicated he proposed personally to prosecute Tammany District Leader James J. Hines, whose retrial on policy-racket conspiracy charges is set to begin November 14, six days after the election.

His campaign for the governorship, he asserted, would not hamper the work of his present office.

Selection of a "blue ribbon" jury panel for the Hines' trial got under way during the day.

Admiral Transferred

Two Army Air Corps officers were designated brigadier generals yesterday as the Navy Department announced that Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend, now on duty here with the general board of the Navy, will relieve Rear Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius November 15 as commandant of the Fourth Naval District and the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Admiral Cluverius is retiring from active service.

Col. Walter H. Frank has been ordered to command of the eighteenth wing of the General Headquarters Air Force in the Hawaiian Islands with the rank of brigadier general. He will succeed Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount, who recently completed his tour of duty in the islands.

The assistant commandant of the Air Corps Tactical School, Col. Herbert A. Dargue, also was named a brigadier general and placed in command of the Nineteenth Wing of the G. H. Q. Air Force in the Panama Canal Zone, where he will succeed Brig. Gen. George H. Brett.

Admiral Townsend, who holds both the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Navy Cross, was in charge of the Ship Movement's Division of the Navy Department from 1933 unitl 1936 and then served as commander of Cruiser Division Two, Battle Force, United States Fleet. He was in command of the cruiser detachment which visited Australia and Singapore early this year.

A native of Missouri, he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1902 and was on duty at the American Naval Air Station in Ireland during the World War.

Col. Frank, who graduated from the Army War College in 1931, was assigned to the General Headquarters Air Force, Langley Field, Va., last February. From 1931 until 1934 he was on duty here in the office of the chief of the Air Corps and then served at Mitchel Field, N. Y., for four years.

Shortly after the Armistice, Col. Frank was on duty here as a member of the Air Service Advisory Board and also has been executive in the office of the chief of the Air Service.

A native of New York, Col. Dargue served overseas during the World War as an observer of aerial training and activities on the western front.

Upon his return to the United States he became active assistant to the chief of the training section in the office of the director of Military Aeronautics.

He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; the Army War College here and the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

'Roosevelt Needs Murphy,' Says Ickes

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 30 (AP).—Secretary Ickes told the Michigan Democratic convention here tonight that "Franklin D. Roosevelt needs Frank Murphy once more as Governor of Michigan." Ickes said he was "here from the Cabinet of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

There has been considerable speculation as to whether Murphy would have the support of President Roosevelt in the November campaign.

Board Opens Hearings on Railway Wages

Roads Urge Reduction Warn of Business Loss Unions See 'Nose-Dive'

Railroad arguments for a 15 per cent pay cut yesterday clashed with union attacks on present wage scales, as the President's emergency fact-finding board grappled with the threat of a general rail strike.

Opening the case for the roads, J. Carter Fort, chief counsel for the carriers, warned that unless the rails are able to meet new competition, their business will be lost and there will be "less and less employment opportunity."

"There will be further abandonment of mileage, fewer trains, more closed stations," said Fort. "The interest of the men lies in the preservation of their industry."

Unions Attack Cut

Charles M. Hay, representing 18 railroad unions, replied that a pay cut would delay and jeopardize any program for establishment of a sound transportation policy.

He said the effect would be "to stop the upward trend of business and send business into another nose-dive just as deflationary movements have done in previous periods."

Quietly weighing conflicting contentions was the special board named by the President Tuesday, headed by Justice Walter P Stacy, of the North Carolina Supreme Court. Stacy together with Prof. Harry A. Millis, of the University of Chicago, and Dean James M. Landis, of the Harvard Law School, must report their findings by October 27.

Strike Possible Dec. 1

A rail strike was voted for October 1 when railroads served notice of a pay cut on that day, but provisions of the railway labor act forestall possibility of a strike before December 1. After the fact-finding board reports, the status quo must continue in effect for another 30 days while a settlement is sought.

Justice Stacy at yesterday's initial hearings asked that evidence and arguments be completed by October 17.

The railroads are contending rail wages now are unreasonably high, averaging $1,785 a year. Union spokesmen have challenged this figure and argue the average works out to only $1,115 a year. The roads take issue with the union figure, contending it includes "casual workers" who are not "railroad men" and 110,000 who earn less than $10 a year for odd jobs.

Fort Assails Union

In opening arguments, Fort charged "the labor organizations and they alone are responsible for the present emergency." Pointing out that the roads agreed to voluntary arbitration under the mediation act, he charged the unions refused to arbitrate and "prejudged the case in their own favor before there was any opportunity to present facts and figures."

Fort said the railroad industry "is now in a critical and desperate condition, with business running about 20 per cent lower than last year" while employes still on the pay rolls "are receiving the most liberal wages in history."

Fort argued the cut would aid in restoring roads to financial health, adding:

"When a key industry of this kind is facing disaster it cannot aid national recovery."

Cites Hourly Earnings

Speaking for the unions, Hay replied that railroad average hourly earnings of 72.1 cents compare unfavorably with earnings in the industries from which railroads purchase supplies. He said earnings range from 75.2 to 97.5 cents an hour in the coal, steel, rubber, crude oil and locomotive industries.

While the average hourly earnings of rail workers have gone up 1.4 per cent since 1920, Hay said the average of workers in outside industries has increased 18 per cent in the manufacturing industry, 33.7 per cent in the automobile industry and 16.2 per cent to 32.5 per cent in other industries. He argued that railroad labor is a "distinct class" with above-average qualities of mind and character.

The rail union counsel said a railroad wage cut "would be the signal for a like movement in other industries."

"Nothing to Arbitrate"

He contended the cut would injure good will between employes and employers and "destroy" the possibility of working out an adequate national transportation program. He said many lines are carrying "impossible fixed charges" and said many should seek voluntary reorganization under Federal bankruptcy laws instead of reducing wages.

Questioned by Justice Stacy on why the unions refused voluntary arbitration, Hay said:

"We did not figure we had anything to arbitrate."

Fort earlier argued that railroads in many respects are in a worse condition than in 1932 and 1933, when employes took a voluntary 10 per cent wage cut.

PWA Fund Asked To Eliminate River Pollution

Public Works officials announced yesterday the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission had applied for a $528,661 loan and grant to eliminate pollution in the Anacostia River and its tributaries.

The application was made through a letter sent the PWA offices Thursday by T. Howard Duckett, chairman of the commission. Yesterday was the legal deadline for applications for PWA loans.

It was understood the sanitary commission proposes to use the funds to construct a system of sewers connecting with the District system for treatment at the sewage disposal plant at Blue Plains.

Inquiry Proposed Into 'Hunger-Riot' Forecast Davis Cites Earle Remark to Dies

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Sept. 30.—Senator Davis (Republican), Pennsylvania, disclosed today he had proposed a Congressional investigation of a statement in which he said Gov. Earle declared "hunger riots" would break out within six months if the Republicans win the general State election.

SEN. DAVIS.

In a letter to Representative Dies, chairman of the committee investigating un-American activities, Davis wrote:

"If the Communists propose to stage hunger-riots in Pennsylvania your committee would want to know of their plans as soon as possible. Gov. Earle's association with the Communists in view of their indorsement of his candidacy may enable him to give some additional advance information along these lines."

• • • •

Beaver Falls, Pa., Sept. 30.—Charles Alvin Jones, Democratic candidate for Governor, accuses Superior Court Judge Arthur H. James, his Republican opponent, of "peddling" legal opinions "in bulk from street corner to street corner."

Jones said in an address here that Judge James had referred to the Earle administration's legislative program as "the greatest mass of legal folly I ever saw" and continued:

"We have here the spectacle of a member of a high tribunal publicly, from the political stump, condemning laws wholesale. The sight is neither pleasant nor edifying to all who hold our courts in high esteem."

Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, said yesterday that voters had assured "an independent Congress" by renominating Democratic Senators whose defeat President Roosevelt had asked.

The 70-year-old South Carolina Democrat, back in the Capital for the first time since his State's primary, served notice that Administration leaders "will have to reckon with Jeffersonian Democrats" in the new Congress.

Smith said he did not expect Senate Democrats to try and unseat Senator Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky as majority leader.

"But Barkley will have to reckon with this new element," Smith said.

Trenton, N. J., Sept. 29.—W. Warren Barbour, seeking return to the United States Senate as the New Jersey Republican candidate for Gov. Moore's unexpired term, flung down the gauntlet tonight to President Roosevelt.

Addressing a dinner rally of more than 300 party leaders, the former Senator said:

Of his opponent, William H. J. Ely, New Deal supporter, Barbour declared:

"I am convinced the people of New Jersey want a representative of New Jersey in Washington, and not a representative of Washington in New Jersey."

New York, Sept. 30.—Benjamin V. Cohen, Government lawyer and confidential adviser of President Roosevelt, returned last night on the S. S. Manhattan from what he described as a two-week "vacation" in Europe. He was met down the bay by his close friend and co-worker in the New Deal Administration, Thomas Corcoran.

Veteran ship newsmen and customs agents said they could not recall any arrival of celebrity, diplomat or incognito royalty protected by more elaborate precautions for secrecy.

Pursers, stewards and other members of the ship's crew denied Cohen was on board. Reporters found him on the promenade deck. One asked him:

"As a voter and citizen, do you favor a third term for President Roosevelt?"

"I'm not in politics," Cohen said. "A lot of people think you are," an interviewer said.

Tydings Moves To Aid Dealers In Sea Food

Rehabilitation Aim To Ask $275,000 Hits at Pollution

Rehabilitation of the seafood industry of the Chesapeake Bay was set as one of the goals of Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, yesterday as he prepared to campaign for re-election.

Addressing a communication to the director of the budget, Senator Tydings outlined a program of Federal expenditure of $275,000 for the next fiscal year and pointed out that it would benefit the seafood industry of the Nation as well as that of Maryland.

One of the proposals is to construct a laboratory for the U. S. Bureau of Fisheries at the University of Maryland at a cost of $100,000. He also asked $50,000 for additional personnel in the bureau to conduct technical studies and $125,000 for a promotion campaign to induce the Nation to consume more fish.

He pointed out to the budget director that 200,000 fishermen and 300,000 persons in allied industries are dependent on the seafood industry for a living. The annual catch of seafood, he said, amounts to 5,000,000,000 pounds, from which fishermen get $93,000,000 and manufacturers $236,000,000.

Yet this country is far below other nations in the amount of seafood consumed per capita, and all seafoods are declining.

"In order to effect an annual increase rather than a decrease in our fish supply," he said, "we must build new hatcheries and employ other means to augment the supply of seafood of all kinds."

Senator Tydings said he also is interested in eliminating pollution of streams, bays, and rivers so that fish may have a chance to spawn.

"I am preparing legislation of a fact-finding nature to look into this subject," he said, "and hope from this examination ways and means can be found to protect the spawning grounds and the seafood waters."

Security Board Lists 12 Flaws In Ohio Relief

Charges Inefficiency Blames Governor 'Politics' Cited

By the Associated Press.

The Social Security Board cited 12 instances of alleged inefficiency yesterday in the administration of Ohio's old age assistance and intimated these would have to be corrected if Federal contributions were to continue.

The board said in a formal statement:

"There is ample time before the next (monthly) checks are sent out to Ohio's needy aged for the chief of the Ohio division of aid for the aged to make the necessary improvements in administration as set forth in the findings of the board and as required by both the social security act and the Ohio law."

The board said the Federal share of September pensions was sent to Ohio in a quarterly payment in June and this money was included in checks which pensioners received in the last few days.

Under the social security law, the Federal Government pays half the pensions, up to a total of $30 a month. The State supplies the other half.

The board said it found these instances of "noncompliance as to efficient administration:"

Repeated interference by the Governor with orderly procedures, violation of Civil Service laws and rules, serious and excessive delays in the handling of applications for assistance, failure to establish adequate basic policies with respect to certain phases of administration, blanket increases in awards tending to nullify the granting of assistance on the basis of need, discrimination in handling complaints, irregularities in the accounting system, and various lesser items.

Burke Asks Roosevelt Call Trade Parley

Senator Ends Tour War Causes Stressed Currency Called 'Root'

Warmly commending the President's position in the European crisis, Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, proposed yesterday that Mr. Roosevelt follow up his peace pleas with a call for an international economic conference.

Back from a tour of Europe, Burke said economic conditions, rather than political considerations, "are the most fruitful cause of war in Europe today."

"President Roosevelt is in an ideal position to suggest to the leading countries that a conference be held to improve the relations of various nations in economic matters," Burke said.

"High Regard" Stressed

He said he thought the suggestion would be favorably received, "because of the high regard I found for him in Great Britain, France and even in Germany."

"The prospect of immediate war is lessened by the Munich agreement," he said, "but there are underlying economic factors that could bring one.

"The currency question is the root of much trouble, and an international conference could do much to solve it. Such a conference might also serve as a medium for Secretary of State Hull to advocate his reciprocal trade theories and for Secretary of Agriculture Wallace to develop means of moving farm surpluses into foreign markets."

Praises Sudeten Settlement

Burke said he had no plans to present a formal proposal to the President. The Nebraskan, who has battled the Administration on the court, reorganization and labor relations issues, said he had only "highest commendation" for the President in his international course.

He said it was wise to cede Sudeten areas to Germany as the present boundary "was a mistake in the first place" and "there could have been no peace in Europe until the problem was settled."

Burke, who studied labor conditions in England, France, Germany, Holland and Italy, said he is "more convinced then ever that the Wagner labor relations act must be substantially revised."

"We should separate the judicial functions of the Labor Relations Board from its investigating and prosecuting functions," he said. "There is merit in continuing the board as an investigating agency, but it should not have the dual functions of prosecutor and judge."

Cites British Policy

He said the British system probably could not be applied here, but in England he found employes did not want the government to interfere, and "the employers generally are more willing to deal with labor on a voluntary basis."

"We could profit from their idea of voluntary collective agreements," he said. "They feel it would ruin matters if they had statutes compelling employers to deal with workers. The attitude of American employers in not wanting to bargain with labor could be overcome perhaps, if certain labor leaders were less arbitrary in their attitudes."

Burke predicted the Government reorganization bill would not pass the Senate again in the form it last went to the House, and commented that seven Senators who voted for the Wheeler amendment modifying the bill have been defeated. He said the President should follow the proposal of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and send specific reorganization proposals to Congress, rather than ask power for himself to reorganize.

Monopoly Inquiry MayWait onVoting

By the Associated Press.

Some members of the Government monopoly investigating committee said yesterday an informal agreement had been reached to delay open hearings until after the November general election. The hearings originally were scheduled to start next month.

One member, who asked that his name not be used, said the delay could be considered as an additional assurance to business that the investigators did not intend to make political capital of their findings.

Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, said he understood the material being assembled by the six Government agencies participatnig in the survey would not be ready for six weeks or two months.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

DOWN FROM Alaska has come Stanley Young, chief of the Biological Survey's Division of Predator and Rodent Control, with an amazing tale. He discovered, in Petersburg, Alaska, a fabulous citizen who has invented a bit that will bore a square hole! And bore it in the hardest metal. Even the Patent Office knows nothing of the discovery; for the inventor—as you shall see—is a fabulous man who has no time for cornering the market, much less the market on square holes.

The inventor, Young related, is Earl Ohmer, now acting chief of the Alaska Game Commission. In private affairs, Ohmer is a shrimp packer. Now, in the older times, he had a force of men to pick the shrimps' tails by hand; but this was slow, and Ohmer, with native genius, invented a shrimp tail picking machine. He immediately became disturbed.

SUCH A machine would join other machines in throwing men out of work, Ohmer reasoned. He put the machine aside; and competition in the shrimp packing business became so great that he was compelled to utilize his invention in order to stay at the old stand. Soon 12 machines were picking the tails from shrimp. Things were good.

But, occasionally, a machine would break down; and while fixing one Ohmer discovered the secret of a drill that would bore a square hole. Young saw it operate, and brought to Washington an exhibit of the work. And also an idea came with it. He may organize a companion group to the famous Order of Yellow Dogs, which flourishes in agriculture, and name it "The Square Holers." The insignia would be a square, caught in a circle, indicating square pegs in round holes, or something else significant.

YOUNG, A fabulous fellow himself, told of the inventor, a dark complexioned man under a tremendous Stetson; a gold nugget chain with a bear tooth and claw dangles from his middle. He wears riding breeches and leggings, and has a playful habit, expressed in moments of pique, of firing a couple of rounds from his six-shooter while pictures on the wall jig-dance off the bullets.

And then Young told of his own long trip, from which he has just returned. And, at the moment, he had just returned from the Museum of Natural History, where he donated the skull of a squirrel that he found 135 feet, in a strata of ice, below the Alaskan earth.

His office is a curiosity, a museum in itself. There is a large showcase holding the skulls of wolves and other animals and a beautiful skin of a mountain lion of the particular species that was named for Mr. Young.

Important Words:

"YOU HAVE already been advised of my intention with respect to hours of labor; that is, that we will develop with the Bureau of the Budget the merit of establishing an 8-hour day and will submit our estimated additional costs of this proposal at the time our regular 1940 appropriation estimates are being presented."—Frank T. Hines, Veterans Administrator.

"There will be developed a policy and a program for the orderly ascertainment and rapid transfer of employes fitted and needed for particular tasks in particular places at particular times."—Commissioner Ordway.

"There must be ascertained and introduced universally an effective method of hearing grievances of employes and reaching a swift satisfactory solution of their problems."—Commissioner Ordway again.

There are other important words going the rounds. It is simply to remind that all effort should be made to speed the day when the important projects are put in effect.

Concerning the squabble in the Labor Department over moving 72 Immigration employes from the Beautiful Building to the structure on 14th Street, whereby an important group of workers would be separated from the core, or central point of their field of work, one girl hit the nail on the head:

"The trouble is the same here as everywhere else in the Government—there is no single responsible and determining head for anything. An issue arises and is kicked all over the place like a football, while one chief passes the buck to another. It there were some one person with authority and courage to make a decision and stick to it, messes like this wouldn't and couldn't arise."

TVA Would Quash Dr. Morgan's Suit

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 30 (AP).—The Tennessee Valley Authority filed a motion in U. S. District Court here today seeking dismissal of Dr. Arthur E. Morgan's suit challenging the power of President Roosevelt in removing him last March 22 as chairman-director of TVA.

The authority declared Dr. Morgan failed to "state a claim upon which relief can be granted" and asserted the President acted within his rights in ousting Dr. Morgan for "contumacy."

Dr. Morgan, seeking to retain his office and win back salary of more than $4,000, filed suit July 6. He refused to recognize the removal order and asked an injunction to restrain TVA Directors David E. Lilienthal and H. A. Morgan from "interfering" with Morgan's duties as "chairman-director."

Gale Lashes Long Island, Heads North

Shipping Warned

The eastern end of Long Island's seacoast, devastated by last week's hurricane, was lashed yesterday by a 40-mile-an-hour gale but suffered little property damage and no reported loss of life.

The storm, which originated in eastern North Carolina, swirled northward in the wake of a drenching rain, piling up unusually high tides on the New Jersey Coast and Long Island before howling off toward Nantucket, Mass.

Long Island, Coast Guards said, probably felt only the outer wing. Seas raced up the beach of desolate Fire Island, causing some apprehension, but Capt. William M. Wolff of the Fourth Supervisory District said the Weather Bureau had assured him the winds shortly would shift to the northwest, flattening out the waves.

Freighter Safe

Earlier in the day the Coast Guard received word the 5,500-ton freighter City of Atlanta, bound from Boston to Savannah, was in distress with disabled engines off Cape Hatteras. Later, however, the Coast Guard cutter Modoc received assurances by wireless that the ship, carrying a crew of 54, was in no danger and was proceeding to Savannah.

Storm warnings were posted along the coast from the Virginia Capes to Eastport, Me., as the storm raced northward. Rain fell in Maryland and in the Philadelphia area, over New Jersey and metropolitan New York, but the fall was light.

Wilmington, N. C., fared worse. An 18-hour rainfall there left a large part of the city flooded. The official rainfall measurement was 9.4 inches.

Maryland Escapes

Connecticut and Boston also had rain and small craft along the coast sought shelter.

The Eastern Shore of Maryland which felt the fringes of a tropical storm last week, for the second time yesterday escaped comparatively unscathed from the tornado which swept Charleston, S. C.

The storm yesterday passed within 100 miles of the shore but the high wind and rain brought watermen to port, and flooded roads.

Storm signals were up for all navigation on Chesapeake Bay and at Ocean City the Coast Guard braved huge waves to tow in a fishing schooner with three men aboard who hoisted distress signals. Other fishing vessels scurried to port and stayed there.

Charleston Digs Out

Charleston, S. C., Sept. 30 (AP).—This historic city by the sea dug out today from the wreckage strewn by a raging tornado, and counted the storm's toll at 26 dead, 200 injured, some seriously, and property damage estimated at between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000.

Tonight soldiers, marines and policemen worked to keep order in the stricken city's darkened streets. Although electric power service was restored in some sections, there were no street lights.

Col. Harry O. Withington, of the 118th Infantry, South Carolina National Guard, in charge of the State and Federal troops here, said there had been no looting in the wrecked areas.

Fifteen of the known dead were white persons, and 11 were colored.

The Charleston Chapter of the American Red Cross took charge of relief work, and provisions were quickly made for housing, clothing and feeding 1,100 persons. Charity and relief organizations offered every available facility.

Cots and beds were placed in the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Murray Vocational School, County Agricultural building, and the National Guard armories for the homeless. Emergency and Red Cross relief stations were established in the stricken areas.

An eye-witness account of death and destruction in the Charleston (S. C.) tornado came yesterday from Richard W. Janney, an inspector in the Federal Alcohol Control Administration here.

Janney, conducting an inspection trip through the South, had just driven his car into a Charleston filling station when the storm struck, the Associated Press reported.

"I missed death by inches," said Janney, describing how he ran for cover as flying debris smashed against his car.

Hardly had he stopped beside a gasoline pump, Janney reported, when he heard an "eerie noise that sounded like a fast express train roaring nearer."

"I looked up toward the sky," he said, "and there was a big, black cloud. I could see big pieces of sheet iron and timber flying through the air. What happened next didn't last over 3 seconds, I believe, but it was awful while it lasted.

"I started to duck under a shed," Janney continued, "but I changed my mind and ran into the filling station office. The shed crumpled as if it were made of matches.

"A brick building," Janney related, "exploded over a parked automobile. It was necessary to dig the driver out."

Special Jury Slated to Hear A.M.A. Case

May Sit October 16
Antitrust Proceedings
Justice Dept. Silent

Anti-trust proceedings against the American Medical Association and the District Medical Society last night were scheduled for hearing by a special grand jury about the middle of October.

District Attorney David A. Pine said he understood the Department of Justice was planning an inquiry but that he had not been requested to call for a special grand jury. Announcement of proceedings, he added, normally would be made by the department.

The law requires that the district attorney certify to the chief justice of District Court that there is a need for a special grand jury.

The Department of Justice yesterday would not discuss its plans, but it was learned that the present intention is to call for a special jury to sit October 16 or 17. A special jury will be asked because the department is unwilling to add the burden to the regular routine of criminal cases.

Roosevelt Finds PWA Operating Fast, Successfully

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt reported yesterday that the $2,000,000,000 PWA program "Is now operating successfully on a fast time table and the recovery effects of the program are already being registered."

The deadline for filing PWA applications was midnight.

Mr. Roosevelt said that in the 101 days since he signed the 1938 PWA act June 21, communities all over the country had filed almost 10,000 applications for PWA projects. He added that more than 1,000 projects already were under construction "with dirt flying and walls rising." WPA Administrator Ickes estimated that PWA in the last 100 days had approved projects to cost $1,500,000,000.

Dr. Havenner, Civic Leader, Retires After 50-Year Service

Term Was Extended
U. S. Worker Is 72
Wrote U. S. Reports

Dr. George C. Havenner, liaison officer of Government Printing Office and District civic leader, retired yesterday after 50 years of Federal service. The former president of the Federation of Citizens Association had observed his seventy-second birthday last week.

A graduate of Howard University Medical School, Dr. Havenner began his Government career in 1887 as a typist in the Government Printing Office. For 13 years he served in various posts here, until in 1903 he resigned to take charge of publication work for the old Bureau of Statistics. Two years later he became chief of the Publication Division, Department of Commerce and Labor, and served 10 years.

On creation of Department of Labor in 1913, Dr. Havenner became its chief clerk. Six years later he was appointed investigator in the Bureau of Efficiency, and in 1933 was named liaison officer in the Government Printing Office. Twice President Roosevelt extended his term of service by executive order.

Wrote U. S. Reports

In 1909 Dr. Havenner investigated the Government Printing Office for President Theodore Roosevelt. He also wrote the Government's reports on Foreign Trade Promotion Work (1920) and Statistical Work of the United States Government (1922).

Long prominent in civic activities here, Dr. Havenner organized the Anacostia Citizens Association in 1895, and was active in obtaining many improvements in that section of the city. He was elected three times to the first advisory council to the District Commissioners, and headed the federation four times.

Dr. Havenner has served on many Presidential inauguration and ball committees. He is a member of the Public Library board of trustees, Forest Hills Citizens Association, Oldest Inhabitants, Citizens joint committee on fiscal relation between District and Federal Government, and Washington Club of Printing House Craftsmen.

In 1933 he was made Chief Howling Bear of the Kiowa tribe; he is an honorary member of Anacostia, Congress Heights, Washington Highlands, Hillcrest Citizens Associations, and Lodges 149 and 189 of American Federation of Government Employes. He resides at 2912 Albemarle street northwest.

Ralph L. Harding Resigns

Ralph L. Harding, chief of the Division of Metals and Minerals, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has resigned his position to rejoin the firm of architects and engineers he left to enter the Bureau in 1934.

He was tendered a farewell luncheon yesterday by fellow employes. South Trimble, jr., Commerce Department solicitor, and Guerra Everett, chief, Division of Commerce Laws, were the speakers. The parting token was an electric desk clock.

Two retirements occurred yesterday in the National Capital Parks Service. Patrick Dowd, employed there for 48 years and seven months, retired with the grade of chief plumber. He entered the service as a water boy. A native of New York City, he intends spending his retirement at 732 Hamilton street northwest.

John H. Inzer was retired as a general mechanic after 38 years' service. A native of Herndon, Va., he lives at 2460 First street, Capitol Heights, Md. He plans to live in California. Inzer and Dowd were presented with smoking sets by members of the National Capital Parks Club.

R. I. Democrats Pick Quinn and Other Incumbents

Providence, R. I., Sept. 30 (AP).—Gov. Robert E. Quinn and all other ranking officeholders of the Democratic Party in Rhode Island, except Representative John M. O'Connell, of Westerly, today were renominated at the State Democratic convention here.

O'Connell, who had announced his retirement, was replaced on the ballot by State Senator Edward J. Fenelon, jr., of Westerly, in the Second Congressional District.

Gov. Quinn will be opposed for election by William H. Vanderbilt. Vanderbilt, son of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt who was killed when the Lusitania was torpedoed in 1915, was nominated unanimously by the Republican convention yesterday.

Red Cross Aid Sent Charleston Storm Victims

1,000 Families Hit
Rehabiliation Begun
Relief Fund Grows

Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American Red Cross, said yesterday that approximately 1,000 families had suffered losses in the tornado that killed 27 persons in Charleston, S. C., Thursday.

Meanwhile, contributions to the Red Cross fund for hurricane relief in New England and New York reached a total of $335,443, Davis announced. Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt was listed as having sent in a "generous check," but the amount was not given.

The Red Cross, Davis said, is administering nursing care for the Charleston injured and will assume the task of rehabilitation for those whose homes were destroyed.

In a telephone conversation with Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chairman of the Charleston chapter of the Red Cross, Mr. Davis was informed that all the needs of the tornado victims were being met.

Red Cross chapters in South Carolina and a number of Southern cities have been asked to raise a relief fund to care for sufferers. A medical problem is developing in the care of the injured, Mr. Davis said.

Dr. William DeKleine, medical adviser of the Red Cross, and Miss Anna Gring, Red Cross nursing supervisor, arrived in Charleston yesterday to check on injury cases and to plan follow-up care.

Gen. Summerall estimated that 200 homes were damaged. Of the 27 killed, he said, 12 were white and 15 colored. Hospitals reported 37 still under care, 59 discharged after treatment and several hundred given first aid.

E. P. Grice, Works Progress Administration field representative in South Carolina, reported to Aubrey Williams, Assisant Works Progress Administrator, that more than 1,000 WPA workers were engaged in emergency rehabilitation work in Charleston.

7,107 New Memberships

New memberships in the Red Cross mounted to 7,107 yesterday, with the utilities division reporting more than 1,000, Edgar Morris, roll call chairman, announced last night.

Activities of the Red Cross, and the current roll call, were dramatized last night at Loew's Capitol Theater. The Chester Hale girls presented a tableaux showing Red Cross posters.

An exhibit showing the work of the Red Cross in handling emergency relief in disaster areas was set up in the theater lobby.

Nearby a roll-call booth was opened by Miss Martha Talley and Miss Elizabeth Ralston. They enrolled as their first volunteers Armando Villareal and Eduard Yanez, captains of the Mexican and Chilean teams here for the Inter-American Horse Show.

C. of C. Leader Calls for End of Deficit Spending

By the Associated Press.

Fred H. Clausen, of Horicon, Wis., chairman of the Federal finance committee of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, appealed to the next Congress yesterday to stop deficit spending.

He issued a formal statement saying also that provision should be made for progressive reduction of the Federal debt, that spending primarily to "stimulate business" should be stopped, and that provision should be made for auditing by the Comptroller General of all Federal expenditures.

Clausen added:

"The Federal Government should announce determination to place progressively larger responsibility upon State and local governments for expenditures in behalf of relief . . . Federal public works as a means of providing unemployment relief should be abandoned as a policy."

Street Car Breaks Outstretched Arm Of Traffic Officer

Add to the list of traffic victims the name of Traffic Policeman John J. Daly, 32.

While directing traffic at Thirty-first and M streets northwest yesterday, Private Daly extended his arm in semaphore fashion. At that moment, a Capital Transit street car struck Daly's arm and broke it below the elbow.

Numbers Row Leads to Killing; Suspect Held

His efforts to halt an argument betwen two alleged numbers runners resulted yesterday in the death of James Lloyd, 26, colored, of 915 Fourteenth street northwest.

Police arrested Benjamin Jordan, alias Pop Doodle, 28, colored, of 1407 W street northwest, and held him for the coroner's jury in connection with the killing.

According to Lust George Darnell, chief of the homicide squad, Jordan was arguing on 1900 block Fourteenth street northwest with Thurman McCann, 31, colored, of 1341 T street northwest, about a numbers client. Lloyd stepped in and stopped the argument and the three went into a poolroom together. Here Jordan seized a billiard cue, Darnell said, and struck Lloyd over the head. Lloyd died a few hours later at Garfield Hospital.

Lloyd, a valet at a downtown hotel, while in a semi-coma begged police to let him go back to the hotel "because I have to press Jim Farley's trousers."

posed the President's Supreme Court reorganization plan, had announced he would make the gubernatorial race.

President Lauds Wagner

"I am made very happy by the willingness of Gov. Lehman to accept renomination," the President said. "'I am certain that the people of your State will continue to approve the forward-looking, business-like and clean government he has maintained."

At the same time, the President lauded Senator Wagner, one of his most ardent supporters, for his "services to humaninity" which, he said, "make our whole State proud of him."

Lehman, who in accepting renomination turned from an expressed preference for the short term United States Senate nomination, referred to District Attorney Dewey's "racket busting" activities, and asserted:

In spite of press reports, I did not believe that Mr. Dewey would abandon, almost before it started, that important work for which he was chosen by the people less than a year ago, and for which he accepted an obligation to the people."

Dewey to Keep Job Now

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey termed the Republican platform a "splendid liberal document" today, and said he approached the campaign "with enthusiasm and eagerness to do a big job."

"It is interesting," he said, "that the Democratic bosses should again so desperately implore Gov. Lehman to run again for an office from which he has twice stated his wish to retire.

"The issues in this campaign are larger and more important than the personality of any candidate."

Dewey said he intended to retain his office as district attorney—to which he was elected last year—during the guberhatorial campaign, retiring December 31 if elected to the governorship.

He indicated he proposed personally to prosecute Tammany District Leader James J. Hines, whose retrial on policy-racket conspiracy charges is set to begin November 14, six days after the election.

His campaign for the governorship, he asserted, would not hamper the work of his present office.

Pipe Line Sought 1,500 Miles Long

The Federal Power Commission yesterday disclosed that Public Service Gas Co., a Montana corporation, had applied for authorization of a 1,500-mile natural gas pipe line, estimated to cost $49,402,000.

This is the second application to be filed in ten days for construction of a gas pipe line to serve industrial projects in the Mesaba iron range where there are large deposits of low-grade ore. The Kansas Pipe Line & Gas Co. now has a petition before the F. P. C. to construct a gas line from Kansas to the Mesaba range.

2 Army Fliers Are Promoted To Generals

Frank, Dargue Advanced
Given New Posts
Admiral Transferred

Two Army Air Corps officers were designated brigadier generals yesterday as the Navy Department announced that Rear Admiral Julius C. Townsend, now on duty here with the general board of the Navy, will relieve Rear Admiral Wat Tyler Cluverius November 15 as commandant of the Fourth Naval District and the Philadelphia Navy Yard. Admiral Cluverius is retiring from active service.

Col. Walter H. Frank has been ordered to command of the eighteenth wing of the General Headquarters Air Force in the Hawaiian Islands with the rank of brigadier general. He will succeed Brig. Gen. Barton K. Yount, who recently completed his tour of duty in the islands.

The assistant commandant of the Air Corps Tactical School, Col. Herbert A. Dargue, also was named a brigadier general and placed in command of the Nineteenth Wing of the G. H. Q. Air Force in the Panama Canal Zone, where he will succeed Brig. Gen. George H. Brett.

Admiral Townsend, who holds both the Congressional Medal of Honor and the Navy Cross, was in charge of the Ship Movement's Division of the Navy Department from 1933 until 1936 and then served as commander of Cruiser Division Two, Battle Force, United States Fleet. He was in command of the cruiser detachment which visited Australia and Singapore early this year.

A native of Missouri, he graduated from the Naval Academy in 1902 and was on duty at the American Naval Air Station in Ireland during the World War.

Col. Frank, who graduated from the Army War College in 1931, was assigned to the General Headquarters Air Force, Langley Field, Va., last February. From 1931 until 1934 he was on duty here in the office of the chief of the Air Corps and then served at Mitchel Field, N. Y., for four years.

Shortly after the Armistice, Col. Frank was on duty here as a member of the Air Service Advisory Board and also has been executive in the office of the chief of the Air Service.

A native of New York, Col. Dargue served overseas during the World War as an observer of aerial training and activities on the western front.

Upon his return to the United States he became active assistant to the chief of the training section in the office of the director of Military Aeronautics.

He is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School, Fort Leavenworth, Kans.; the Army War College here and the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

'Roosevelt Needs Murphy,' Says Ickes

Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 30 (AP) Secretary Ickes told the Michigan Democratic convention here tonight that "Franklin D. Roosevelt needs Frank Murphy once more as Governor of Michigan." Ickes said he was "here from the Cabinet of Franklin D. Roosevelt."

There has been considerable speculation as to whether Murphy would have the support of President Roosevelt in the November campaign.

Reich's Army Now Crossing Czech Border

Nazi

20 years ago. It died tonight because its leaders knew it could not hope to survive against the explosives and poison gases of its powerful neighbor.

"Until 5 o'clock this afternoon, Prague and the people of Czechoslovakia thought and hoped they would be able to fight for their independence.

"They did not know that at Munich last night the French and the British had agreed with the Germans and the Italians that their independence was to be sacrificed as the price for peace in Europe this year.

"Then at 5 o'clock Premier Gen. Jan Syrovy went to the microphone and told them of the Munich meeting and how the four powers had coolly forced them to choose between the death of the Czechoslovak people and the death of the state as it is now constituted.

A Soldier's Order

"In a broken voice, punctuated by painful periods of silence, he told them there was nothing to do but surrender and hope for the future.

"The next voice on the microphone was that Syrovy's war-time comrade, Gen. Ludwig Krejci, commander in chief of the army. For five minutes he spoke to his men up there on the fortifications—men who a week ago jubilantly answered the call to arms. 'Soldiers,' he told them, 'you have taken an oath of obedience; keep it.'

"The news was listened to by grim-faced men and women whose faces were wet with tears when the radio speeches ended with the national anthem.

"For half an hour or more they were stunned to silence, and then they cried out in protest, these people who for five days had lived in hourly expectation of the most dreadful air raid in history.

"They're Ready to Die"

"They paraded in the streets, men and women whose sons and brothers and fathers were on the frontier line ready to lay down their lives to defend their country against invasion.

"Why, they wanted to know, could they not fight? Why could they not fight alone? Their shouting grew to a steady roar, but this was not the same crowd that protested a week ago when a previous cabinet gave way to less damaging and less humiliating demands. Their spirit seemed broken tonight. Their step was slow. Their faces were grief-stricken; not angered. The extraordinary police precautions which had been taken were unnecessary . . .

"Yet there was still one danger. Would the soldiers guarding the frontier give way so easily, give way to an order for which they had not been prepared and which they did not want? As things stand tonight, it appears that the Czechoslovak soldiers are obeying their orders. If that is true, then the German army may halt after it has occupied the agreed-upon areas.

Harsh Future Faced

"But there are difficult days to come. One and a half million Czechs and Slovaks are still under arms. They are falling back, handing over the fortifications they built and paid for, but they are patriots.

"And in the areas through which they are retreating tonight, Sudeten Germans are cheering wildly and frightened Czechs, Jews and anti-Nazi Germans are fleeing to the safety of Prague.

"Lines of them are streaming into the city in trucks and cars and wagons and on foot. How they will be fed and clothed and housed in the years to come are problems which Czechoslovakia alone will not be able to solve, for farms, homes, factories and shops are being abandoned by the thousands and the men and women and children they supported are now destitute.

"But 320 years ago the Czech people lost their country and 300 years later they won it back. Perhaps they will win it back again some day."

Reich, Britain Will 'Never Go to War' Under New Pact, Chamberlain Says

London

of the ovation. The car was eventually freed by the police and, turning into the palace courtyard, was driven swiftly to the privy purse door.

"Good Old Chamberlain"

"Good old Chamberlain," shouted the crowd, and hundreds of automobiles in the vicinity joined in the chorus of applause by sounding their horns incessantly.

Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain were conducted upstairs to where King George VI and Queen Elizabeth were waiting to congratulate the "Prime Minister of Peace."

Outside the friendly mob was yelling to the last man, "We want Chamberlain." They kept this up until two gorgeously uniformed footmen laid a royal crimson carpet upon a flood-lit balcony. The doors were thrown open and the crescendo of cheering reached its climax, as first the King and Queen, and then Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain walked out onto the balcony, visible to all.

The Queen stood on the prime minister's right and to the left of Mrs. Chamberlain was the King, bareheaded, and like the prime minister, in morning clothes.

The volume of cheering and singing "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow" continued unabated as Chamberlain bowed repeatedly, while the Queen, who was dressed in her usual pearl gray, waved majestically to her subjects beneath.

Mrs. Chamberlain was obviously moved by the reception and her husband seemed deeply affected as he crossed and uncrossed his thin hands. There was an even wilder burst of cheering as Chamberlain turned to his wife and clasped her hand in his. Standing together with hands joined, they bowed and bowed.

Ovation Lasts Five Minutes

After the ovation had lasted five minutes, the prime minister waved a farewell to the demonstrators. The King waved his hand for the first time and he, too, left the balcony. The crowd sang "God Save the King" before dispersing.

After 25 minutes with their majesties, the Chamberlains drove on to Downing street by way of Birdcake walk and Whitehall. Never within living memory has Downing street been the scene of such a welcome. Rain or no rain, spectators by the thousands and tens of thousands had waited for hours to greet their elderly hero. The dull stretches were enlivened with the singing of "Land of Hope and Glory," "Oh God, Our Help in Ages Past," and "Rule Britannia."

Four American gobs from the United States cruiser Honolulu, which was rushed over here to evacuate refugees from the expected war, got a tremendous reception from the crowd as they came up the center of Downing street with the horse guards parade, and shouldered along through police lines. The police awarded them front row standing alongside No. 10's doorway.

One man in the tightly packed mass fainted almost on the doorstep of No. 10.

"Public Hero No. 1"

The crowd roared with delight when a cockney newsboy rushed up Downing street with the late editions shouting "Public Hero No. 1," meaning Chamberlain. He sold out in a jiffy, whereupon he gave three cheers for Chamberlain, and led the crowd into the one thousandth rendition of "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow."

At 7 o'clock thunders of cheers drifted up from Whitehall as mounted police cantered ahead of a limousine which everybody assumed to be Chamberlain's. The crowd roared and broke through the cordons to climb on the running boards. The car's occupant was only cherubic Sir Kingsley Wood, the air minister, who bounded out of the car like a frightened rabbit, and popped into the haven of No. 10.

One by one the cabinet members showed up. Sir John Simon in black coat and derby stayed on the sidewalk in the rain hatless. Sir Thomas Inskip, who looked like a prime minister and may yet be one, waited on the steps. Sir Samuel Hoare drove up, and little Alfred Duff Cooper pushed his way past the police who tried to stop him as a mere butter-in. The only cabinet man to get a cheer was the smiling war secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha.

Hymn Restores Order

Malcolm MacDonald, the colonial secretary, climbed out of a ground-floor window of No. 10 and held onto the iron railing for a better view. Oliver Stanley, president of the Board of Trade, stood head and shoulders above the crowd until pushed into the gutter. The crowd was getting out of hand. A woman's clear voice restored order, as she led off with the hymn, "God Our Help and Strength."

At 7:15 Whitehall echoed to a roar that sent its pigeons fleeing in panic. Tiny Union Jacks fluttered from countless hands.

Slowly, preceded by half a dozen mounted police, the Chamberlain limousine turned into Downing street and crawled through a throng which attempted to climb on the running boards, only to be held off by naval recruits who had beaten them to it.

No Emperor of Rome returning from triumphs on the field of battle ever received a more heartfelt reception than did the prime minister, returning from his three verbal battles with Der Fuehrer at Berchtesgaden, Godesberg and Munich.

The prime minister, smiling, hatless, stepped out onto the sidewalk. He blinked and broke into a happy grin, as flashlights went off in his face.

Mrs. Chamberlain lingered behind to let her husband monopolize the spotlight. Then a smart figure, in fur-trimmed suit and hat to match, got out of the car and stood beside her husband. There were tears in her eyes as she smiled at the reserved English on all sides who had completely abandoned their reserve and were thundering forth their welcome.

Hand in hand again, the Chamberlains faced their public and the cameramen. The mob clamored for a speech, but Chamberlain walked inside. The cabinet ministers followed and pumped his hand. Sir Samuel Hoare so forgot himself as to pat Mrs. Chamberlain on the shoulder.

"We want Chamberlain," the crowd insisted, "Speech! Speech!" At last a light went on in an upstairs room over the doorway. Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain poked their heads out of an open window.

Again the cries of "Speech! Speech!"

M. P.'s scattered in the crowd called, "Order, Order," as if they were in the House of Commons. The clamor died down magically when Chamberlain hoisted himself upon a chair and prepared to speak. The silence reminded one of Armistice Day at the cenotaph in Whitehall.

Cheer "Peace With Honor"

Chamberlain had held up his right hand for silence.

"My good friends," he began.

When he spoke of "peace with honor," the crowd burst into cheers. Again he held up his hand and the crowd was hushed. His voice sounded clear as a bell, the words ringing out against the foreign office facade across the narrow street. There was a fresh flurry of applause when he prophesied "peace for our time."

"We thank you," he concluded with emotion. "We thank you from the bottom of our hearts for your welcome."

"And we thank you," the crowd responded.

Again they cheered.

"Now," Chamberlain went on, holding up a fraternal hand, "I recommend you to go home and sleep quietly in your beds."

Police Clear the Street

The thousands left Downing street noiselessly—all except one. This man wanted to stay all night in front of No. 10 shouting:

"Thank God, England and Germany are together at last."

"Move on," said the police. He moved on.

The welcome which Chamberlain received in Downing street had been preceded by his welcome at Heston Airport. As he descended from his peace plane, a roar ascended from the waiting crowd calculated to split the heavens. Above the din could be heard voices crying "well done" and "good old Chamberlain."

Coupled with these were the patriotic chants, "England has produced some grand old men"—and "we have some strong men in England."

First to shake the prime minister's hand was the King's lord chamberlain, Lord Clarendon, who tendered Chamberlain a personal letter of congratulations from King George. Other congratulations came from the American Ambassador, the German charge d'affaires, Lord Halifax, foreign secretary, and various other cabinet ministers.

"Only the Prelude"

Into the inevitable microphone Chamberlain spoke the message of optimism after thanking the public for the many kind letters received during the crisis. The prime minister said:

"The settlement of the Czechoslovakian problem, which has now been achieved, is in my view only the prelude to a larger settlement in which all Europe may find peace.

"This morning I had another talk with the German chancellor and here is the paper which bears his name upon it, as well as mine."

Chamberlain, who is rapidly improving in the more dramatic phases of statesmanship, held up a duplicate of the Anglo-German new war pact signed at Munich. The British copy is on British government paper with the Royal coat of arms at the top. The first signature is of Adolf Hitler, with the Christian name loosely separated from the surname, and the latter slanting downward on the line. The second signature is that of Neville Chamberlain, written boldly and on a perfectly straight line.

["We regard the agreement signed last night and the Anglo-German naval agreement as symbolic of the desires of our two peoples never to go to war with one another again."]

[The 1936 Anglo-German naval treaty limited German naval tonnage to 35 per cent of the British tonnage.]

["We are resolved that the method of consultation shall be the method adopted to deal with any other questions that may concern our two countries, and we are determined to continue our efforts to remove possible sources of differences and thus to contribute to and assure the peace of Europe."—Editor's note.]

Soon after Chamberlain's return to Downing street, a full cabinet meeting was held. Chamberlain reported what he had accomplished at Munich and within half an hour had obtained the approval of his colleagues.

Following his session with Parliament next Monday, Chamberlain will take a vacation cruise in the Mediterranean. His friend and fellow-peacemaker, Benito Mussolini, has invited him to visit Rome, and it is suggested the two statesmen may get together to ratify the Anglo-Italian agreement of last Easter, by withdrawing Italian and other foreign fighters from Spain. Eventually, Chamberlain and Mussolini may confer again with Hitler and Daladier on the subject of re-distribution of colonies, liquidation of the Spanish war, and general disarmament for Europe.

Eden Sympathetic

London, Sept. 30 (AP).—Anthony Eden, who resigned as foreign secretary in February in protest against Prime Minister Chamberlain's policy of appeasing dictators, expressed sympathy tonight for the prime minister's "unparalleled ordeal" in the European crisis.

Eden avoided, however, delivering any political opinion on the merits of the Munich pact.

Poland Gives Czechs 'Final Ultimatum'

Poles

U. S. Envoy Received

Foreign Minister Joseph Beck meanwhile received the ambassadors of Germany, France, Great Britain, Italy, the United States and Rumania and the Hungarian minister. Hungary also has minority claims in Czechoslovakia.

The official Polish News Agency, PAC, reported new "incidents" on the Polish-Czech frontier, and a government spokesman told the United Press:

"Prague's zig-zag policy is to blame. Twice this week negotiations with Prague were broken off and resumed. Enough of this! Prague officially agreed to give the Poles what the Sudeten Germans are getting.

"The Sudeten Germans are receiving their freedom tomorrow. Therefore the Poles must have theirs at the same time."

Hungary's Demands

Budapest, Sept. 30 (AP).—Hungary will present to the Prague government in a few days a new two-point demand regarding the Hungarian minority of about 800,000 now living in Czechoslovakia, a foreign office spokesman said tonight.

Hungary will demand, he said:

Immediate unconditional transfer to Hungary of all Czechoslovak territory in which a purely Hungarian population lives, and

A plebiscite for other southern Czechoslovak regions adjoining this area.

The Magyar sections of Czechoslovakia are along the Hungarian frontier in the south. The above program is similar to that by which Germany will obtain the Sudeten German regions.

A map was said to have been prepared at the foreign office to be attached to the memorandum to be sent to Prague, indicating which regions are demanded.

The Hungarian government, however, was said to be still undecided whether the memorandum should be handed to the Czechoslovak government by the usual diplomatic channels or by way of one of the great powers represented at the Munich conference.

A diplomat said that with this new decisive step of Hungary's, two previous demarches to Prague would become void.

Teschen Dispute Is Old

By the Associated Press.

The Teschen district straddling the Polish-Czech border has occasioned dispute for more than 1,000 years, the National Geographic Society said today.

Poland and Czechoslovakia have been quarreling over the area since 1919, when the Treaty of Versailles restored independence to the two countries.

A society bulletin described the district as nearly square, containing 850 square miles rich in deposits of coke and gas-coal. Both countries have relied heavily on these deposits for industries in the area.

3 Soldiers Die In Virginia Crash

Norfolk, Va., Sept. 30 (AP).—Three infantrymen of Company B, Sixty-sixth Infantry of Fort Meade, Md., were fatally injured last night in collision of a taxicab and a CCC truck occupied by eight members of the unit, temporarily stationed at Virginia Beach.

They were Private George Pientka, address not learned; Sergt. Stanley Orchosky, 21, Frackville, S. C., and Private N. Thompson, 20, address given as Princeton, W. Va.

Col. W. J. Wilgus Missing From Home

Ascutney, Vt., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Col. William J. Wilgus, 72, director of military railways for the American Army overseas during the World War and builder of New York's Grand Central Station, was reported missing from his home tonight.

His wife informed police of nearby Claremont that he had set out for his usual walk this morning and had not returned at midnight. He was consulting engineer for the regional plan of New York and environs.

Mrs. Roosevelt Visits Son John in Boston

Boston, Sept. 30. (U.P.).—Mrs. Roosevelt paid a surprise visit to Boston today, between New England speaking engagements, to see her Youngest son, John, and his bride.

The First Lady motored here from Springfield, where she spoke last night. After a chat at her hotel with John, employed as an $18.50-a-week department store clerk, Mrs. Roosevelt left for Portland, Me., where she was to lecture tonight.

Duce Invites Chamberlain To Confer on Spanish War

Italy

but unexpected Spanish loyalist resistance stopped Franco's drive and the pact never went into effect.

It was understood Italy already has begun withdrawing her troops from Spain.

It was generally believed Mussolini was ready to liquidate his Spanish commitments if he is assured Britain at the same time will enforce the Anglo-Italian agreement.

It was believed if Mussolini is successful in completing this deal, he will consider reopening the Franco-Italian negotiations, which were broken off over disagreement about whether France and Italy were living up to the nonintervention agreement.

Mussolini was hialed today by 40,000,000 Italians as the "hero of Europe" and the success of the Munich parley in preventing war was attributed almost entirely to "Mussolini's miracle."

Il Duce was met at Florence by King Victor Emmanuel, who sped by automobile from San Rossore, and the two held a ten-minute conversation. Mussolini comitnued on by train to Rome while the King motored back to San Rossore.

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, Sept. 30.—Premier Mussolini, accompanied by Count Galeazzo Ciano, his foreign minister, returned from Munich to Rome this evening amid tumultous enthusiasm. He was strangely taciturn and spoke only three sentences from the historic balcony on the Piazzo Venezia.

He was welcomed with spontaneous demonstrations of delight and affection, surpassing anything Italy has seen since the war.

Il Duce's car, escorted by two motorcycle police and followed by cars with Count Ciano and members of the cabinet, reached the Palazzo Venezia at 6:15. Ten thousand people, massed in the squares, applauded freniedly.

Five minutes later Il Duce stepped out on the balcony, turned and reentered the palace. He came out again and the crowds insisted he speak for the third time. Then, apparently reluctantly, he spoke.

"Comrades," he said, "you have lived through memorable hours. At Munich we labored for peace with justice. Is not this the ideal of the Italian people?" A thunderous "si" answered him. Then he raised his right hand in salute, turned abruptly and returned to the palace. His speech was ended. It had lasted barely 15 seconds. Never since fascism began has so momentous an event been consecrated so briefly and simply.

Thieves Loot Car And 2 Homes Here

Thieves yesterday entered the home of Bertha Rotbart, 4833 Third street northwest, and made off with jewelry and clothing valued at $54. Mrs. Rotbart told police she suspected a former maid.

Meanwhile, Thomas Elias, manager of a delicatessen store, 1100 block Seventh street northwest, was held up and robbed by a young colored man who escaped on foot with 60 cents in change.

David Brackenridge, of Buffalo, N. Y., reported thieves entered his car, parked in front of a downtown hotel, through the ventilator window and stole clothing valued at $25. Joseph Small, 803 N street northwest, reported to police clothing valued at $80 was stolen from his home.

Funeral Rites Planned Today For Mrs. Rickey

Funeral services for Mrs. Virginia O. Rickey, 66, wife of Harry N. Rickey, former editor of the Washington Daily News, who died Thursday at the Washington Sanitarium, will be held today at 11 a. m. in the Chapel of the Resurrection in the Washington Cathedral. Mrs. Rickey died after a long illness.

The Rev. James Henderson, rector of St. Alban's School for Boys, will officiate at the services. Burial will be private.

A native of Decatur, Ill., Mrs. Rickey was educated in the public schools there and for many years was chief of the reference division at the Cleveland, Ohio, Public Library. Mrs. Rickey married her husband in that city, where he was editor of the Cleveland Press.

She came to Washington 15 years ago and made her home at the Shoreham Hotel. A charter member of the National Women's Democratic Club, Mrs. Rickey was a former member of that organization's board of governors.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Rickey leaves a daughter, Mrs. Henry Bellows, of Minneapolis, and a son, John M. Rickey, of New York.

Catholics Plan Hurney Tribute

Tomorrow at the evening service at the Church of the Immaculate Conception a new altar to our Lady of Lourdes will be dedicated by the Rev. John K. Cartwright, pastor.

A memorial to the Rev. Francis J. Hurney, late pastor of the church and director of the Washington Catholic Radio Hour, the altar has been financed by contributions from his parishioners and friends and is being dedicated on the fifth anniversary of his death. The Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., will preach the memorial sermon.

Sheads Murder Still Mystery; 'Break' Is Hoax

Two Washington detectives traveled all the way to Hackensack, N. J., yesterday, to hear detective stories.

They rushed to Hackensack on information a man there knew something about the Mary E. Sheads murder of four years ago. When they got there they found their quarry knew nothing of the crime except what he'd read in detective story magazines and newspapers.

Ferdinand Hopp, 50, of Riverdale, N. J., told authorities he had information about the strangling of Miss Sheads, retired school teacher, in her apartment in the 2000 block of Sixteenth street northwest in May, 1934.

Detective Sergts. Aubrey M. Tolson and Jeremiah Flaherty took a signed statement from Hopp before leaving Hackensack. Police said this statement admitted several petty crimes, all of which were found to be imaginary.

Daladier Calls Parliament to Ratify Pact

500,000 Cheer Premier
Cabinet Approves Plan
Troops Being Recalled

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Sept. 30.—Premier Daladier, strengthened by a rush of public support as he returned today from the four-power conference at Munich, summoned Parliament for an extraordinary session Tuesday to ratify his part in the sacrifice of Czechoslovakia for the sake of general peace.

A demonstration of enthusiasm that compared favorably to that for Col. Charles A. Lindbergh on his flight here in 1927 greeted the premier upon his arrival at Le Bourget air field at 3:55 p. m., after a two-hour and 35 minute flight from Munich.

The premier hastily summoned his cabinet to deliver a report on his mission. The ministers, who had split sharply over the international crisis, united to approve his action unanimously.

Parliament Called

Parliament then was called for Tuesday. Political sources said the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate probably would meet only for a single day to receive the ministerial declaration on the crisis. The cabinet will meet Tuesday morning.

The government ordered recall of reserve troops who had been mobilized during the Czechoslovak crisis. Officials said the recall would take place progressively "at a rate foreseen for the security of the national defense." More than 1,000,000 reserves had been summoned to the colors.

Despite murmurs of discontent in left wing circles over dismemberment of Czechoslovakia, which once was the mainstay of France's central European alliances, the government was expected to win a vote of confidence.

500,000 Cheer Premier

The great surge of joy which swept the country after the four-power Munich accord took expression in the cheers of nearly 500,000 persons who welcomed the premier home.

Daladier made a triumphal entry into Paris, driving through 5 miles of flower-strewn streets echoing to deafening cheers. Many women became hysterical with joy as his auto while passed.

At the airport crowds broke through police lines, crying "Peace! Peace!" as they rushed to greet him. Daladier said to them:

"The negotiations certainly were difficult, but I have the deep conviction that the accord which was concluded was indispensable to maintenance of peace in Europe.

"I also am certain today that, thanks to the desire to give mutual concessions and a spirit of collaboration which animated the action of the four western powers, peace is preserved."

Conclusion of the Munich accord aroused hopes that France would soon patch up her strained relations with Italy. France has had no ambassador in Rome since late in 1936, when Count de Chambrun resigned, because of France's refusal to formally recognize Italy's conquest of Ethiopia.

The Republican Federation of Conservative Deputies adopted a motion declaring "it is indispensable for consolidation of peace that normal diplomatic relations be re-established between France and Italy."

Bourse Reflects Relief

Reports circulated in the Chamber of Deputies that Francois Pietri, a Corsican and former cabinet minister, would be sent to Rome as Ambassador, accredited to the Italian King as Emperor of Ethiopia, as Italy demands.

The press and public statements expressed gratitude to Daladier and Prime Minister Chamberlain of Britain, and to President Roosevelt for his peace pleas.

Relief was reflected on the Bourse, where the franc closed at 36.85 to the dollar, up from 37.55 yesterday and 38.90 Wednesday.

The United States Lines announced that dozens of Americans who had taken passage on the liner Washington sailing tonight from Le Havre had canceled their reservations. All passengers, it was stated, now could be accommodated in staterooms instead of in emergency quarters, as had been planned.

Dissension within the cabinet itself disappeared in the general rejoicing over the Munich accord. Three ministers who had tendered their resignations in protest against even milder treatment of Czechoslovakia than that agreed upon at Munich aligned themselves with the rest of the cabinet in congratulating Daladier.

'Nazi Organ' Urges Support For A. F. of L.

Other Groups Listed
District Organ Listed
Dieckhoff Denies Link

By the Associated Press.

A pamphlet, described to the House committee on "un-American" activities yesterday as a "Nazi propaganda" organ, listed the American Federation of Labor as an organization that should be supported and from which literature could be obtained.

John C. Metcalfe, committee investigator, said he wished to call particular attention to Nazi propaganda originating with the American Nationalist Confederation, because it presented a list of names under this heading:

"Organizations which you should support and from whom you can secure literature."

In addition to the A. F. of L., the pamphlet listed:

The New Federalist, Wichita, Kans., edited by the Rev. Gerald B. Winrod, defeated candidate for the Republican nomination to the United States Senate; Pelley Publishers, Asheville, N. C., edited by William Dudley Pelley, chief of the Silver Shirts; Industrial Control Reports, Washington, published by James True Associates; the Patriot, London, England; the Examiner, Nelwon, New Zealand, and the Berlin Weekly, Berlin, Germany.

The committee and the German Embassy became involved in a controversy over whether any connection existed between the German government's representatives in this country and the German-American Bund.

Metcalfe testified Thursday Fritz Kuhn, Bund leader, had told him there was such a link. Dr. Hans Dieckhoff, German Ambassador, went to the State Department yesterday, and, the embassy reported, told Undersecretary Sumner Welles in substance:

"The German government has always taken the point of view that the Amerika-Deutscher Volksbund is to be considered as a purely American affair. There has never existed any open or secret 'understanding' between the Bund and the German Ambassador, or the German consulates."

Discussing Bund finances, investigator Metcalfe said wealthy German-Americans gave money secretly to the organization, that it was "understood" in Bund circles that "some prominent American industrialists" make contributions, and that Bund officials had admitted receiving funds from the German government.

The Bund and Kuhn profess poverty, he said. But witnesses have testified secretly to a sub-committee, he said, that Kuhn spends $25 to $50 a night, three or four nights a week, "becoming one of New York's men about town and habitue of night clubs."

Metcalfe said Kuhn intended to spend $2,000,000 on a building in or near New York City for the Bund's national headquarters.

Elizalde Is Sworn In As Philippine Official

Joaquin M. Elizalde, newly appointed commissioner from the Philippines, was sworn in at the War Department yesterday in the presence of Secretary Woodring.

Elizalde, who left immediately for New York said he would return to Washington next week to take charge of the office recently vacated by former Resident Commissioner Quintin Paredes.

Crisis Settled, Roosevelt Goes to Hyde Park Tonight

President, Relieved, Remains Watchful
Aides in State Department Praised
Hull Urges Work Toward Lasting Peace

President Roosevelt, by arranging to leave the Capital tonight for a rest at his Hyde Park home, attested last night his confidence that the European crisis was at an end. But still carefully watching the European situation, he conferred again yesterday with Secretary of State Hull, and then met his Cabinet.

Hull said the accord reached in Munich had brought with it a sense of relief, but now the statesmen of Europe should work together for a lasting peace.

"It is to be hoped," he said, "that in any event the forces which stand for the principles governing peaceful and orderly international relations and their proper application should not relax, but redouble their efforts to maintain these principles of order under law, resting on a sound economic foundation."

Real Crisis This Time

At his press conference, Mr. Roosevelt said that tense situations sometimes arise which are incorrectly termed crises. This was not true of the situation abroad a few days ago, he added, for that was a real crisis.

He took occasion to praise the State Department and American diplomats abroad for their activities during the war threat. He called their work a fine example of successful team play.

During the day, Treasury officials expressed confidence that the Nation's business machinery would provide an orderly withdrawal of the $600,000,000 of foreign money which the war scare sent to the United States.

Asked whether this country had received any request to participate in the international commission which will police areas in Sudetenland during the process of German occupation, Mr. Roosevelt recalled that a note had been received from the Czech government Thursday afternoon.

Pact Changed Situation

The note asked this country, through the President, to arbitrate the situation in event the four-power conference at Munich failed.

The European situation was changed almost before the note was received, the Chief Executive recalled, by agreement of the four powers at Munich.

Asked whether he now considered it unnecessary to answer the Czech note, the President said this question properly should go to the State Department.

Appearing relaxed after his tense week of studying the European situation, Mr. Roosevelt told reporters he planned tentatively to leave tonight for Hyde Park. He said he would remain there only a few days.

Tear Gas Fired As Students Riot

Ann Arbor, Mich., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Police fired 20 rounds of tear gas bombs tonight in an attempt to disperse a crowd of 1,200 University of Michigan students who stormed the downtown section and lit huge bonfires at street intersections following a pep rally in Hill Auditorium.

As the officers drove the crowd back, more fires were set. About ten were reported blazing in and around the campus. No serious damage was reported.

Foreign Brigade Moved to Rear

Barcelona, Sept. 30 (AP).—The Spanish government's International Brigade has been moved far behind the lines in preparation for dismissal from the army, in keeping with Premier Juan Negrin's decision to dispense with foreign troops.

Six officers, it was disclosed today, have been raised in rank for distinguished service on the Ebro front in lower Catalonia.

Among them is Donald Thayer, Rochester, Minn., promoted from lieutenant to captain.

Insurance Chief Sees Long Peace

The four-power agreement at Munich assures European peace for 10 years, Harold V. Smith, president of the Home Insurance Co., of New York, who returned two weeks ago from a three-month tour of Europe, said yesterday.

Smith said consultations with well-informed persons in Czechoslovakia, Germany, Italy and other nations had satisfied him that if the Sudeten problem were surmounted a broad and enduring settlement would be possible.

He spoke at a luncheon given at the Carlton Hotel by George E. Allen, former District Commissioner and now a vice president of the Home Insurance Co., to more than 100 Washington, Virginia and Maryland agents.

League Ends Session, Acts to Appease Reich

Non-Member Overtures Won't Act on Japan
Spain Group Named

By the Associated Press.

Geneva, Sept. 30.—The League of Nations closed its fall sessions tonight with definite overtures toward Germany.

The assembly adopted a resolution to separate the League Covenant from the Versailles Treaty, long the focus of German indignation, and the council voted to send a copy to Germany as well as to the United States and other non-member states.

The council also decided to send to Berlin and other capitals without representatives at Geneva copies of an assembly resolution calling for closer co-operation between the League and non-member nations.

The League at the same time softened its tone toward Japan, another of the major powers which have abandoned Geneva.

China's appeal for punitive measures against Japan brought only a resolution for individual action by League members if they desired—but all made plain they would not act.

In response to China's appeal, the council adopteed another resolution inviting the nations represented at Geneva or on the Far Eastern committee to investigate individually charges of the use of poison gas by Japanese forces in China.

A committee made up of representatives of Britain, France and Iran was appointed at the request of government Spain to "take note" of the release of foreign volunteers which the Barcelona government has offered to do.

2 Hours to Live, Saved From Chair

Boston, Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Oscar Bartolini, 52, Quincy chef, was saved from the electric chair two hours before his scheduled execution tonight by a postponement order from Acting Gov. Francis E. Kelly.

Bartolini was condemned to die for the murder two years ago of Mrs. Grayce Griffin Asquith, 41-year-old Weymouth widow.

Taxes Here Come To $2,559,482 As Deadline Ends

As yesterday's deadline for the payment of real estate and personal taxes came to a close, Tax Collector C. M. Towers counted $2,559,482 in cash and checks for the day's receipts.

Thirteen cashiers tallied more than 8,500 single payments in the office yesterday and labored several hours overtime sorting out bundles of payments brought through the mails.

Towers said the payments represented, in most cases, one-half of the yearly bill. The other half is due in April.

Beginning today taxpayers who failed to get in under the deadline will be assessed an additional 1 per cent for each month the payment is overdue.

To receive a reduction from the business privilege tax, which is due in November, taxpayers were required to make their personal tax payments on time. This tax is deductible from the privilege tax.

Russians Feel War Has Only Been Postponed

Special Cable to The Post.

Moscow, Sept. 30.—Although the four-power conference at Munch closed last night too late for official comment in Moscow's newspapers, Soviet citizens felt profound disappointment today, although the government had predicted capitulation by Prime Minister Chamberlain of Great Britain.

Most Russians feel small relief at the idea that "peace has been preserved"—first, because they were convinced Reichsfueher Hitler's "bluff" of going to war would have collapsed before any solid opposition and that Germany at present could not afford any major war; and second, because they are still convinced war has been postponed only at short time.

Bandits Get $50; $260 Stolen From Munsey Trust

Armed bandits last night netted about $50 in two holdups in Southwest Washington, while police reported theft of $260 from the Munsey Trust Co.

Ida Lipsky, 36, told police a colored man threatened her with a pistol and took about $50 from the cash register at her store, 901 F street northwest. A few minutes later an armed colored man, accompanied by a second man, took 65 cents from the store of Abraham Milloff, 31, 400 Third street southwest.

Christopher Pope, president of the Munsey Trust, said a white man snatched $260 in bills from a cashier's cage while the cashier was using the telephone and escaped about 2 p. m.

Miss Leah Rudolph, 3712 Military road northwest, lost cash and valuables worth $5 when a young white man snatched her pocketbook in front of her home, and escaped in a car driven by a companion. Joseph E. Malton, 249 Eighth street northeast, found his pocketbook and $40 gone after a colored man jostled him in a street car.

Lehman And Dewey

In his address accepting the Republican nomination for the governorship of New York State, Thomas E. Dewey indirectly answered many of the critics who have asserted that his preoccupation with problems of law enforcement had dulled his perception of other basically important issues.

Although emphasizing the necessity of law enforcement, Mr. Dewey admitted that "law enforcement alone, even effective, efficient, honest law enforcement, is a negative thing." Its value lies in the restoration of popular confidence in the power and integrity of the State. Thereafter, as Mr. Dewey fully realizes, it is essential to eradicate the causes of lawlessness, to deal with the economic catastrophes which destroy individuals through no fault of their own.

The fact that Gov. Lehman has accepted the Democratic nomination, obviously under extreme pressure, is a tribute to Mr. Dewey's strength as a candidate for the highest office which the people of the State can bestow. In Gov. Lehman he will have an able and experienced opponent who will test to the full the ability of the Republican nominee to develop and defend a program of constructive reform good enough to carry him to victory. And the same applies in reverse.

One effective argument in support of his own candidacy has already been presented most persuasively by Mr. Dewey. That is the fact that, however able and personally above reproach a Democratic Governor of New York State may be, he cannot completely emancipate himself from the old-line Tammany machine politicians of New York City.

Wisely Mr. Dewey has reserved a detailed outline of his plan of campaign. But he has indicated that he does not propose to decry the real achievements of preceding Democratic administrations. Nor does he intend to apologize for the shortsighted, obstructionist tactics of certain Republican elements in the State Legislature.

"It is the job of a majority party," he said, "to build, not to tear down; to go forward, not to obstruct."

These generalizations, of course, need to be embodied in a program of action. But they already provide assurance that the Republican nominee for Governor of New York State is not, as some skeptics have asserted, preparing to rely solely upon his admirable record as a public prosecutor to carry him to victory in November.

Ugaki Resigns

Almost 15 months have elapsed since the undeclared Sino-Japanese war began, and the end is still out of sight.

Expectations in Tokyo are that the fall of Hankow, long asserted to be imminent, would bring a decided change in the situation. Even if it did not directly lead to the collapse of the Chiang Kai-shek regime, which few outside of Japan believe, capture of Hankow might make it possible for the Japanese to begin consolidating the vast gains of territory they have made.

This promise of soon being able to get some return for the vast expenditures of men and treasure which the prolonged war has entailed has buoyed Japanese hopes. And it has also intensified the old struggle between the extremist military elements on the one hand and the moderates on the other.

The extremists hope to extend to North China and other conquered areas the same army-dominated system of exploitation that to an increasing degree characterizes Japan's rule in Manchukuo. The moderates, supported by powerful commercial and financial groups in Japan, are resisting that demand.

A symbol of this struggle, and an indication that the extremists are winning out, is the resignation of Gen. Ugaki, the foreign minister. Although an army man himself, he has never been regarded with favor by the army radicals. Recently he has disagreed sharply with the extremist-dominated administration of the new China Affairs Board.

But the circumstance that his place, at least as foreign minister (he also held the post of overseas minister) will be taken by Premier Konoye suggests that the struggle against fascism in Japan is not yet entirely lost.

The Issue For America

Czechoslovakia's Declaration of Independence was drafted in this city of Washington on October 18, 1918. Shortly afterward it was formally proclaimed by President Masaryk, at Independence Hall in Philadelphia, in a statement which closed by saying that "thus it came to pass that American democracy, and democracy in general, buried the Hapsburg monarchy."

Now, 20 years later, it has come to pass that American democracy, and democracy in general, has buried the Czechoslovak republic as Masaryk knew it. Americans who took pride in this creation must not shrink from accepting their share of responsibility for the collapse. That responsibility is heavy. It would be cowardly and contemptible to attribute our share of the blame to others.

While the independence of Czechoslovakia was announced here, it was actually established by the Treaty of Versailles, to which the United States refused to be a party. Then and there, assuming the rebirth of a powerful, militaristic Germany, the doom of the infant republic was indicated. This doom became probable when Italy also deserted the Versailles structure, leaving its maintenance to France and Great Britain alone. And doom became certain when these two powers, in the crisis, decided against fighting to maintain a settlement which Italy had abandoned and which the United States had renounced.

By one of those ironic contradictions which prove that man is an emotional rather than a reasoning animal the last two powers to abandon the Versailles settlement are now being roundly condemned in the country which was the first to adopt that course.

This is to be expected and, indeed, as an emotional safety valve is not altogether undesirable. Many an individual is currently transferring to Chamberlain and Daladier objurgations which otherwise might be directed against his wife, the boss, the capitalist system or what-have-you. But it also remains noteworthy that many of those who are today most shrill in their abuse of Anglo-French perfidy were, 20 years ago, equally abusive of the treaty which these countries have now liquidated. Of such illogic is the American mind compact.

The current emotional outbreak, however, has its very serious side. It is likely to blind opinion to the magnitude of the issues which now lie directly ahead. Thereby it is likely to prevent the United States, where foreign policy is so largely determined by public opinion, from playing any but a negligible or even destructive role in determining the future.

To understand how great these undetermined issues are one must briefly summarize the essentials of the situation today. Hitler has gained a very real victory. But it is far less of a victory than he might very probably have gained from the war he was prepared to fight, and in which the United States, for all its interest in the issue, was not prepared to oppose him. The solution reached is a compromise, not least from the viewpoint of Czechoslovakia, now saved from the complete annihilation which threatened. And on the basis of this compromise the British and French are now endeavoring to build a new peace system.

The first positive sign of this comes from Geneva, where the League Assembly yesterday approved recommendations divorcing the Covenant of the League of Nations from the Treaty of Versailles. The living, albeit sickly, member of these Siamese twins is to be saved from interment with its defunct brother. There is good reason to expect that the difficult operation will be successful. The part ordained for a league of nations in the modern world is so enormous that rehabilitation of the functioning Geneva organization seems highly probable.

And this is only one of many similar portents. The amputated frontiers of Czechoslovakia are to be guaranteed, thus maintaining the essential part of this barrier against the German Drang Nach Osten. Hitler, believe him or not, has pledged his word that Germany's territorial ambitions in Europe are now satisfied. Great Britain and Germany have signed an accord which makes the re-entry of Germany into a league no longer overshadowed by Versailles a real possibility. And such a league might really end aggression. Great events are in flux. Great changes are in motion.

That they will involve injustice in some directions, blunders in others, risks in all, is inevitable. But that they also hold the promise of a really stabilized peace in Europe is obvious to every intelligent observer. From the sultry, oppressive atmosphere of the last 20 years has developed — slowly but surely — a cataclysmic storm which has now broken. There is wreckage in its wake—a wreckage trivial compared with that of war. There is also a clearer atmosphere. Will the opportunity be taken to rebuild constructively, or will it not?

Nobody knows. But the opportunity is certainly at hand. And the question Americans should ask themselves today is—what of our part at this juncture? What do we—the world's most powerful nation—have to contribute to the solution of this world problem?

It is up to us. We can say "hands off" and let developments in Europe take their own way. We can say "this is our problem too" and help to mould the future closer to our desires. The one course we must not follow is to participate in the resettlement while refusing any responsibility for the outcome.

That was what we did in 1917-1919, when we won the war and lost the peace. The result was 20 years of ghastly travail in Europe, ending in the explosion of which the echoes will long reverberate. That this explosion was not worse is no credit to us. We laid the mine and then withdrew 3,000 miles to watch.

A Secretary Of Welfare?

A few years ago when catastrophes of great magnitude exhausted the resources of local relief agencies, the Red Cross was the outstanding organization relied upon to furnish outside aid. It is still vital in this field; it still appeals to the public for voluntary contributions which are always used constructively for the victims of misfortune. But gradually, almost without public recognition of the fact, the WPA has come to be regarded as an outstanding agency for executing emergency tasks formerly left to private relief.

In addition to providing jobs for the unemployed, Administrator Hopkins has assumed responsibility for relieving the distress caused by storms and floods. After the recent New England hurricane, he made a tour of the devastated areas and then announced that unlimited Federal funds would be available for the rehabilitation of the six New England States and part of New York. He also promised that the red tape of the Federal relief agencies would be cut and local State administrators empowered to hire men and spend money without restriction.

Mr. Hopkins is now preparing to survey the damage done to Charleston by a destructive tornado. WPA relief forces, it is reported, are being expanded hourly and, it is added, the Red Cross is also participating in the work of rehabilitation. Of course, under conditions like those prevailing in the stricken regions visited by Mr. Hopkins, one expects every public and private agency to press able-bodied men into service to relieve distress and suffering. Indeed, in view of the numerous disasters that have brought death and destruction to widely separated areas within the last few years, it begins to look as if we needed a mobile force of Federal relief workers capable of being drafted into service anywhere at short notice.

However, if we are to have a permanent agency of this sort it certainly should not be recruited entirely from WPA relief rolls. Many relief workers are not fitted to undertake the heavy work of rebuilding roads, replacing bridges, repairing sewerage systems and clearing away wreckage.

Under the rejected Senate reorganization bill, provision would have been made for the creation of a department of welfare charged with innumerable duties, among them administration of laws relating to public health and sanitation, relief of the unemployed and of the needy and distressed. Mr. Hopkins has repeatedly asserted that in his opinion aid for the unemployed is a Federal responsibility. Furthermore, he thinks that unemployment is a permanent problem, not a passing manifestation due to depression. Consequently, if Congress should ever vote to establish a department of welfare he no doubt expects that the WPA will become the spearhead of this new establishment.

When Congress assembles it may possibly consider some of the reorganization proposals desired by the President. Senator Clark, a bitter and effective critic of the omnibus reorganization bill, believes that the Legislature would be ready to approve many features of the reorganization plan if offered in the form of specific recommendations. In that case, the proposal to create a new executive department of public welfare might very well be accepted.

Meantime, Mr. Hopkins has quietly assumed a good many of the duties that would be assigned to the proposed secretary of welfare, without waiting for Congress to act.

A German scientist says he can make food of sawdust. We once knew a farmer who owned a cow that ate the entire sawdust from a medium-sized sawmill, but from what we seem to remember there were complaints about splinters in the milk.

An astronomer has found two more moons (Nos. 10 and 11) revolving around Jupiter. It would be our guess that Jupiterites spend a large part of their time writing songs and pitching woo.

An anthropologist says that in 100 years there will be no blondes left in this country. No doubt. Even now, it's mighty hard to leave one.

A physician recommends standing on the head to cure hiccups. But, Doc, usually when a man has hiccups he can hardly stand on his feet.

Short short poem: We hate a dictatah.

The European Crisis

Duce's Private Thoughts

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The premiers speaking for the two great European democracies at Munich are familiar with Mein Kampf.

They have observed the Reichsfuehrer enough to make an adequate diagnosis of this personality without being psychiatrists.

Of course, the Italian dictator, completing the quartet of the conference, will continue to maintain ostensible support of the German dictator during the discussion stage.

But Mussolini knows Mein Kampf by heart and it doubtless keeps him awake nights.

What observer can doubt that the Duce's combination of fear and jealousy of the Fuehrer demands in his heart and mind the realistic elimination of the latter?

Can it be possible that Chamberlain and Daladier will commit their nations to let the "First Soldier" of Germany enter the embattled walls of Czechoslovakia—on his promise to stay put and play fair?

Is it to be suspected that they could submit to such a handicap in the inevitable war of today or tomorrow?

Wanna bet that Benito wouldn't help to carry Adolf out of the limelight on a bier?

W. WEREWOLF.

Great Imperialist

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As the eleventh hour of world peace approaches I should like to speak a word in favor of the Prime Minister of Great Britain. In the days to follow, whether they be warlike or peaceful, tons of printed matter will be written praising Mr. Chamberlain. They will be cloyingly emotional, a release from the pent-up excitements of this decade's harrowing years. From Manchukuo to Munich writers will trace the underlying handiwork of the man who through "realism" was laboring tirelessly to save eventual world peace.

Mr. Chamberlain is a great statesman. That point seems beyond question now. But his motives spring from a different source than the humanitarianism of a Lincoln. He is, in the proudest sense of the word, a great imperialist deserving to rank above Hastings or Disraeli or his own father, Joseph Chamberlain, in the annals of the British Empire. For while they had to do with the carving of empire from a world only half awake to nationalism, Neville Chamberlain, if he prevails, is saving an empire from that most terrible of combinations, outside aggression and internal disintegration.

But to the peoples of the world more is involved than even this. Should the nations go to war after today's foregathering in Munich, Chamberlain will remain in history the last great European champion of the democratic tradition we know.

PRO PACE MUNDIS.
Washington, Sept. 29.

Power Politics

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let us not be too quick to take our hats off to the fat boys of the chancelleries foregathered in Munich. Let us not so soon forget with what alacrity these same boys were ready to sacrifice on the Fascist block the independence of Czechoslovakia and, ultimately, the liberties of mankind. The devious ways of the negotiators will bear watching to the last.

"Hypocrisy" (read, diplomacy) "is the compliment which vice pays to virtue." It is not unreasonable to suspect that the apparent change of heart exhibited by the statesmanship of imperialism was dictated by the spontaneous roar of world protest against the attempted murder of the Czechoslovak nation. Thus checkmated, the fine Italian hand of diplomatic intrigue resorts to the more subtle gesture of the Munich conference. But this conference, I fear, is only a feint, a gilded curtain to hide the sordid realities of power politics.

As Walter Lippmann consistently intimates, the inexorable verities of capitalistic economics compel only a robber's solution to the difficulties in which the glorified spoilsmen now meeting in Munich find themselves. This solution can be found only at the expense of peoples of lesser might. Else how are we to understand their cold-blooded refusal to invite Czechoslovakia to the conference?

However, the conferees may be reckoning without the latent furies which the object of their rapacity may yet loose. During periods of social upheaval the political education of the forgotten man is accelerated with the speed of a locomotive. For never were the hitherto dormant political sensibilities of the masses of the world more alert and aroused than at the present time. The gathering momentum was first seen in Premier Benito Baloney's rape of Ethiopia, and vivisection of living Spain. Its impact upset the applecart at Berchtesgaden and may upset it again at Munich. JULIUS DAVIDSON.

Other People's Blood

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is not a blast aimed exclusively at humanity's friend, Herr Adolf; nor yet is it a handclasp across the well-placed Atlantic.

But the recent unpleasantness has brought up again the matter of these dictators' liberality with human blood—the blood of others. To show what tough mugs they consider themselves, between helpings of iron filings and bites of scrap iron washed down by muriatic acid diluted with vitriol, they yell:

"Give in? Make concessions? Never. What is life without honor, a dictator's throne without territory? I must dazzle the people. Rather would I fight till my objectives are won, if it costs me the last ounce of your blood. Heil!"

But then, what's a few million splashings of blood weighed in the balance against victory or a dictator's prestige? You've guessed it—no more than a crocodile tear dropped on the gore-soaked battle front. J. WINSTEAD.

Proposes Boycott

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Months ago I warned against travel in Europe, particularly in Germany and Italy. Now Americans are anxiously trying to get out of Europe, afraid of German bombs from the air and torpedoes which may sink boats in the middle of the ocean. As long as central Europe is dominated by a group of unscrupulous adventurers and blackmailers there will be no peace in the world. The dollars carried by Americans to Germany and Italy are used for guns and poisonous gas to terrify other peace-loving nations. No cent to countries terrorizing the world by criminals and maniacs! Boycott them, don't buy their products! Don't help them to destroy civilization. W. G. BRADY.

"The Hitlerized Mind"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post merits the sincere thanks of us all for publishing the letter of Carl A. Neibling in its issue of September 27.

The letter gives a fine cross-section of the Hitlerized mind. He is the president of the German League, but does not represent the cream of the German population of this country who left Germany for more freedom for themselves and for their children and grandchildren. This block of Germans has taken a fine hold of the spirit which animates our citizenry and are truly a part of it.

Such a mind as the one in question should be allowed to publish its views to give us a chance to study its anatomy in cross-section. PEQUOT.

Writing On The Wall

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of September 29 says: "Europe's 'Big Four' Meet Today to Decide for Peace or War." Yet the country to be dismembered, the country most deeply concerned in this hasty affair, is not represented! What right has England or France to hand over any portion of territory, not their own, to Adolf Hitler, the dictator?

We all admire the efforts of Mr. Chamberlain and also the message of our President in trying to move Hitler to settle this question of the disposal of the Sudetenland by arbitration, instead of by force. And of all persons—Mussolini, the robber and assaulter of an innocent country—("Ethiopia is Italia") is called as a mediator! What a fine chance now for justice for Czechoslovakia!

This all reminds me of Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream in the writing on the wall: "God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it. Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting. (Mussolini). Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians."

Remember our President's words: "Victory and defeat were alike sterile. That lesson the world should have learned." But when will it? When will the nations of this world become "civilized?" When will they endeavor to bring heaven on earth and good will to men, instead of hell? H. B. BRADFORD.
Bethesda, Md., Sept. 29.

Another Ultimatum!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Hitler can claim the Sudeten areas, Maryland can certainly claim Washington, D. C., back, too. Now that the Nation's Capital has such valuable property in it the people of Maryland would benefit to a great extent. Maryland has just as much right—if not more—to the area which was appropriated for the Capital of the United States.

I have heard that the Congress of the United States is taxing the Washingtonians beyond all reason. District of Columbia citizens aren't allowed to vote for their own President. They have to tolerate visitors from every corner of the world. This treatment of a people is unfair and unjust. Therefore as a citizen of Maryland I demand that Washington, D. C., be given back to Maryland. We are the people to take care of these poor unfortunates. They need us and our protection.

Furthermore, if we don't get the District of Columbia back before December 31, 5938, there will be war. We believe the R. O. T. C. of the University of Maryland to be vastly superior to the high school cadets of the District. I hope that the people of Washington realize the truth and will agitate for a warlike settlement of this peaceful problem. JOSEPH SCHMUTZ.
College Park, Md., Sept. 29.

"Un-American" Attitudes

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As a neutral observer of public opinion during the last war and during the present crisis, I come to the conclusion that our people have yet to learn how to think as Americans and how to act Americans, when England is in dispute with another country.

The attitude of our press and the majority of our citizens of British lineage is not that of Americans, but of British colonists.

To be American is to be neutral toward any foreign country. As we are trying to practice the good neighbor policy on this continent, likewise should we practice the same policy toward any oversea country.

Because if we don't, and keep on discriminating against other governments, we risk to lose the friendship we have so carefully built up on this continent. CHARLES LUCAS.

The Post Impressionist

Reception

THE TAXI, which looks positively vulgar in the long line of limousines . . . The magnificent flunkey at the door who doesn't seem to hear your tentative "Good afternoon" . . . the woman who breathlessly wants to know which corner of a calling card should be turned down . . . the conviction, as you glance about the crowded cloakroom, that the mink must surely be extinct by now . . . The mingled scents of Chanel's Gardenia and Evening in Paris.

The announcer who improvises on the syllables of the name you have told him . . . the smiles of your hosts, which half an hour hence will look as though they had been turned on, like a faucet . . . The baffled look on the face of the guest of honor . . . The floor-length dresses . . . The masses of chrysanthemums.

The anxious glance around the room in search of a friend . . . The sickening realization that the premier bore of the world is bearing down on you . . . The cracking sensation which spreads over your face as you muster a smile to greet her . . . The muttered "must-get-a-cup-of-tea-can-I-bring-you-one?" by which you escape.

The jeweled hands with crimson nails clawing at the platters on the buffet . . . The rolled sandwiches with the withered watercress end . . . The little sausages on toothpicks . . . The woman who says unhappily, "If I'd known we were going to get this kind of food I wouldn't have stinted myself at the first party this afternoon."

The tremendous effort to be hearty . . . The cracking sensation again . . . The impression that all these people have a great many more teeth than is normal.

The decision to discard the attempt at a hearty manner for the light, gay approach . . . The rapid degeneration into coyness . . . The further drooping of the watercress . . . The muscles which begin to twitch from the strain of balancing a cup, a glove, a cake, a handbag and a cigarette.

The gradual disintegration of one's resolution to drink nothing stronger than tea . . . The pleasure at the sight of a friend, closely followed by complete paralysis of the conversational powers . . . The effort to think of an opening remark less ponderous than "What did you think of Chamberlain's policy?"

The first glass of champagne . . . The futile attempt to fix the wandering eye of the person you're addressing . . . The moving mass of silver fox which turns out to be the wife of a new Congressman . . . The hole in the stocking of the most important dowager in town.

The Ambassador's wife who enters cheerily, tours the room in 3 minutes flat, and goes out again . . . The inviting sofas in the study, which is disouragingly empty . . . The newspaperman all by himself in a corner trying to look cynical, but succeeding merely in appearing uncomfortable . . . The diplomat who struggles to be genial through a haze of incomprehensible English . . . That watercress again.

The debutante looking self-conscious and accompanied by a proud mother . . . The debutante trying to look tough . . . The toy hat on the woman with the lantern jaw . . . The second glass of champagne.

The footman hired for the occasion who has had one too many . . . The man behind the punchbowl, whose vaguely familiar face haunts you until you realize he used to bring around the clean towels in an office where you once worked . . . The woman who says smugly "I always try to be especially nice to the Japanese at parties."

That odd foreign count who keeps wolfing the sandwiches.

The inability to think of anything to say . . . The desperate return to the ponderous cliche . . . The feeling that it really wouldn't matter if you remained silent . . . The third glass of champagne.

The final sinking into a hard gilt chair to rest and survey the proceedings . . . The unwelcome approach of the polite person who feels you are being neglected and comes dutifully and unwillingly to sit beside you . . . The feeling that he feels he is stuck with you . . . The creaking sound as you get to your feet and chirp hollowly, "Shall we get some sandwiches?"

The crooked finger poised over the fragile teacup . . . The watercress beginning to turn brown at the edges . . . The commencement of indigestion . . .

The fourth glass of champagne.

Heaven-Sent Hamilton

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That the Lord loves the Republican party is convincingly attested in that, in the present interregnum when a national chairman could be of no possible use, He sent us John Daniel Miller Hamilton as a figurehead to rattle around in the office where an able chairman would be merely wearing himself out to no purpose.

Thus all the chairmanship material is being providentially conserved pending "der tag," which is being hastened by New Deal bunglingly-wasteful activities.

The situation parallels that of Abraham who, when about to sacrifice his son Isaac, turned and saw a ram whose horns were entangled in a thornbush, and sacrificed the animal instead of his son. The part of Abraham is played by the Republican party.

A HOPEFUL REPUBLICAN.

'Causeless' War

WILL ROGERS used to say that this country couldn't go to war just now "because we haven't got a slogan." And, for all Mussolini's talk of going to war for Germany, he finds himself in a similar fix. Mussolini hasn't even the shadow of a grievance or a cause to offer the Italian people, who when the cheering dies down, would have to do the suffering and dying in person. There are no Sudeten Italians, and all the Italians who once clamored for Anschluss with Italy were rescued after 1918.

Nobody has been bending the Italian frontiers anywhere, and, indeed, the object of the alteration or correction of frontiers should be particularly touching to Italians in view of the fact that their frontiers now inclose territory which, in any readjustment consistent with the principles which the Duce recently flung at Czechoslovakia, would be ceded back to the rightful owners. Both the Duce and Hitler have conspicuously avoided mention of the God-created Germans who have known the true meaning of persecution under Mussolini in the captured Tyrol, and Mussolini, in the press of bigger considerations, has had nothing to say about his captured Yugoslavs and his captive Greeks in the Dodecanese Islands.

MUSSOLINI always had made it plain that Italy, in war, has renounced her amateur standing. His main complaint against Britain and France has been that they gypped Italy of her fair share of the purse for the last World War, and he was again frankly professional when he went into Ethiopia. In the World War the spirit of the Italian people was nourished on the cause of their persecuted brothers in the lost provinces, and for the Ethiopian campaign they were fattened up on promises of milk and honey with a tasty side dish or vindication for a humiliating licking at Adowa, where a lot of wild men, with thumbs on their feet, fell on a whole division of Italy's finest and slaughtered them.

It was noticed that when the Duce sent his invincible legions to Spain to fight a people for whom they had no racial, traditional or even neighborly grudge they were not able to arouse the proper spirit. Indeed, the invincible legions came to be spoken of as the invisible legions, and, far from burnishing the golden eagle on the Duce's hat, they contributed to the vocabulary of sure-fire insults against the noisy pride of Fascism a word of painfully humiliating meaning—Guadalajara. The golden eagle became, in the eyes of the soldiers of the world, a tarnished brass buzzard, and all because Mussolini had neglected the first essential of war. He didn't give his invincible legions anything to be sore about or even anything to make them think they were sore.

THE SPANIARDS were not tampering with Italy's frontiers. There were no persecuted Italians in Spain. And, out of political delicacy, the Duce was unable to offer them even the sordid profit motive. He didn't dare tell them that they were fighting for a piece of Spain, because that would have turned even the Spanish rebels against them. So, altogether, what he did was drop a lot of ordinary week-end militia into a real war where they had neither a grievance nor a motive, with results which are too well known to the world for their own pride or the Duce's.

Now, Mussolini has been on the point of asking not only the Black Shirt militia but the whole Italian people to jump into a much greater war on the same tasteless terms to help a race of people whom they hate in their hearts and crush a people whose condition in life is almost exactly the same as their own is now and always has been.

• • • •

IN ALL THE THINGS that appeal to the sympathy of the Italian people—misfortune, suffering and poverty—Czechoslovakia is rich. The Nazis are rich in all the things that are vile to the nature of the Italians, in addition to which there exists, in spite of parades and excursions of tourists along the axis, a feeling of hatred on the Italian side and contempt on the side of the Germans.

As an outright, declared professional in war Mussolini has taught the Italians to fight for gate receipts, but in this contest he hasn't even been guaranteed their transportation and meals.

National Bank May Pay 17,000 Depositors in Full

Payment in full of 17,000 depositors of the District National Bank appeared a possibility yesterday after the District Court conditionally authorized Justus Wardell, receiver, to sell the building for $325,000.

The unpaid claims of depositors were estimated at about $300,000. The terms approved for the sale were $75,000 cash, with a five-year, first trust note for the remainder, which would be reduced $15,000 a year.

Chief Justice Alfred A. Wheat signed the order for the sale, which will become final October 14 unless objections to the transaction are filed before them. Prospective purchaser of the property is the Syldon Properties, Inc., which operates other realty enterprises here.

"Peace"—And Crisis Begins!

"PERHAPS the pacifist-humane idea is quite a good one in cases where the man at the top has first thoroughly conquered and subdued the world to the extent of making himself the sole master of it."—Adolf Hitler, in "Mein Kampf."

What happened on Friday is called "peace." Actually it is an international Fascist coup d'etat.

The "four-power accord" is not even a diplomatic document. It is certainly not a normal treaty. It is such a fantastic piece of paper that it is difficult to describe except as a hurriedly concocted armistice made in advance of a war to permit the occupation by German troops of a territory which by sheer threat and demonstration of force they have conquered by "agreement."

• • • •

ALL OF THE territory where there are more than 50 per cent of German-speaking peoples will be evacuated by the Czechoslovaks and occupied by the German army within ten days, although there are hundreds of thousands of people in this territory who are either not German or are anti-Nazi and therefore constitute a racial and political minority.

This document provides no protection whatsoever for their lives, their properties or their existences.

Not a clause indicates that they are to be protected in any manner from this occupation.

Those of us who know and have seen what the Nazi authorities do to political minorities realize that this can only result in a panicky flight into the interior of Czechoslovakia. It means the open establishment of terror.

• • • •

NO CONSIDERATION is paid anywhere in this fantastic document to the reapportionment of financial and industrial interests—banks or industries the ownership of which is not necessarily on the spot—and this in spite of the fact that the British and French governments know that in the occupation of Austria the property of political minorities, and in particular of Jews, was simply confiscated.

There is not the most elementary consideration of justice.

An international commission will determine further territories in which a plebiscite is to be held, and will fix the conditions.

THIS WILL GIVE plebiscites in areas containing more than 50 per cent Czechs, although no plebiscites will be held in areas containing more than 50 per cent Germans.

The pressure of the Nazis in contiguous territories occupied by German troops, their immense and cunningly organized propaganda, their house-by-house and name-by-name political organization; the ever-present threat that if the territories go German the political minorities will be exterminated, will assure the outcome of these plebiscites. One might just as well cede them to Germany in the first place.

Czechs and political minorities are given the right of option in and out of the ceded territories, but they must move within six months, and the conditions for exercising the option are left to a German-Czechoslovak commission, which simply means that they are left to the Germans, considering the relative power position.

COMPARED WITH this, the Treaty of Versailles is a great humane document and a normal and reasonable treaty.

The Treaty of Versailles allowed German nationals incorporated in the then new Czechoslovak state the option of Czech nationality. They were given two years in which to make a decision and then 12 months in which to exercise it—three years in all—and the treaty guaranteed their right to retain ownership of their landed property in the territory of the state that they left, guaranteed their right to carry with them movable property of every description, and prohibited the imposition of any export or import duties to be made upon them in connection with the removal of such property.

We know that the political minorities in Austria since the Nazi occupation have not been allowed to move anything, and that the property left behind by those who fled was confiscated in the form of an "emigration tax," a treatment of property usually described as Bolshevism.

• • • •

THE TREATY of Versailles was made after five months of deliberations, into which scores of experts were called—as experts and not as partisans.

But on Friday Czechoslovakia was disposed of by four men who in four hours made a judgment of the case in which the defendant was not even allowed to present a brief or be heard.

The very basis and spirit of Anglo-Saxon law was violated. What ruled that conference was Nazi law. Not one of the four men who thus arbitrarily disposed of a nation had ever set foot in Czechoslovakia, nor did any of them understand the others' language—except Mussolini. They had a German interpreter. They decided on the primary basis of a report issued by a man who also until two months ago had never spent any time at all in Czechoslovakia.

FURTHERMORE, Lord Runciman's report, though it recommends the ceding of the territories to Germapy, categorically denies that the Germans had ever been "terrorized," fixes the blame for the failure of negotiations on the Germans, states that at the time of his arrival many Sudetens still desired to remain in Czechoslovakia, and accused the Sudeten extremists, egged on by Germany, of provoking the demonstrations which, on the German side, were made an excuse for demanding armed occupation.

By every document of the British White Paper, Germany is shown to be guilty of provoking what was nearly an all-European war. And the punishment for this guilt is that she received everything that she was going to fight the war over.

• • • •

THIS "EVERYTHING" is more than the Sudeten territories. It is more than a free hand in the east. It is the domination of Europe.

It is a Fascist coup d'etat, involving not only Czechoslovakia but involving Great Britain and France.

In this whole affair, described as an attempt to keep peace, the democratic process has been completely suspended. In both Britain and France the facts have been suppressed by the exercise of government pressure on the controlled radio and on the newspapers. The people of England and France are confronted with a fait accompli without even being able to gain in advance possession of the facts on which it is based! The Runciman report was published the day before the fait accompli!

• • • •

NOT ONLY is Czechoslovakia dismembered—what is left is destroyed as a democratic republic. It will be utterly impossible for the new state to exist, under the conditions created, as anything except a military and semi-Fascist dictatorship. There will be no civil liberties. There will be enforced labor. There must be—in order to save the nation at all!

• • • •

THE WORLD TODAY is hailing Mr. Chamberlain as a prince of peace. But Mr. Chamberlain is actually the Von Papen of a coup d'etat which makes the one of 1933 trivial. Like Von Papen and Hugenberg, he apparently believes that conservatism can sleep in the same bed with Fascism. Mr. Chamberlain's kind of conservatism can only be swallowed by Fascism. Either Mr. Chamberlain is another Von Papen, the unwitting dupe and tool of a powerful conspiracy, or he is a fellow-conspirator.

• • • •

LET US NOT call this peace. Peace is not the absence of war. Peace is a positive condition—the rule of law.

This peace has been established on lawlessness and can only maintain itself by further lawlessness.

This peace has been established by dictatorship and can only maintain itself by further dictatorship.

This peace has been established on betrayal, and can only maintain itself by further betrayal.

"Peace," said Spinoza, "Is virtue caused by strength of spirit." This is not peace without victory, for the victory goes to Mr. Hitler.

This is peace without virtue. Therefore it is not peace—but the initiation of a terrific world crisis.

They Call It Peace

By Barnet Nover

Europe After Munich

AT MUNICH on Thursday a new world came into being. It is a world sired by violence and dammed by fear. But the midwives insist the infant is beautiful. They have named it Peace.

• • • •

FOR THE MOMENT there is intense and understandable relief over the fact that the war which threatened a few days ago has been averted, if at a tremendous cost. For the moment the deep sense of shame over the betrayal of Czechoslovakia is offset by the great hope that the sacrifice of that little republic will lead to real European appeasement.

This is the hope which Neville Chamberlain has brought back with him to London and which the very uneasy Daladier finds it necessary to proclaim to Paris. They have the consoling thought that it is far better for Czechoslovakia to submit to peaceful amputation rather than court almost certain obliteration. They can point to Hitler's promise that, with the cession of the Sudetenland, Germany has no further territorial ambitions in Europe. And Mr. Chamberlain for his part has the additional signed assurance of the Fuehrer that the Third Reich never again intends to go to war with Great Britain.

STRANGE THINGS have happaned in the world during recent years. It may be that as a result of the impending partition of Czechoslovakia Europe will be vouchsafed a real breathing spell. But is it likely? How much credence is to be given to Hitler's latest promises?

On January 30, 1934, the Fuehrer declared that after the solution of the Saar question "the German government is willing and determined to accept in its innermost soul, as well as external formulation, the pact of Locarno." A little over two years later German armies were marching into the demilitarized Rhineland.

On that occasion he said: "I have removed the question of the everlasting European revision of frontiers from the atmosphere of public discussion in Germany."

• • • •

HITLER'S ASSURANCES regarding his readiness to let Austria alone are also remembered. Less than two years after the German-Austrian treaty by which the Third Reich agreed to Austria's independence, German troops were moving on Vienna.

To be sure, it is said that never before has Hitler gone as far as he has this time in making a specific comment to the world, that Germany has no further territorial ambitions anywhere on the continent. But, as Leland Stowe has pointed out in the New York Herald Tribune, Hitler gave precisely the same assurance on March 7, 1936, when he declared: "After three years I believe I can today regard the struggle for German equality as over. . . . We have no territorial demands to make in Europe."

IN VIEW of this record, in view of the terrifying fears of a war launched by the Fuehrer which took possession of so large a part of the world this week, it is doubtful if any responsible statesman will take Hitler wholly at his word. This means that in Great Britain and France and elsewhere the pace of rearmament will not be allowed to slacken; on the contrary there is every reason to believe it will be accelerated at least until those nations are no longer in a position of inferiority vis-a-vis the Third Reich in any important category of armaments.

The world thus faces the continued prospect of a race in armaments unless the new four-power grouping can somehow manage to bring about a real measure of appeasement and unless, at the same time, German and Italian industry can be deflected from war production to production for peace. The prospect for both is doubtful, to say the least.

• • • •

AT MUNICH Soviet Russia was the only European great power excluded from the parley. The mistake of the "Big Four" at Versailles was thus repeated by another "Big Four" at Munich.

It happens that since 1934 no great power has taken a more consistent and, on the whole, more admirable line in international affairs than Soviet Russia. Supporting the stand that "peace is indivisible," she has fought valiantly for collective security. And during the Czechoslovak crisis her spokesmen made it repeatedly clear that the Soviet Union was fully prepared to live up to her treaty engagements with regard to the threatened republic.

Her reward is again to be treated as a pariah. It was England under Lloyd George which took the first real step to woo back Russia into the council of nations. It was England, under Chamberlain in 1938, who set the clock back to 1918. And with Czechoslovakia destroyed, the Franco-Russian treaty of alliance has no meaning.

WHATEVER ONE may think of Russia's political system, and it certainly finds little favor in the democracies, there is no gainsaying the fact that Russia enjoys an honorable place in the category of peaceful states. Nor does it make the slightest difference that she was peaceful because it suited her interests to do so. On the contrary, that made her co-operation all the more valuable because it was based on practical considerations.

Russia is now isolated. She must safeguard her security by her own efforts alone. The outer bulwark against a German thrust in the direction of the Ukraine was Czechoslovakia. Czechoslovakia is a bulwark no longer. Girding herself for the conflict with the Third Reich which Moscow must now regard as inevitable, is it not possible that Russia will seek to bring within her orbit, by hook or by crook, the Baltic states? And by the same token we may soon see a revival of the Bessarabian problem.

Strategic considerations may thus bring about a revival in Russia of the imperialistic urge shelved since the Bolsheviks took over in 1917. In any event the exclusion of Russia from the newly formed concert of Europe is certain to have far-reaching consequences.

The long-run outlook is not for peace. For the moment Europe does enjoy a badly needed breathing spell. But the peace negotiated at Munich was one achieved at the point of a sword. That sword is now sharper than ever.

Capital's War Tension Lifts

By Mark Sullivan

Crisis Seen Over

AT WASHINGTON, at 10:30 Friday morning, there was one of the President's regular press conferences. At these press conferences, for the previous ten days, the atmosphere had been dominated by the European crisis, tense with the possibility of war. But on this occasion, during the first ten minutes of the conference, no question was asked about Europe, and at no time during the conference was any material amount of attention given to Europe.

It happened that about the same hour, the New York Democratic State convention was making its nominations. The newspaper men knew about that, and the principal questions of the conference, and the President's more important remarks, were about that, and about the coming Congressional campaign generally.

• • • •

THUS SWIFTLY does crisis disappear and attention turn to normal events. There was at the press conference some talk about this by Mr. Roosevelt—casual, philosophical talk about the rapidity with which, in the modern world, crises both arise and pass, a condition, Mr. Roosevelt thinks, that is partly caused by the radio and other mechanisms for instantaneous, world-wide diffusion of information and opinion. Mr. Roosevelt spoke, too, in a spirit of commendation of these agencies, for keeping poised on their feet and not making drama any more dramatic than the facts, which were dramatic enough.

So now the country turns to the campaign. With the sessions of the Democratic convention in New York, all the States have completed their nominations. From September 30, for five and a half weeks until November 8, attention will be upon this campaign. Let us look at it without excitement. After all, it is the seventy-sixth of the biennial elections for Congress the country has had. Many have seemed critical, but the country and the Government have continued to exist.

THE ESSENTIAL facts about this campaign are that there will be elected an entire House of Congress, one-third of the Senate, a number of Governors and State legislators, and a host of minor local officials. The central question involved is, how many seats in the House the Democrats will lose, how many the Republicans will gain.

For the Democrats, this Congressional campaign is one that proves what triumphant parties and triumphant men often have learned before, that it is a long lane that has no turning. In four successive Congressional elections the Democrats have made gains. In 1930 they increased their membership in the House by 54. In 1932 they again increased it, sensationally, by 94. They now had 313 of the total membership of 435. Precedent and common judgment seemed to suggest they could not go higher. But they did. In 1934 they added 9 members. With that, observers generally and Republican leaders without exception, felt the Democrats had reached the extreme height of their tide. But Democratic National Charman Farley predicted they would gain yet more in 1936—and they did. With 328 out of a total membership of 435, the Democrats have had, in the Congress just ended, the largest percentage of the House, I think, that either party has ever had.

THE NORMAL thing would be that in this Congressional election the Democratic tide would begin to recede, a Republican tide begin to flow. By precedent the Republicans should gain, this November, a considerable number of seats. How many they gain is not very material—the important thing is that the tide turns in the Republican direction. And if a Republican tide is beginning, it should, like the recent Democratic one, continue to flow for two or three future Congressional elections.

Looking at it wholly from the standpoint of historical precedent, of the ordinary cycle of American politics, this election seems entirely normal. It is the Republicans who will make gains, who will take seats away from the Democrats. There is no present expectation of any third party making any material headway. The adherence of American politics to the alternation of two great parties does not, at this moment, seem likely to change. There is not at this time any important third party on the horizon. In the House whose sessions ended last summer, the number of members elected by parties other than Republican or Democratic was only 13 out of the total of 435.

True, beneath the surface—and not very far beneath, are dynamic factors making for cleavage within the Democratic Party. But if this is to occur it will be after the present election.

All that is written here goes on the assumption that the traditional cycle of American politics continues. If America should be infected by the new conception that has arisen in Europe—a possibility which cannot be entirely eliminated—in that event, of course, the traditional American cycle would be disrupted. But if this is to happen at all, it will occur later than the present election.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Now It Has Been Told

WITH THE PUBLICATION of the British White Paper containing Lord Runciman's report to Mr. Chamberlain, the hidden history of the past seven weeks is now reasonably clear. The official disclosure shows how and why Hitler came to realize that without risking a general war he could insist on the annexation of the Sudeten regions rather than upon their autonomy within the Czechoslovak Republic.

The decisive but hitherto unappreciated fact in the whole situation was that Hitler must have known before he committed himself at Nuremberg that Lord Runciman favored the dismemberment of the Czechoslovak state. Secure in this knowledge, Hitler was fully justified in his judgment that Mr. Chamberlain would never go to war to prevent the settlement which Mr. Chamberlain's own representative approved.

LORD RUNCIMAN does not say just when he concluded that a solution was impossible within the frontiers of the Czechoslovak state. But there can be little doubt that he reached this conclusion before Hitler committed himself publicly at Nuremberg to the demand for annexation and there can be little doubt also that Hitler knew Lord Runciman's conclusion not later than the week before the Nuremberg speech. For it was in that week that the London Times publicly declared in an editorial that the cession of the Sudeten territory could be regarded as the proper solution of the problem.

The Times editorial was indignantly repudiated at once by the British foreign office, and no doubt with entire sincerity. But the Times is a responsible newspaper and its editorial cannot have represented the merely personal views of its editor. The inference is unavoidable that the Times was expressing Lord Runciman's views, and that Hitler knew that the Times was expressing them. It is in the highest degree probable, moreover, that Hitler knew Lord Runciman's views even before the Times editorial. For in the last weeks of August Lord Runciman was spending his week-ends at the country houses of Sudenten noblemen, and it is difficult to suppose that he could have concealed from them what he was coming to think about the issue. The conclusions which he formulated in his report to the prime minister constitute such a complete acceptance of the German argument that it would have been impossible not to see that Lord Runciman had been or was about to be converted.

That explains, as nothing has yet explained, why in the week before Nuremberg, Herr von Ribbentrop was able to advise Hitler so confidently that it was safe to demand annexation. He must have had private knowledge, from Lord Runciman's Sudeten friends that the British mediator was disposed to favor annexation and he had the semi-official declaration of the Times to clinch the argument.

THE DISCLOSURE of the fact that Lord Runciman accepted annexation before Hitler demanded it is the crucial fact in the whole situation. That was why, without risking a general European war, Hitler could demand annexation and back up his demand with a threat of invasion. For once it was clear that Mr. Chamberlain's mediator had been won over, it was clear that Mr. Chamberlain would not and could not go to war to prevent annexation. All the representations made to Hitler by the British, all the solemn warnings and all the military preparations had no influence, therefore, on the substance of the issue but only on the manner in which the territory would be surrendered.

That being the situation, Mr. Chamberlain should not have been taken aback when he was told at Berchtesgaden that Hitler wanted what Lord Runciman thought ought to be conceded. Mr. Chamberlain can hardly have supposed that Hitler would want less than the British mediator thought he was entitled to ask.

ONE WONDERS, therefore, why Mr. Chamberlain went to Berchtesgaden to discover the obvious—unless it was to find some way of convincing world opinion that annexation had to be granted. For the world did not know then what Lord Runciman had decided, and it is evident that the revelation of what he had decided would have provoked a profound reaction. Hitler realized this. For as Mr. Chamberlain told the House of Commons, Hitler informed him at Godesburg "that he never for one moment supposed I should be able to come back and say that the principle was accepted."

The fact that Mr. Chamberlain did come back with an acceptance astonished Hitler and proved to him that the allied resistance was broken. He had Mr. Chamberlain in a position where the prime minister was faced with a war over an issue which Mr. Chamberlain and Lord Runciman had already abandoned. Hitler could threaten war safely because he could always retreat to a position which gives him peaceably more than he started to ask and all that he ultimately wanted. And by threatening war, and frightening the people of the world out of their wits, Hitler made it psychologically possible for Mr. Chamberlain and M. Daladier to surrender what they never could have surrendered in cold blood. By threatening a war that he knew he would not have to fight, Hitler made the peaceable surrender of Czechoslovakia seem to the peoples of the world like the triumph of the diplomacy of peace.

THE CRUCIAL POINT in this history is that during the crisis which lasted from about August 15 to September 28, Hitler knew the real views of the British prime minister, whereas the general public did not know them. Before Nuremberg, when Hitler overruled his army leaders and the moderates, Hitler already knew what Lord Runciman thought, and therefore, he knew what Mr. Chamberlain was going to think. For even if Mr. Chamberlain did not realize before the Berchtesgaden interview that he favored annexation, Hitler realized that Mr. Chamberlain was going to favor it because Mr. Chamberlain would inevitably follow the advice of Lord Runciman.

Once Lord Runciman had been converted, the only unsettled point in Hitler's mind was whether Mr. Chamberlain could persuade the world that surrender was the proper policy. Probably Mr. Chamberlain could not have done that had the case been disclosed and submitted to public discussion before the surrender of September 21 was accepted by Prague, Paris and London.

Hitler had some extremely interesting and significant things to say in his speech at the Sportspalast last Monday on how easy it was to arrange things with "a man" and how hard to arrange them with a democracy. So Hitler was a little perturbed about democratic opinion. But Hitler did know that he could afford to threaten, since Mr. Chamberlain could not fail to surrender on an issue which Lord Runciman had abandoned some weeks earlier.

• • • •

THIS ALSO EXPLAINS why Mr. Chamberlain had to subject himself and the British government to the humiliation of Berchtesgaden, Godesburg, and Munich. The alternative was to lay Hitler's case before public opinion and advocate publicly the acceptance of Hitler's demands. That would have placed him personally in an intolerable position and it would almost certainly have produced an explosion of public opinion which, so he must have believed, would make war inevitable. He chose, therefore, what must have seemed to him the lesser of two evils and worked to arrange the surrender by secret diplomacy undisturbed by the outcries of the democracies.

Justice Butler Names L. E. Jones Secretary

By the Associated Press.

Associate Justice Butler, of the Supreme Court, appointed L. E. Jones, jr., of Houston, Tex., his secretary yesterday.

Jones was graduated from the University of Texas Law School in 1937 and admitted to the Texas Bar the same year. He had previously attended Rice and Georgetown universities and had been a member of the secretarial staff of Representative Kleberg (Democrat), Texas, and an assistant to Representative Johnson (Democrat), Texas, when the latter was NYA director for Texas. Jones has been an attorney in the Lands Division of the Justice Department here since last December.

Hyattsville Baptist Church Proves a Good 'Mother'

Fetes Members of Three Missions
Two 'Children' Are Independent
Has Raised $11,000 for Building

The Hyattsville Baptist "mother" Church last night feted pastors and parishioners of its three mission congregations at a home-coming celebration in the parish hall.

Participating were the Rev. A. K. Stockabrand, of the University Baptist Church, College Park; the Rev. E. C. Tull, of the East Riverdale Baptist Church, whose congregations now hold an independent status; and the Rev. Charles M. Flippin, of the Erickson Memorial, Decatur Heights, Baptist Church, launched as a mission last spring, and the Rev. Benjamin P. Robertson, minister of the host church.

S. W. CROSSWAITE

The program was a feature of the Hyattsville church's "rally week," which began Tuesday night with a gathering of the teachers and officers of the Sunday school. Officials of this unit are Prof. W. R. Ballard, superintendent; L. A. Day, assistant; E. V. Cook, treasurer; Miss Alice Harris, secretary; Alfred Cook, assistant, and Mrs. Betty Marstelle, registration secretary. Additional departmental supervisors are Mrs. Bessie Jennings, cradle roll; Mrs. J. T. Paine, beginners; Mrs. Leon Barber, juniors; Mrs. C. E. Culver, intermediates, and Mrs. J. C. Proctor, home department.

The missionary department, lead by Mrs. J. S. Franklin, wife of the church clerk, sponsored a meeting Wednesday night. Active in this group are Mme. J. B. S. Norton, J. T. Paine, H. T. Willis, Fred N. Ohm, Florence Conklin, B. A. Bastoo, F. B. Spencer and Ethel Cookman. One of its purposes is to encourage home missions, and to this end, a census record is kept of all families in the vicinity. The evangelism committee, under Mrs. Ethel Cookman, church visitor, cooperates in this work.

Music also is an important activity at the Hyattsville Baptist Church, and Thursday evening was designed as "choir night." Superintendent of this unit is W. R. Ballard. The organist is Alfred Manning, and the director is Mrs. Manning. The recreation department, headed by S. W. Crosswaite, of the Indian Affairs Bureau, last year entertained a team in the B. Y. P. U. Federation Bowling League and won the pennant.

The training school of the church, directed through the Baptist Young People's Union, will play an important role in tomorrow's general rally of the church and Sunday school by staging a rally evangelistic service in the evening, set for 6:45 p. m.

Dr. Rufus W. Weaver, executive secretary of the Columbia Baptist Union, will address the 11 o'clock services, which will be preceded by a rally of the Sunday school at 9:30 a. m. The Rev. Mr. Robertson's 8 p. m. topic will be "Excuses."

The Rev. J. M. Long, retired cleric, supervises the training department, and his aides include Miss Nellie Evans, juniors; Miss Ethel Cookman, assistant; Miss Emily Ballard and Mr. Howard Sorrell, intermediates; Miss Virginia Flickinger, Leavell Union; E. V. Cooke, seniors, and J. T. Paine, adults. Claude N. Davis, church publicity chairman, is a nephew of the Rev. Mr. Robertson, J. T. Paine is church treasurer.

"Pay As You Build" is the policy of the Hyattsville pastor, whose congregation, in less than two years, has raised $11,000 in cash toward a new edifice.

The educational unit, expected to be ready this spring, will cost about $22,000, but will not be started until that much cash is assured, according to the Rev. Mr. Robertson. Backing Mr. Robertson in his efforts is a board of trustees composed of businessmen.

Assisting Chairman F. H. Spencer, business manager, of the Department of Agriculture, are E. M. Pettit; Dr. H. T. Willis, former Hyattsville mayor; J. E. Rimer, J. T. Norman, L. H. Willis, L. A. Day, J. A. Crawford and Mrs. Flora Davis, financial secretary of the church.

Deacons of the Hyattsville church are Dr. J. B. S. Norton, S. C. Sturgis, J. T. Paine, J. S. Franklin, Prof. Ballard, the Rev. J. M. Long, William Nally and J. T. Norman.

Dr. R. J. Clinchy To Preach Last Sermon Here

Dr. Russell J. Clinchy, minister of Mount Pleasant Congregational Church for the past eight years, will preach his last sermon at communion service tomorrow morning before leaving to take up his new work as minister of the First Church of Christ in Hartford, Conn. His topic will be "The Spirit of Christ."

REV. MR. CLINCHY

Dr. Clinchy came to the Mount Pleasant Church in January, 1931, from New York City. Besides his church work he has been president of the Council of Social Agencies the past two years. He goes to the first church established in Connecticut, the church founded by Thomas Hooker 305 years ago. It is located in the heart of the city and has a membership of 1,150.

All members and friends of the church are to be present at the reception to be given by the Mount Pleasant Congregational Church as a farewell tribute to Dr. and Mrs. Clinchy Monday from 8 to 10 p. m.

First. The Washington A Capella Choir, organized by Ruby Smith Stahl 13 years ago and still under her direction, resumes its place at both services tomorrow.

"Forty Wrestlers Wrestling for Thee!" is the title of the Rev. Howard Stone Anderson's sermon at the 11 o'clock service.

Rev. Mr. Shirkey Takes as Topic 'Heart's Desire'

The pastor of Francis Asbury M. E. Church South, the Rev. Albert P. Shirkey, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. on "The Heart's Desire" and at 8 p. m. on "Redigging the Wells."

At 6:45 the young people and young adults will have the privilege of hearing Mrs. Walter G. Borchers, sr., our own missionary from Sao Paulo, Brazil. Mrs. Borchers has served for 31 years and is now home on furlough.

Calvary. The Rev. W. D. Keene will speak at the 11 a. m. Communion service on "For as Often as Ye Eat the Bread and Drink This Cup." At the 8 p. m. hour his theme will be "Personal Accountability to God."

Emory. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered tomorrow morning. The meditation will be "He Will Keep You in Peace." At night the Rev. Horace E. Cromer will also preach on "There Is Hope."

Emory Church is closing its 136th year in the District of Columbia. The congregation is showing a steady growth and numbers 1,014. At the session of the annual conference the pastor will report enrollment in the church school of 760. During the last year there have been six additions on profession of faith and 41 by transfer.

Mount Vernon Place. Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor, will preach on "How to Have Dependable Character" at the morning service tomorrow. The choir and quartet will sing.

'Faith' to Be Topic Of Dr. Pierce

"The Things We Live By" is the subject of a series of sermons which Ulysses G. B. Pierce, D.D., minister of All Souls' Church (Unitarian), will deliver at 11 a. m. services during October.

The special subject tomorrow morning is "Faith: Its Substance and Its Semblance."

Universalist. "Peace Which the World Cannot Give" will be the subject of Dr. Frederic W. Perkins' sermon at National Memorial Church tomorrow at 11 a. m. After the service a Red Cross representative will be in the church office to receive enrollments in the membership campaign.

Youth in Capital Churches

Striving to make money for the Advocate, their paper, the Luther League, of Potomac Lutheran Church, will join in the "stunt night" scheduled tomorrow evening at the church.

Those participating in the stunt, which must be completed within ten minutes or be blotted out by the stage curtain, are Sam Solt, Ruth Staubus, Edith Fillman, John Evans, Eulalia Solt and Jimmy Faris.

Lionel Fiedler will preside, Gene Otto lead the singing, Boyd Creath offer the prayer, June Mehlfelt speak and Marguerite Shaffer read the scripture as Petworth Methodist Church observes young people's night tomorrow as a feature of rally week. Dr. Frank Steelman will speak on "Young People and Christ."

Led by new officers, the Corbly young women's class of Hamline Methodist Church is starting a winter of study of the Bible, based on modern translations.

The officers are Marion Means, president; Frances Taggart, vice president; Florence Evans, recording secretary; Florence Yeager, corresponding secretary, and Helen Jones, treasurer.

"The Far East," "Thinking About Marriage," "Housing and Social Problems" and "Personal Religious Living" are among the topics to be discussed by various groups of the Foundry Forge for Christian Living, sponsored by the Young People's League of Foundry Methodist Church, from 7 to 7:50 p. m. tomorrow.

Dr. J. E. Bentley, Prof. Arthur S. Flemming, the Rev. John L. Mixon, Dr. Reuben Steinmeyer and Dr. Lucius E. Ford will lead the units, after a fellowship supper starting at 5:45.

"An Opportunity" will be described by Dr. C. C. Hung, pastor of the Chinese Community Church, before the Young People's Fellowship of Luther Place Church Tuesday at 8 p. m.

Young people of Mount Vernon Place South will be special guests at the evening service tomorrow. William Firth, Mildred Vaughan and J. T. Mitchell, jr., will assist in the service.

Ralph and Hester Marston, Mary Coe and George Rives, the young people's quartet, will sing, as will the young people's chorus, directed by Ralph Marston.

At 9:30 a. m. tomorrow a new young people's department in the Ninth Street Christian Church will hold its opening session. Glenn Miller, Betty Wray and Lowell Keagy will lead the program for the group, which intends to enroll all those between 18 and 25 in the church.

Raymond Swan will preside at the first fall meeting of the young people's league of Calvary Methodist Church. The program consists of a tea at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow and a brief devotional period at 7:15. Finley Cheston, Mr. Swan, John Meninger and Robert Black, the young men's quartet, will sing.

H. K. Bosley, history teacher at Wilson High School, will address the Cleveland Park Congregation Church youth center at 6 p. m. tomorrow on "Why Christian Education Today?"

"Prayer—A Life Power," will be the theme of the consecration service of the Covenant Fellowship of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church tomorrow at 7 p. m. Russell Bailey will lead the meeting. The usual social hour and tea will precede this service.

At 4 p. m. the Luther League of St. Stephen's Church will be host to the Lutheran Club of Maryland University at an educational meeting and tea. Dr. Raymond Seeger, of G. W. U., will speak.

Evangelist To Preach At Bethesda

Is Presbyterian Guest
Aided Convicts 20 Years
Rev. Mr. Parkes to Talk

The "prison evangelist" of the Presbyterian Church, the Rev. George W. Crabtree, will be guest speaker tomorrow at the 8 p. m. service in Bethesda Presbyterian Church.

For 20 years the Rev. Mr. Crabtree has been visiting the penitentiaries of the country, preaching to the prisoners, helping paroled men get work and encouraging rehabilitation of discharged prisoners.

The Rev. John L. Parkes, pastor, will preach at the 11 a. m. service on "The Spirit of Christ."

Gunton-Temple. "The Divine Alchemy" will be the subject of Dr. Bernard Braskamp's sermon at the 11 a. m. Communion service.

Westminster Church Memorial. The Rev. Harry V. Porter will present a Lord's Supper sermon on "The Communion of Saints" at morning worship. In the evening he will preach on "What a Christian Believes About Jesus Christ."

Chevy Chase. The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be observed at the 11 o'clock worship service. The subject of Dr. J. Hillman Hollister's sermon will be "Behold the Man."

Metropolitan. Dr. J. Lowrey Fendrich, jr., has chosen for his topic for the 11 a. m. service, "Inward Peace and Outward Confusion." The evening topic for the 7:45 service is "Addled Brains and Muddled Morals."

Falls Church. Dr. Alton B. Altfather will preach at 11 a. m. on "The Food That Gives Life." Communion service will be observed and new members received.

New York Avenue. Dr. Peter Marshall, minister, will have for his topic at the morning service "Here Is God." The world-wide communion will be observed and the fall reception of members take place. Sunday evening services will be resumed at 8 o'clock as Dr. Marshall speaks on "The Bishop's Candlesticks."

Central. Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor, will preach on "The Meaning of the Lord's Supper." The communion will be observed at the morning service. In the evening he will preach on "Spiritual Wealth."

Covenant. Dr. A. J. McCartney will have as his subject for Sunday morning "The Function of the Church in the Life of Our World Today."

The Junior Church, a church organization for children, will be inaugurated on Sunday morning in the All-Comers Chapel of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church. The meetings will be held during the regular 11 o'clock church service hour and will be conducted largely by children. The services will be of a religious nature, and they will have their own church organization with its church boards and junior choir and is intended to train the children in a knowledge of their privileges and responsibilities in church membership. The new enterprise will be sponsored by the assistant minister, the Rev. Samuel R. Allison.

Fifteenth Street. "Toward the Goal" will be the rally day sermon subject of the Rev. Leslie L. Bowers at 11 a. m. Lord's Supper.

At the evening service pictures entitled "Something Going On in China" will be presented.

Third. The Rev. C. N. Williams will speak on "The Pioneer of Life" at the 11 a. m. service on the first day of rally month.

Christian Science Topic 'Unreality'

"Unreality" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. Sunday School is held at 11 a. m. The Golden Text is from Job 15:31: "Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity: for vanity shall be his recompense." Among the citations which comprises the lesson-sermon are the following from the Bible. "Blessed be the Lord, that hath given rest unto his people Israel, according to all that he promised: there hath not failed one word of all his good promise, which he promised by the hand of Moses his servant." (I Kings 8:56).

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "When we learn in Science how to be perfect, even as our Father in heaven is perfect, thought is turned into new and healthy channels,—towards the contemplation of things immortal and away from materiality to the Principle of the universe, including harmonious man."

'Four Daughters' Moves Features New Players Short-Reels Good

When a picture packs the Earle Theater all week with happy audiences—there's just one thing to do about it. Send it right down to the Metropolitan. And that's where you'll find "Four Daughters" this week.

There's an atmosphere of "Little Women" brought up to 1938 about "Four Daughters." Neither setting nor story accounts for the resemblance. Rather it's the healthy family life of both pictures and that young girls' world that is eternal in each generation, a world of sunny days, of young ones carefree as a bunch of jay birds, of small sorrows that seem big, of small adventures that seem terrific.

The family is a musical one. Dad, played by Rains, is dean of a musical foundation and a flute player on the side. He imbues his four pretty girls with his own love of music. But the rascals will tantalize him by "swinging" the classics.

Romance Rears Its Head.

Boys, naturally, pop in from every side. There's Dick Foran, a nice, puppyish young man in love with sister Gale Page. Frank McHugh, rich but slightly simple-minded, is devoted to sister Lola Lane. But all bets are off when Jeffrey Lynn, as a handsome young musician, enlists father's interest and winds up as star boarder. All of the girls get crushes on Jeffrey, but he falls in love with the baby of the family: Priscilla Lane. When they announce their engagement, the family fairly falls apart. Sister Rosemary Lane, who has won a music scholarship, says she's going right to Philadelphia and really study. Sister Lola decides to marry Frank. Sister Gale, who's most in love with Jeffrey, has a good cry in the kitchen. An incidental heartbreak is that of John Garfield, a charming and "crackpot" musician.

Of course, the story's not as simple as that. Priscilla turns around and marries John, leaving Jeffrey flat at the altar. This marriage goes pretty sour, principally because of money troubles. There's a flash of real tragedy, but all is rosy at the end, with three of the girls married happily and Rosemary a successful radio singer.

Priscilla Lane and John Garfield are standouts among the younger group of players. Priscilla has played leads before, and well, but her work shows a stamina that should place her high before many months. John Garfield is a newcomer and a comer. There's a brittle, mental quality to his acting that recalls Burgess Meredith.

Rains Fine As Father

Claude Rains is splendid as the loveable, quick-tempered old father. But when wasn't he splendid in any role? May Robson adds color as peppery Aunt Etta, homekeeper for the family.

There's a Popular Scinece short in color that's good as any comedy in the section where it shows fancy headgear of 1900 vintage. There are air-conditioned hats, a hat that combs your hair and one that's decorated with bubbles. Anything for a laugh, even 40 years ago.

The newsreel is up to standard and there's also a commendable musical in the Hawaiian manner. Aloha! M. H.

RKO-Keith's

"Room Service" is something of a Marxist plot, for, like the ambitious Karl, it seeks to revolutionize an established formula.

Its revolutionary idea is to place the brothers Marx in a vehicle which, alongside of some of their previous epics, is as coldly logical as a goemetrical theorem. This week it continues its engagement at RKO-Keith's.

Loyal Marxists quaked when it was learned that the mad trio was to appear in a play which had a plot, even one so harum-scarum as the farcical "Room Service," by John Murray and Allan Boretz, the entire setting of which is in a hotel bedroom. To complicate matters still further, the plot demanded that the trio stay in that room. The atmosphere was as awesome as that around a Munich conference chamber. How would Harpo string along without his harp? How were they going to manage to chase around in the confines of one room? All in all the departure from the accepted Marx routine was viewed with conservative alarm.

A Literal Translation

Adapter Morrie Ryskind (who collaborated on "Of Thee I Sing") translated the play almost literally to the screen, permitting little chasing; no harp, no piano for Chico. To the pivotal parts, which on the stage need no star comics to panic an audience, the Marx Brothers bring much of their time-honored lunacy, have a chase with a turkey and gobble (whew!) a hasty meal in traditional Marx fashion. Hilarious as the film is, as any Fifteenth street audience will vow, it is not in the grand tradition of the freres Marx.

While everything is thoroughly enjoyable, you nevertheless find yourself thinking that voluptuous blondes are as important to a Marx Brothers' picture as they are to a front line Follies chorus, and that dignified dowagers are as vital to the Marxian epics as they are to the Metropolitan Opera. It's all part of the grand tradition which has for the moment been forgotten in a little off-the-record fun.

Continues a Laughmaker

Philip Loeb (now a feature of New York's new-born musical ("Sing Out the News") and Donald MacBride are comical as well, and youthful veteran Frank Albertson, up and coming Lucille Ball and Ann Miller handle the romantic roles to William A. Seitor's rapid direction.

Lest the avid comedy lover and the true Marxian think he has been as let down as a small democracy, your reviewer hastens to add that "Room Service" is still a dizzy farce and that the Marx trio is almost as funny as ever—almost.

The Keith bill is completed with a Mickey Mouse-Donald Duck costarring vehicle from the pen of Walt Disney and an upto-the-ultimate flash Pathe newsreel.

'You Can't Take It With You' Is a Hit at Earle

Charles Boyer Stars in 'Algiers,' at Capitol

From Prize Comedy Presents Star Cast Abounds in Laughs Stage Bill Brief

"YOU CAN'T TAKE IT WITH YOU," Columbia Pictures filmization of the Pulitzer Prize comedy by Moss Hart and George S. Kaufman, adapted to the screen by Robert Riskin, featuring Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, James Stewart, Edward Arnold, Mischa Auer Ann Miller, Spring Byington, Samuel S. Hinds, Donald Meek, H. B. Warner, Halliwell Hobbes, Dub Taylor, Mary Forbes, Lillian Yarbo, Christian Rub, Bodil Rosing, Charles Lane Harry Davenport and others. Directed by Frank Capra. Previewed Saturday, September 24. At the Earle Theater.

Although stripped of some of the characters and several of the situations that were—and still are—important on the stage, and augmented by the addition of characters and movements of plot of which the stage never heard, "You Can't Take It With You," as disclosed for the first time in Washington on the screen of the Earle Theater yesterday, still is an accurate reflection of the underlying purpose and essential content of the Moss Hart-George S. Kaufman Pulitzer Prize comedy, now in the second year of its run on Broadway, with excellent road companies, such as the one currently at the National, running its gross earnings up into the multi-millions.

BELL.

In transcribing this celebrated and thoroughly "goofy" play to celluloid, Columbia Pictures has exercised the same sort of comprehensive cinematic Free Masonry that characterized its earlier productions of "Broadway Bill," "It Happened One Night," "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town" and "Lost Horizon." Having paid a round $200,000 for the film rights to the property this astute company has poured additional hundreds of thousands into fashioning a production which far transcends the original stage play in magnitude and variety of scene and has drawn upon the cream of Hollywood's acting talent for players to portray the leading roles, regardless of their contractual studio affiliations.

Cast Is of Top Rank

Thus assembled in one cast under this famous title are to be found the repressed James Stewart and Donald Meek, the vibrant Jean Arthur, the ebullient Spring Byington and grotesque Mischa Auer, the emotional and vocal H. B. Warner, the sprightly Ann Miller and those superb character actors, Lionel Barrymore and Edward Arnold, as Grandpa Vanderhof and the outrageously rich Anthony Kirby, arch enemies, in the new version of the comedy, in a feud for possession of the Vanderhof homestead as an essential of a big Kirby deal in Wall Street. There are, of course, a great number of others concerned in the peculiarly enlivening developments of a story that involves a dignified ice man, who joined the household eight years prior to the opening of the play and has been there ever since; the father and son-in-law, whose hobbies are manufacturing fireworks in the basement, playing a xylophone, printing handbills and the like, as the spirit moves them. Society's icy upper crust is personified by Mrs. Kirby and the futile pursuit of an artistic career by daughter Essie, of the Sycamore family. Then there are the privileged colored servants in the Sycamore home, the kindly judge, before whom all have to appear on a "disturbing the peace" charge; the United States Internal Revenue and "Jay-Men" and all of their associates and hangers-on. The concert of all these activities and interests serves to compound a tale of happiness and woe, triumph and despair, money lust and generosity, such as the screen never before has quite paralleled.

A Picture for All Tastes

There is no need at this time to rehash the minute circumstances that sealed the romance between Alice Vanderhof and Tony Kirby, vindicated Grandpa Vanderhof and humanized Anthony Kirby, sr., brought order out of chaos and restored all these lives to normalcy; nor is there occasion to detail the continuously hilarious manner in which all of these ramifications of plot are deftly welded into a coherent and variegated tale of opposite poles of society. It seems only to be necessary to repeat that "You Can't Take It With You," in its new form, is one of the most completely satisfying screen entertainments ever made available to the public.

No attempt will be made here, either, to dwell at length upon the excellence of the performances contributed to this field day of fun by the members of the cast already mentioned and the numerous others whose names appear in the small-type paragraph preceding these enthusiasms. The whole thing resolves itself, more or less, into the simple fact that here is a superlative bit of high power diversion that no judicious amusement seeker will want to miss.

Short Stage Bill Excellent

Owing to the length of the major feature and the diversity of its content, the stage bill at the Earle this week is restricted to a delightful vocal interlude by Lucy Monroe, popular soprano of the airwaves, an interval of comic juggling by Gaston Palmer and the intricate precision routines of the 16 Dancing Roxyettes held over from last week. The Roxyettes' closing maneuvers atop slippery, rolling globes is a marvel of co-ordination and control. Mons. Palmer is the only juggler I have ever seen who unfailingly converts his mistakes into an important element of the success of his act and Miss Monroe is one of the better vocalists to come this way.

Crowded houses yesterday testified to their coincidence with these remarks by roundly applauding the picture after it had ended. Since you will want to see it more than once it is too bad "You Can't Take It With You."

Makes American Film Debut

known to the European screen as Hedy Kiesler, who makes her first appearance in an American-made film in the role of Gaby in Walter Wanger's production of "Algiers," starring Charles Boyer. This drama of adventure in northern Africa is chief feature of the current bill at Loew's Capitol Theater, with Sigrid Gurie also featured as Ines, the native girl.

Is Tense Melodrama Hedy Lamarr in Debut Sigrid Gurie Scores Sybil Bowan on Stage

"ALGIERS." Walter Wanger's picturization for United Artists of the French novel, "Pepe Le Moko," adapted to the screen by John Howard Lawson, starring Charles Boyer, with Sigrid Gurie, Hedy Lamarr, Joseph Calleia, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, Johnny Downs, Stanley Fields Mme. Nina Koshetz, Joan Woodbury, Claudia Dell, Robert Greig, Charles D. Brown, Armand Kaliz, Walter Kingsford, Paul Harvey and Bert Roach. Directed by John Cromwell. Reviewed Friday afternoon, At Loew's Capitol Theater.

There are odd turns of events and strange twists of character in "Algiers." There also virtually are two plots in this tense and engrossing picturization of the French novel of "Pepe Le Moko" Walter Wanger has made for United Artists release—the desperate love of a criminal prisoner in Casbah, the sanctuary of all outcasts in Algiers, and a beautiful Parisienne, and the tenacious pursuit of their quarry by French and native police, intent upon luring him away from his asylum and bringing him to justice in the courts for jewel thefts. The one is gripping in the futility that confronts two intelligent and illiterate people hopelessly the victims of the grant passion; the other sensational in its utilization of all the devices familiar to lovers of the "cops and robbers" type of drama.

These divergent elements, however, are welded into a story that conveys an immediate impression of being more profound than it is and more tragic in its inevitable disaster than one hopes.

Trapped by His "Friends"

Pepe Le Moko is safely isolated in the haven of the fugitives from the law among types that are as sinister as many of them are depraved. His own henchmen are his least trustworthy "friends," and his only staunch friend is Slimane, a member of the native police, who knows his every hiding place in Casbah, chats with him amiably and only awaits the day when mental torture will drive his prey out into the open and make his capture easy. In Casbah, Pepe is the object of the unquenchable love of Ines, a native girl, whose adoration is reciprocated only in momentary gratitude for valuable services she is able to render a man above her class who has been a hidden outcast of society for two years. Into his sordid haunts one day comes Gaby and a group of friends on a frightening "slumming tour." The die is cast with her appearance and Pepe, in the end, pays his penalty to the police of two continents through the lying duplicity of his craven associates.

Stereotyped in the cheapness of its content as "Algiers" sounds, there is about it a sense of deep and honest feeling and a quality of authentic realism that lift it well above the level of claptrap plays of this nature so often become.

This is due primarily to the forceful interpretation of the central character contributed to a competent acting ensemble by Charles Boyer in the role of Pepe. Mr. Boyer plays with utmost sincerity and depth of feeling and makes believable a lonely and harassed figure that rises above the temptations of tawdry melodrama. The other two roles of supreme importance are portrayed by Sigrid Gurie and Hedy Lamarr, as Ines and Gaby, respectively.

Miss Lamarr Has Eyes

Of the two, Miss Lamarr is infinitely the more beautiful and Miss Gurie by far the more able and convincing actress. The smoldering warmth of the Lamarr eyes and the patrician chiseling of her features seem to embody her greatest claims to note as a "glamourmous" disciple of emotional drama. Miss Gurie, on the other hand, enacts her more conspicuous and more exacting part with a complete and eloquent understanding of its requirements.

For the rest, excellent choice has been made of actors to impersonate the minor denizens of Casbah. Joseph Calleia is a suave and quietly threatenting Slimane, patiently biding his time and deeming friendship the quickest route to his coveted coup. Stanley Fields is a blustering thug with a coward's heart. Gene Lockhart's ill-fated informer, who meets the end of all squealers in the hands of those he has betrayed, I thought a little too obvious, at times, and Alan Hale more or less wasted in the role of "Grand Pere," the monocled buyer of stolen goods. Johnny Downs is a frenziedly retributive victim of some of the treachery that was aimed at Pepe and Mme. Koshetz, Joan Woodbury, Claudia Dell, Robert Grieg, Walter Kinksford and Paul Harvey are among the others who are impressive in the lesser characters.

That impertinent singing and dancing character comedienne, Sybil Bowan, headlines this week's vaudeville bill at the Capitol in a series of impressions that depart widely from her usual motion picture and stage types. Miss Bowan again reveals a fine voice—which she abuses frightfully—and ability far above the ordinary as a dancer. Her character bits, of course, remain unsurpassed and she still concludes her act with the friendly impersonation of the First Lady.

Others on the bill include Louis Da Pron, one of the best of the contemporary dancers; Cass, Owen and Topsy, two acrobatic young women and a male gymnast, who is content to let them do most of the heavy work—their slow-motion didoes are the most expert extant—and the Chester Hale Capitol Dancers and the singing Commodores, both held over from last week.

The Fox Movietone News, minus Lew Lehr, supplements one of Mr. Wanger's most successful efforts.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., Sept. 30.—Movies have a lot of competition even in Hollywood. There is a fine country fair, with horse racing at Pomona, Jitterbug contests, Rhumba rumplings, Lambeth Walk craze, roller and ice skating, carnivals, dog and mutt races, "Susan and God," tennis and football. And you can have fierce fun, free, watching some of the locals marketing, wheeling a baby carriage in shorts and a turtle neck sweater.

HEDDA HOPPER

But they're no sillier than the way some film stars appear at tennis matches in their latest fur tippets. No matter how scorching the sun, year after year the race is on to see who can parade the greatest number of fall fashions. The gals come in looking so pretty and leave looking as though they'd been through a Turkish bath. Those of us who happen to be cool in cotton get pitying looks, as much as to say, "Poor things, you can't afford a fur coat, can you?"

When will we grow up, and make the fashion suit the day and the occasion? It may be fall in New York and Chicago but here it's still summer.

Deems Taylor's attitude is refreshing. He loves Hollywood and hasn't enough adjectives for Walt Disney. Deems says the only way to get in movies is to do something else. "I wrote an opera which got me in radio; that got me pictures," he explained.

I ran into John Trent at Mutt Parade, who said, "You don't remember me, but I used to fill up your car with gasoline."

Then he studied flying—became a transport pilot; from there got into movies. He's now doing "Tailspin Tommy" as a serial. At same parade, Lum's daughter (of Lum and Abner) marched with her St. Bernard. And Ralph Morgan, just elected president of our Actors' Guild, pointed to sweet little Jean Parker and said, "Jean, Ann Shirley and my daughter were maids of honor in 'Rasputin.' Isn't it grand watching them grow up, Hedda."

There, too, was Harriet Parsons directing a newsreel of Mama (Louella) and rest of us. Nice to be on the shelf, sit back and let the kids work.

The scenario description of a character Beulah Bondi played in a recent picture ran thus: "Old lady must be like portrait of Whistler's Mother, but with a highball in one hand and a cigarette in the other." Beulah has just finished playing with the "Dead End" kids and loved them. During an eating sequence, a huge bowl of mashed potatoes was put in front of them, and before her eyes the kids made it into snowballs which they threw at each other—one missed—got her.

Helen Broderick, opposite Wally Beery in "Stand Up and Fight," with Bob Taylor, is nice casting. I'll bet snow will fly before Helen is able to get off that lot. And speaking of Beery, a 9-year-old chum of Wally's Carol Ann, who's been brought up in complete ignorance of the movies, noticed that Wally was home a great deal. So he asked Carol why he wasn't working.

"Oh, my father's a movie star," Carol said.

The boy just looked and said, "Maybe when he gets older he can get a good job."

Irene Castle flew to Chicago over week-end to setle disagreement with her husband over education of her daughter. Denied report that she was engaged to George Putname, which delighted me . . . Well, I can hope, can't I?

Our description of a Hollywood columnist—yes, we have one or two—is "He's the guy who's sore at his boss because he only gets $5,000 a week."

Palace

"Boys Town," fresh from record-breaking at the Capitol, seems set to do the same thing at the Palace. This story of a priest who founds a town for boys, on the premise that there is no such thing as a bad boy, is one which tugs at the heartstrings in a poignant manner.

Bereft of the sort of sentiment rampant in practically all average movies, this tale of bad kids from the streets and how they rear a town shining with all the virtues seldom found in the gutter, is compounded of a deathless ingredient, hope, and thus it has universal appeal.

Spencer Tracy is the priest, Father Flannigan, who begins Boys' Town with a hundred dollars and unbounded dreams, sees it grow to encompass an ever-larger percentage of derelict boys. Mickey Rooney is the problem child, the toughie who has a gangster brother for an ideal, the fly in the ointment who finally comes a winner in the home stretch. Mixed metaphors is just one of the things "Boys Town" brings out. Another is the feeling that the old familiar homespun virtues are the best.

The cast is peopled with boys with fine faces who act their parts with a fine unselfconsciousness. Sometimes there is a flickering of of a scene which might have been inspired by the Russian "Boys of the Road;" sometimes there is a too-pat timing of action, but for the most part it is all believable. That you will want to believe it is one reason, one supposes, that "motion pictures are your best entertainment."

Pete Smith has a short on sports which will be good for the pigskin fans. A Terrytoon cartoon is nicely daffy. There is a collection of news clips, some of which will interest you, for they range from a shot of Chamberlain walking into Hitler's helloing hand to views of the recent hurricane disaster. S. S.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, Sept. 30

MUSIC DEPARTMENT: Kurt Weill has written the music for Maxwell Anderson's new show, "Knickerbocker Holiday" . . . The musical background includes some pre-Revolution Indian music—unfamiliar to Weill, who had busied himself these last years with "The Eternal Road" and "Johnny Johnson" . . . And so, to get some idea of what the primitive music was like, the distinguished composer spent his evenings and made notations at the Famous Door—listening to the 1938 jitterbug sessions of Count Basie and his swing band.

SCHOOL DEPARTMENT: Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., has joined the St. Anthony's fraternity at the University of Virginia . . . He was assigned Wednesday to the task of "rushing" some new members. And while the world tottered and his father urged the leaders of Europe to hold off their guns, F. D., jr., and his rushees went shooting—pheasants.

BOOK DEPARTMENT: Sinclair Lewis' last novel was "The Prodigal Parents" . . . Now an American son has written a new novel—his first one—about a young man from Vermont, where Lewis resides, who attempts to adjust himself to the new mode of living . . . Farrar & Rinehart, the publishers, have the manuscript . . . The new author is Wells Lewis—son of Sinclair Lewis.

SPORTS DEPARTMENT: The Daily Worker, in keeping with the custom of newspapers to employ active participants to report the World Series ball games, has engaged a big-leaguer to cover the series for its sport pages . . . At the same time, The Worker has succeeded in preserving its class touch . . . Its reporter will be Rolfe of the Yankee team—Red Rolfe.

BUSINESS DEPARTMENT: Fulton Oursler, who heads Macfadden's Liberty Magaine, lives at West Falmouth, Mass. He edits the magazine from this place, although the office is in New York, by constant use of the telegraph and telephone . . . When the hurricane hit that sector, the wires were down and all phone and telegraph service to New York was disrupted . . . The phone to Boston was clear. And so Liberty Magaine was edited by way of London—in this way: Oursler phoned his instructions to Boston, they went by cable to London, and then by cable back to New York.

LOCAL NEWS. Jim Farley's plan yesterday was to surprise Lehman by nominating him for Governor—whether he likes it or not . . . Peggy Fears has been signed to appear at the new El Rio, where Zelli once operated . . . After Crosby Gaige exhibits his "America's Workship"—the United States Patent Office models he bought—he'll auction them off, piece by piece . . . Chester Morris, Mary Small and Johnny Messner's band will follow Ethel Merman at the Strand—whose law department stopped Messner from using "and his Music Box Band" . . . Kay Swift's newest composition begins: "Now that Hitler, the belittler, is through—I'll be waitin', in Sudeten, for you" . . . A new swank spot, the Pall Mall at 12 E. 67, will be for members only—and will operate all night.

RADIO DEPARTMENT: John Powers' models, who lost their NBC Spelling Bee match to some New Jersey "farmers"—who proved to be agricultural students at Rutgers University, will be rematched next week . . . Powers hadn't been told that the competitors would be collegiates and is distressed at the reflection upon the educational attainments of his employes . . . He therefore arranged the rematch. But the models he'll select will all be Phi Beta Kappa.

MOVIES: The new book, "New York Panorama," refers to Lionel Stander: "As a cinematic reflection of its own admiitedly insular life, New York has contributed such a typical personality as Lionel Stander. No one who has ever elbowed his way through the lower East Side will fail to recognize the raucous voice, the good-humored sneer, the compressed lips, the critical lift of the eyebrows, the noisy obtuse cynicism that mark Stander as New York's own" . . . But, like a typical New Yorker, Stander is from Philadelphia. And he attended the University of North Carolina.

Mary Haworth's Mail

When Sheltered Younger Sister Needs Education, Should Couple Abandon Plan to Have Child?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 34 years old, married and employed. I earn more than my husband but we have been able to accumulate sufficient savings so that I can stop working long enough to have a baby. We are both eager to rear a family. I am faced, however, with the responsibility of a young sister, 20 years old, who looks to me for a start in life.

She has been given an excellent classical education by my parents but they can no longer afford even to support her, much less provide more schooling. Because of the peculiar circumstances in which she finds herself (she does not live in this country) her only hope of suitable employment is to enter a profession. The necessary years of study would take the major part of my savings and put a family of my own out of the question.

Is it fair to my husband to deny him children in order to help my sister? On the other hand—should one bring more children into the world when those already here are unprovided for? I am devoted to my sister and cannot be happy knowing she is in want. But is it wise to put her under the obligation of repaying me such a large sum of money? I should appreciate an early reply, since I must come to an early decision. Yours sincerely, M. A.

The Better Solution

DEAR M. A.: Inasmuch as your sister is 20 years old and already equipped with "an excellent classical education," it seems to me she is qualified (and should be willing) to assume the lion's share of responsibility for educating herself along special lines. It seems to me that the most she is entitled to, or should expect from you, is a modicum of friendly assistance which should in no wise interfere with your long-cherished dream of having a baby.

A practicable (if not ideally desirable) solution of your supposed dilemma may be found in having your sister come to live with you; in giving her an intensive short course of secretarial schooling while you, at the same time, are having your baby, and in letting her pay her way, more or less, by making herself useful about the house and with the infant. Such an arrangement, sensibly worked out with due regard for the realistic demands of the situation, ought to see both of you well on the road to realizing your respective ambitions.

It is no uncommon thing for intelligent, aspiring young women who recognize secretarial training as the open-sesame to self-sustaining occupational opportunity, to act in a mother's helper capacity as a means of obtaining board and keep while pursuing their secretarial studies. Once your sister has completed her secretarial course and has found a position, she may make other living arrangements for herself, and pursue her special studies on the side.

By the time she is 30 years of age, if not before, she should (supposing she has the necessary equipment of intellect and character) be thoroughly prepared (largely through her own efforts) for her chosen career. Or she may, of course, have married long before she reaches that age. And because there is the very considerable possibility that she may marry within the next few years, your idea of relinquishing all thought of having children in order to serve her interests might (if executed) prove to be a quixotic and futile sacrifice.

It is no more fair for you to deny your husband children in order to give your sister lavish advantages, than it would be fair for him to deny you children in order, say, to make a similarly extravagant investment in some member of his family. And I daresay such an idea on his part would make you feel very martyred indeed. As for the question: Should one bring more children into the world when those already here are unprovided for?—there is a stale, silly, post-World War, rather sophomoric flavor to it. No one would be born at all, or ever would have been born, if potential parents awaited an ideal or even tolerable social order into which to bear their children. What stumbling progress the world of mankind has made to date has been due to the sturdy optimism of fine men and women who dared to reproduce themselves and to work and hope for the best for themselves and for their children.

There should be no thought, in this instance, of the wisdom or propriety of saddling your sister with a heavy financial obligation to you. If she is transiently in need of succor, and you are able to throw her a life-line, do so—as a free and willing gift. There is, as I have already indicated, no occasion for investing heavily in special education for her. Moreover, if she is the right sort of person—worth helping because able and willing to turn a minimum of assistance to good account—she will not accept assistance of a kind that would drain the giver or mortgage the life of the recipient. Whoever shows a tendency to exploit a cheerfully sacrificial giver, is essentially a worthless investment. M. H.

Try These Draperies With Swedish Furniture

"What should be used for curtains and draperies with Swedish modern furniture?" That's a question often asked these days. The window treatment that is best matches the light and gay mood of the furniture. Homespun effects in draperies are nice for informal window settings; spun rayon satin weaves are elegant for formal settings, and there are stylized floral designs and geometric patterns.

For curtains, airily light last net is excellent. Simple open weaves, designs of stylized floral patterns and texture effects, such as in the spun rayon lace net curtains, all go well with Swedish modern furniture. The beige tones of these curtains blend in with the blond color of the furniture.

Civil War Gowns Now Dance to Swing

TOUCHING naivete of nineteenth century belles has been disguised into very modern Jane Eyres and Scarlett O'Haras. Hoops and stays set the tempo for these newly revived flirts and beau-catchers. Over ten yards of satin were skillfully flounced into the hoop-skirt, above. Petticoats peep demurely from its ruffles, which is as it should be when the model has to grasp a coy nosegay for moral support.

LUMINOUS satin has been used in the period gown, left, whose skirt borrows its quilting from the mellowed past. Up-swept hair, jeweled dog collar and foolish little puffed sleeves achieve that wilting look, considered necessary for a contemporary flirt's portrait. The statuesque model, above, is also encased in bolts of lustrous satin, the simplicity of her billowing skirts relieved only by petals encasing her bustline.

Make Your Own Slip Covers

CLEVER Mrs. Green! No more does she look yearningly at the new all-year slip covers—wishing she could afford to have some made for her own shabby furniture.

She's discovered she can make any slip cover she likes inexpensively—the easy pin-on way.

The cover she's making now will be a beauty in blue-green, smartly figured in a fleur-de-lis design in a darker shade of the same color. Seams will be neatly bound in the darker blue-green. The flounce will be in the new style, partly boxpleated, partly plain.

In making this cover or any smart style for chair or sofa, follow these three simple steps:

1. PIN AND FIT. Lay material right over the upholstery, right side up for bound seams.

Begin at the top of the inside back. Leave a 4-inch tuck-in between back and seat. Stick pins through material and upholstery every 3 inches—where seams will be.

Simple to work section by section, patting the fabric down smoothly with nary a wrinkle before you cut—1½ inches outside pins for seams.

2. BASTE AND TRY ON.

3. STITCH AND FINISH. Trim seams neatly, stitch on the binding so it covers the stitches on the seams. Now the flounce! Before the final cutting of a combination plain and pleated flounce, baste pleats in place, adjust to cover.

Claire Tilden Dress Pattern

This happy youngster is saying proudly, "I made it myself," (and so can any twelve-year-old who has ever attended sewing class!) Look—the diagram of Style No. 420 indicates that there are very few seams to do, and besides, a Sewing Guide included with the pattern shows exactly how to make the joins. Mothers could hope for no smarter, more serviceable school frock than this new, Claire Tilden success—since jumper creations are well ahead in popularity! For the jumper, choose a dark wool that won't muss easily—and a soft cotton or silk for the adorable button-collar blouse. It's thrifty to make up several blouses as well as jumpers. It dressy fabrics, the style for "best."

Pattern 420 is cut in children's sizes 4, 6, 8, 10 and 12. Size 8, jumper, requires 1⅝ yards 54-inch fabric; blouse, 1 yard 36-inch fabric.

Artist Inspired Molyneux's New Sleeve Effect

Paris (U.P.).—Among the most interesting sleeves in dressy clothes is Molyneux's "Toulouse-Lautrec" sleeve, inspired by the paintings of the artist for whom it is called. This sleeve has an exaggerated puff effect at the top and then becomes tight, with wrinkles and folds, from the elbow to within two or three inches of the waist. It is particularly effective in satins or moires.

Paquin introduces a new fullness at the elbow—practical, to say the least. His sleeves are plainly set at the shoulder, increase in width as they approach the elbow, and then are held in at the wrist.

Modified dolmans and bell sleeves of days gone by are back again, too. Not in great numbers, it's true; but enough of them to warrant their existence in one's winter wardrobe.

Beautiful Hair Is Developed Through Good Circulation

Scalp Should Be Kept Loose
Nerve Tension Is Detriment
Diet Should Be Balanced

By Ida Jean Kain.

JUST IMAGINE standing on your head to make your hair beautiful! The idea is not as fantastic as it may sound, for anything that sends the blood dancing through your veins does beautify the hair—and it will even help you to keep from getting gray so soon.

Hair, it seems, is all tied up with circulation. You do not have to stand on your head unless you feel like it. You can give your circulation just as good a jolt by milder measures, such as stretching, bending and twisting exercises, plus brushing—and plenty of it—and massage.

All these measures, you will notice, are intended to stimulate the circulation. "If you would only keep your circulation 100 per cent perfect, you would have beautiful hair and you should not have a trace of gray until you are 75," according to Gladys Ogilvie, an authority who practices what she preaches and who does a headstand every single day.

Move the Scalp

One of the surest signs of poor circulation is a scalp that is as tight as a drum. It is also a sign of nerves! And, this expert advises, massage to loosen the scalp and bring the blood to the surface should begin at the neck, where muscular tension is interfering with the supply of blood to the scalp. After you have massaged the back of your neck, place the hands firmly on the skull and massage by moving the scalp itself, rather than the fingers.

Brushing the hair exercises the roots and scalp, cleanses, and imparts a lovely sheen. It is a necessity for dry, brittle hair, but every woman should get in her hundred strokes a day—every day. Don't worry that the brushing will hurt your permanent. It just seems to make the waves deeper. The most highly approved technique is to grasp the brush near the back, bend from the hips and throw the head forward, and brush from the hairline over the top of the head.

To really get at the root of your hair trouble you must not only apply the hairbrush, massage the scalp and take a minimum of 15 minutes' daily exercise, but you must also follow a balanced diet. The right food is just as essential to your "crowning glory" as to a peaches and cream complexion. Actually, your hair shows the ill effects of a deficient diet long before your general health is affected.

Gray Hair Not Inherited

Gray hair is not a legacy. Often it is tired, starved hair, and Miss Ogilvie says that "Although gray hair itself is not inherited, the tendency may be, and that is a strong reason for extra care."

Stop thinking of your hair as something apart from you. It is almost a barometer of your vitality, for the nervous tension, worry, poor circulation and inadequate diet that detract from your well being are all reflected first in the condition of your topknot.

'Dangers' of Constipation Declared Largely Mental

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

The average person thinks of the digestive system as a cold, logical machine which attacks food and reduces it to a state which the body can utilize. He forgets that the digestive system also has to dispose of its products—he forgets the function of absorption.

He forgets it, that is, unless he happens to be constipated, and then he thinks of nothing else. The digestive canal, as we emphasized in the first of the articles this week, has the threefold function of chemical digestion, movement and absorption. In the large bowel only movement and absorption remain—there is no further chemical digestion. And the unfortunate person who is constipated does concentrate on absorption and movement—or rather lack of movement. He visualizes his insides as an enormous reservoir. That is all he can think of, and that is really almost the entire basis of constipation—its troubles are almost entirely mental. If the constipated individual could only stop thinking of the absorption and the lack of movement that is going on inside him he would be well.

Do I exaggerate? Well, to confirm what I say I turn to the best book ever written on the subject of medical treatment, that of my friend, Dr. Harry Beckman, of Milwaukee. He calls his chapter on constipation "Colon Consciousness," and he goes on to say that constipation is "a disturbance of the normal reflex condition, characterized by changes in colonic tone, irritability and secretory activity aggravated by treatment, and expressed as awareness of the colon and its activities."

Not a word about absorption, you see—the idea that tortures the constipated population.

Now it so happens that the Eternal One, or Nature, or whatever you want to name it, fixed things up so that there is no absorption from the large intestine. That is a somewhat dogmatic statement and needs some modification, but not as much as you would think. There is an absorption of water, but it is selective; there is no absorption of the putrefactive results of the growth of bacteria in the large intestine. In simple language, ordinary constipation does not "poison" your system.

As to treatment, that naturally follows in what has been said. Note that Dr. Beckman says one cause of constipation is "treatment." He means, of course, the use of cathartics—the habit of using cathartics. They simply irritate the inside of the colon and make the habitue even more colon-conscious.

As to a diet for constipation—the principle thing is to eat enough. Of course, the food should be high in roughage.

A Woman's New York

—by Alice Hughes

New York, Sept. 30.

ONE OF the big shops here got smart a few weeks ago and ran off a big contest to pick the "ideal American college girl." And it turned out to be a lot of contest. Almost a thousand belles from east of the Mississippi entered the lists, which is kind of silly, in a way, because they grow 'em beautiful and typical west of the river, but this store had to make a boundary.

ALICE HUGHES.

And the winner and new champion turned out to be a little girl from Jersey, just over the river, of the name of Mary Grabhorn. She's just starting her freshman year at Blue Ridge College, in Maryland, at the age of 17, and she's plenty pretty. She's 5 feet 6, weighs a hearty 128, likes to rhumba and has a boy friend who dances well and has a swell sense of humor, says Mary.

La Grabhorn had her pick of prizes as winner—$200 toward the expenses of her last year in college, or a wardrobe for this very semester.

These contests have far-reaching effects, at present. In the old days the contest itself was all there was—now the by products are very important. For instance, one of the judges who picked Mary was the magazine artist, Bradshaw Crandall, and he signed the girl up to pose for a cover. Then, too, these beauty parades are always scouted by big model agents, and the noted John Powers promptly signed Mary and a Brooklyn girl named Nancy Cox for his mannequin agency.

So you see the ideal American college girl may very well turn up on magazine covers, and in fashion parades at style shows. There's just no limit to a girl's chances these days, if she catches the judge's nod in a contest.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Well, today's the day when Aunt Alice and the other old grads, and I mean old, give their annual impersonation of the old college try. This afternoon we are all up in the Yale Bowl at New Haven, watching our gallant little Columbia squad do battle with the big, brutal Yales. I remember that we gave them a good thumping just four years ago, and there is some hope that we can repeat this season. By sunset tonight we'll know . . .

Another local hospital, the Manhattan General, has opened two beauty salons for convalescent patients, on the psychological ground that facials and hairdos perk up the ailing. I believe in this idea . . .

The bandleaders at our popular Stork Club get reputations so quickly that they don't seem to stay long. Blond Bobby Parks, beloved of the milk-sipping debuntantes,' took his band and popularity on tour, and now I hear that the present incumbent, Sonny Kendis, is going to do the same.

From London comes a picture of a British beauty named Tanis Sherman wearing a white satin dress with a print design of pages from a book of love poems. She wore it in a television broadcast which probably had a stimulating effect on young British gents who were looking and listening . . .

Still warm outdoors, but several of our indoor skating rinks are open for the season, and the thousands of local girls who are studying to be Sonja Henies are busily putting their figure eights. Wonder if the skate madness will be as wild here as it was last winter? . . .

The Gentler Sex

Afternoon Off

YOU ARE REALLY going to catch up on everything Saturday afternoon . . . get your wave set . . . go to the dentist . . look at new wool dresses . . . get those black suede gloves—oh, yes and a cute little collar for your old black dress . . . take a look at that face pack they're demonstrating downtown . . . pick up some white thread and some stationery—that won't take but a second—and you really ought to run out to the hospital to see Barbara's new baby . . . and then you'll pick up a nice little box of candy and stop by to see Aunt Elsie on the way home. Poor Aunt Elsie—you've been promising her for so many Saturdays—and then maybe you can walk the rest of the way home and enjoy nature . . . and do something about your desk chair spread. Yes, you will finish everything up and start with a clean slate Monday.

YOU ARE primed to dash from your office at 1 o'clock. Mr. Flint encounters you—paper in hand. If you could just take care of this letter——You can.

At 1:15 you fight your way to a drug store stool, start bolting your peanut butter sandwich, discover a familiar face on the next stool. It is Jim Nipps who used to work where you did. He he tells you about his new job . . . his new little place out in the country . . . shows you snapshots of his new baby.

You dash in breathless to the dentist ten minutes late. It's perfectly all right . . . he is being held up by some bridge work. He is still held up thirty minutes later. You read all his old copies of Popular Mechanics and Field and Stream . . . mentally decide to abandon your late afternoon walk.

WHEN you leave the dentist you rush to the beauty parlor. Now if your hair will just dry quickly—for once—you will be through by 4:45. That will give you an hour for shopping and then you'll grab a cab and go out to see Barbara's baby and . . . well, maybe you'd better put off seeing Aunt Eelsie till tomorrow.

Your hair does NOT dry quickly. When it does dry, nobody seems to care. You are left under the dryer a Forgotten Woman while scads of operators—all but your own—hurry hither and yon. At last you are rescued, your baked locks combed into Medusa curls. It is after 5 o'clock. Your head is splitting but you rush to a department store.

THE COUNTERS are crowded. At the notions you are ignored. You go to the neckwear. The array is overwhelming—yet nothing exactly that you want. You try another store—heavens, how fast the hands of the clock are moving!—have no better success. You go to the gloves, note that the saleswomen are beginning to put their stock away. Oh well, you are too tired to think. You will go home—that's it—go home and take an aspirin!

LYING in the dark quiet of your room, you consider what a supreme egotist you are. Always planning to do in a given time about ten times as much as you can. What makes you that way? Will you never get next to yourself?

It was all so absurd . . . Planning to do all those things in one afternoon. And now . . . Well you haven't your new wool dress . . . or your collar . . . or your suede gloves . . . or your white thread . . . or your stationery And you haven't seen Barbara's baby . . . or stopped by to see Aunt Elsie. And for that matter, you really should have looked at winter coats . . .

Oh well . . . maybe next Saturday afternoon . . . if you can only get properly organized . . .

Check a Site Carefully Yourself Before Buying

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY cannot be measured b ya surveyor nor guaranteed with the abstract—those things that make a vacant lot a potential homestead. And it's just as well not to take a real estate agent's word for the vital points about a piece of property . . . look them up yourself. For the neighbors, the schools, the transportation are as important as the big oak tree or the clump of lilac bushes in your future satisfaction with the lot.

Are the people nearby the type you want to live among? From visits to the schools and the churches, investigations of the clubs and local civic organizations, inspection of the parks and the library, you can glean a fairly accurate idea of the people in the district. Not only the scholastic rating of the school system, but the nearness of the school and the absence of dangerous crossings, convenience to church, park, library and shopping are added advantages.

Is the street a quiet by-way with light traffic or is it a noisy, dusty main thoroughfare? Is the alley safe and well kept? What about building regulations that govern the type of structure and the distance it may be set back from the street? Look into piping, curbing and paving improvements and the extent of indebtedness remaining on them. Boundary lines, liability for assessments and taxes, title examination are matters to go over with an attorney, and get with the deed an abstract from a reliable abstract company that proves the title.

Only after these dull details have been settled may you turn to the more interesting part of considering your home site—the personality of the ground itself. Then it is time to gloat over it . . . whether you chose a wooded tangled spot on a hill or an open rolling elevation for a stretch of velvety lawn, whether you chose a secluded lot or a convenient one.

Mrs. Francis Biddle To Spend Winter Here

Wife of TVA Counsel Hunting Apartment
Leaves Today for Visit in Germantown
Musical Score for Her Poem Completed
May Be Played by Philadelphia Symphony

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

ONE OF THE MOST interesting hostesses scheduled to spend the winter in Washington is Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the newly appointed counsel of the T. V. A., who is widely known here. In Washington the past two days, she has been spending most of her time apartment-hunting. She will be off today to her home in Germantown, Pa., but plans to return the latter part of this month.

Widely known as Katherine Garrison Chapin, the poet, Mrs. Biddle was with her husband in Knoxville, Tenn., most of the summer. They went there in July shortly after his appointment and took a house for a couple of months. Although she devoted some of her time to writing, one of her chief interests recently has been not her own work but that of Hall McDonald who has been doing the musical score for her poem-chorus, "The Lament for the Stolen," which he has just finished.

Indications are now that the piece will be played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra this season and Mrs. Biddle's friends here are hoping Washington audiences will have a chance to hear it. The theme, far from being of the ivory-tower type, has to do with the bereavement caused by kidnaping and should be of wide appeal. Hall McDonald, an American composer, has done musical scores for a number of well known poem choruses.

A WINTER in Washington will not be a new experience for Mrs. Biddle. She and her husband were here in 1934-35 when he was chairman of the National Labor Relations Board. Three years ago he resigned that position, returned to private law practice in Philadelphia, and the family moved back to their home in Germantown, Pa. But even in the hectic whirl here, Mrs. Biddle managed to work into her crowded schedule time to continue her writing and to complete a volume of verse, "Time Has No Shadow," that appeared in 1936.

That same winter, she returned to Washington to appear with Harold Vinal in a poetry recital sponsored by a number of outstanding residents including Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, who herself is a poet. The recital took place at the Phillips Memorial Gallery and the audience was noticeably studded with social lights.

During the past two winters, Mrs. Biddle has continued her writing, and has spent much time on the poem-chorus. EShe also has another literary iron in the fire but isn't yet ready to tell what it is. Incidentally, she is the author of three books, including "Outside the World," and "Bright Mariner," as well as a number of poems published in such top-flight magazines as Harpers, Scribner's and the Saturday Review of Literature. The Biddles have one son, Edmund Randolph, who will be in school this winter.

OF PERSONAL NOTE: Mrs. Emlen Knight Davies has leased her home on Massachusetts avenue to Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Himes, who will move there early next week from their home, Prospect Hill, near Frederick, Md. Last winter Mr. and Mrs. Himes had an apartment at 211 Connecticut avenue . . . John Gross, who with his wife, the former Laura Curtis, arrived in Washington recently for a visit, returned to his home in Pennsylvania yesterday. Mrs. Gross will remain here for some time, and today will be present at the luncheon that will reopen her 1925 F street club for the season . . . Mrs. John H. Dwight is back from a four-month stay in California, and has taken an apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue . . . Ricardo Siri, second secretary of the Argentine Embassy, will leave soon for Mexico, where he will be Charge d'Affaires of his country's embassy until the arrival there of the newly appointed Argentine envoy.

Sr. Elizalde's Family on Way

Senora de Elizalde, wife of Joaquin Miguel Elizalde, new resident commissioner of the Philippines, and their two daughters, Elenita and Cecilia, will arrive in New York today on the S. S. Paris from London and will come to Washington to join the commissioner, who arrived in the Capital early yesterday and is established in the apartment they will occupy at the Shoreham Hotel. Senor Elizalde, who succeeds Senor Quintin Paredes, resigned, was sworn into office at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning by the Secretary of War.

Senora de Elizalde and her daughter have been living in London for two years while the girls were attending the Convent of the Sacred Heart there. Elenita is 13 years old and Cecilia, 9. They will be with their parents at the Shoreham only a few days before entering the Convent of the Sacred Heart in Philadelphia.

The commissioner, who joined his family in London this summer, arrived in the United States on the S. S. Bremen September 8, and has been in New York City since that time. Five days earlier his brother and sister-in-law, Manuel Elizalde and Senora de Elizalde, who also had been in Europe, arrived in New York on the Normandie and remained there until yesterday, when they accompanied the commissioner to Washington. After a few days at his hotel, they will return to New York and later to the Philippines. Also with the commissioner's party here is Fernando de la Guardia, of New York.

Count Tisza And Wife to Visit The Brewsters

Two distinguished Hungarian visitors to Washington have been Count and Countess Kalma Tisza of Budapest, who will leave the Mayflower today for a week-end stay with Mr. and Mrs. Kingman Brewster at Catoctin Lodge, Frederick County, Md.

Count Tisza's father was at one time Prime Minister of Hungary, the Count recently returned from a shooting trip in Alaska with Mr. Brewster. Mrs. Brewster and the Countess have been touring Vancouver, Lake Louise and Banff.

Count and Countess Tisza will return to Washington for a few hours next week before sailing from New York October 5 for Europe.

Greek Envoy Returns To Post in Capital

The Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, returned to Washington yesterday accompanied by the newly appointed Counselor of the legation, George Depastas, and Mme. Depastas, who will be at the Mayflower until they find a house.

Nicholas Lely, who has been Counselor here for a number of years, will leave shortly to serve as Consul General in New York.

Mr. Castell Weds Miss Johannsen

Miss Drusilla Evelyn Johannsen and William Joseph Castell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Castell, of Takoma, Md., were married Saturday, September 24, in Chicago.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. G. Johannsen, of Chicago, and attended National Park Seminary here in 1935 and 1936. Mr. Castell is a graduate of the Landon School for Boys.

The couple plans to live in Jacksonville, Fla.

Birth Announced

Dr. and Mrs. Norman Lee Barr announce the birth of a son on September 21. The boy has been named Norman Lee Barr, jr. Dr. Barr is a leiutenant in the Medical Corps of the United States Navy.

To Be Presented to Society This Winter

Underwood & Underwood.

Miss Mae Ashby Proctor, who will make her bow this winter under the aegis of her mother, Mrs. William H. Goodacre. While the exact date of the party has not yet been decided, it will take place at Salubria, Oxon Hill, Md., where the debutante makes her home. Miss Proctor spent most of the summer with her uncle and aunt, Dr. and Mrs. J. Breckinridge Bayne, on their yacht, Venture II. The Baynes recently returned to Washington and have reopened their home on Belmont road.

Spanish Envoy To Fete Duchess

The Spanish Ambassador and Senora de los Rios have issued invitations to a dinner on Tuesday evening in honor of the Duchess of Atholl, who will arrive here Monday and will be at the Mayflower for three days.

Widely entertained in New York ever since she arrived there several days ago, the Duchess was guest of honor at a dinner given Thursday night by Dr. and Mrs. Nicholas Murray Butler at their home on Morningside drive.

Among the guests were Sir Gerald and Lady Campbell, Danylo Skoropadsky, Prof. and Mrs. Boris A. Bakhmeteff, Mr. and Mrs. Dave Hennen Morris, Mrs. Orme Wilson, Mrs. William Warner Hoppin, Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Wilmerding, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic R. Coudert, Coster Wilmerding and Philip M. Hayden.

Stapletons to Return To Capital Today

Mr. Daniel C. Stapleton and her post-debutante daughter, Miss Stellita Stapleton, will return to Washington today after an absence of several months. They are not opening their home on Massachusetts avenue, as they plan to winter in South America but will stay at the Sulgrave Club.

Mrs. Stapleton and her daughter spent the summer in London, and have been in New York since landing in this country last week.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

The Peruvian Ambassador, Dr. Manuel de Freyre y Santander, returned yesterday from Eaglesmere, Pa., where he spent the summer.

The Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Hurban have with them at the legation Senator Vojta Benes, brother of President Edward Benes of Czechslovakia. He came here to address a "Save Czechoslovakia" meeting on Thursday evening.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. George Pillsbury returned to New York yesterday on the Deutschland after a vacation in Europe.

Mrs. Albert Gallatin Simms, former Representative from Illinois, is at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel in New York from her home in Albuquerque, N. Mex. She is accompanied by her daughter, Miss Ruth E. McCormick, whose father was the late Senator Medill McCormick.

Jerome N. Frank, of the Securities and Exchange Commission, who is at the Wardman Park Hotel for the winter, will be joined there shortly by Mrs. Frank.

Now at the Carlton Hotel are Mr. and Mrs. Arch B. Johnston, of Bethlehem, Pa.

Miss Lillian McClellan, of Brookline, Mass., is at the Dodge.

Col. and Mrs. Charles W. Haverkampf arrived here yesterday from Sarasota, Fla., and have taken an apartment at the Wardman Park for the season.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

MME. BOSTROM, wife of the Minister of Sweden; Mme. Jarnefelt, wife of the Finnish Minister, and Greta Garbo are all coming to this country together. They are fellow-passengers on the liner Kungsholm, which is supposed to land in New York next Thursday, but may be late, as it was ordered to Aberdeen, Scotland, to pick up American refugees from the war scare.

DUDLEY HARMON

Everybody is hoping that Mmes. Bostrom and Jarnefelt will be able to break down some of the famous movie stars reserve and have some interesting things to tell Washington society about her.

Both ministers expect to go to New York to meet their wives. Mme. Bostrom sailed in midsummer, shortly after the departure of the Swedish royal party. Mme. Jarnefelt embarked a few weeks before.

IF MEMBERS of the British embassy staff have been missing from Capital parties of late, it's not because of the tense situation abroad, but is owing to official mourning for Prince Arthur of Connaught, from which they have just emerged. The wives of members of the staff had to go into all-black and nobody could attend any big social function.

THE FIRST cocktail party of the year is always the most fun, and that given yesterday afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. John Caswell led off the season. It was Mrs. Caswell's birthday and she celebrated by asking a few friends in between five and seven.

Wearing a large orchid pinned to her long black gown, Mrs. Caswell welcomed her guests in the upstairs living room with its walls tinted a pale green. Chrysanthemums, furs, and russet-colored suits enhanced the autumn feeling in the air.

A NEW culinary touch which Washington hostesses, weary of the usual celery and olives, would do well to adopt, was introduced yesterday. Large mushrooms, filled with meat and roasted in the oven, created something of a sensation.

Seen here and there: Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., in a grey suit with a frilled blouse, chatting with Wolcott Waggaman. Mrs. Robert is up to her ears in work as vice chairman of the Inter-American Horse Show . . . Mrs. George T. Pettingill, in a russet tweed coat, with her son, Bill Pettingill . . . Mrs. Marshall Exnicios chatting with Mrs. George Pulver, both looking autumn-y in a grey suit and plaid coat respectively; Mrs. Warren Delano Robbins, coming in late, wearing all black; Mrs. John R. Williams sitting before the fire, and Ralph Snowden Hill.

Mrs. Hamilton Bryan wore a smart henna colored outfit with matching hat. Commander Bryan and Commander and Mrs. John Magruder were also there from the Navy ranks. Smart Mrs. Francis Whitten wore a huge orchid pinned to her gray tailleur . . . Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., positively dripped silver foxes, in chic contrast to her bright red dress . . . Mr. and Mrs. Morris Clark and Dr. and Mrs. Kurt Hetzel chatted with Lady Lewis . . . Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Christopher Bramwell, Mr. and Mrs. William McCracken, Miss Jane Watson, who will spend the week-end at what's left of her parent's home in Southampton after the hurricane; Miss Francesca McKenney, in a sand-colored outfit with a cross fox scarf, were others present.

Miss Peggy Lansdowne, daughter of the hostess, assisted her mother during the afternoon.

MR. AND MRS. CECIL LYON sailed yesterday on the Santa Barbara for Chile; where Mr. Lyon will be secretary of our embassy. Mrs. J. Pierrepont Moffat, Mrs. Lyons' sister, went to New York to see them off.

WORKING GIRLS: Mrs. William T. Mann, the very decorative blonde, has a job as salesgirl at a smart New York shop which recently opened a branch on Connecticut avenue . . . Mary Cootes has taken up secretarial work in the mornings.

Kathryn Murphy Now in London

Miss Kathryn Murphy, daughter of Thomas F. Murphy, of this city, is now in London where she is concluding a European tour which she began the latter part of August. She will return to Washington about the middle of October.

Countries which she visited on her trip included France, Switzerland, Germany, Belgium and Holland. She will also spend some time in Scotland before sailing for the United States.

Miss Murphy is a graduate of George Washington University and has recently completed requirements for her master's degree at the same school. She specialized in history and has been elected to membership in the American Historical Association.

Boncescos Land

George Boncesco, who is returning to Washington again as financial counselor of the Rumanian legation after a brief tour of duty on Bucharest and London, will arrive in New York today on the French liner Paris. Mme. Bonesco is with him.

Minister to Egypt Arrives in N. Y.

Bert Fish, United States Minister to Egypt, who will arrive in New York today on the President Adams, will come to Washington after a few days.

Other arrivals in New York from abroad include Brig. Gen. George B. Pillsbury, U. S. A., retired, who with Mrs. Pillsbury reached there yesterday on the Deutschland. They have spent the summer abroad.

Other travelers were the Secretary of the United States Embassy in Santiago, Chile, Cecil B. Lyon, and Mrs. Lyon, who sailed yesterday on the Santa Barbara for Valparaiso. They are accompanied by their daughters, Alice and Lila Lyon.

Ordered to Bucharest

Farewells are in order for George Duca, who will leave Washington about November 10 to take up duties in the foreign office at Bucharest. Mr. Duca is the second secretary of the Rumanian Legation.

Elsa Maxwell Tells of Climb Of Mdvanis

His Letters Brotherly
Thought 'Babs' Plump
His Sister Had Brain

Washington, perhaps more than most cities, is interested in the spectacular career of millionairess Barbara Hutton because so many women in society here have married titled foreigners, as did the five-and-ten heiress.

Elsa Maxwell, who has written a serial story on Barbara's life for a national magazine, describes the amazing activities of the clan Mdivani in arranging the marriage of their brother to Barbara Hutton.

According to Miss Maxwell, "When Barbara Hutton was climbing trees in California, in Tiflis a fantastic family of Mdivanis were planning to climb the world." Of the five children, the youngest, Alexis, while less tall and handsome than his brothers, was chosen by fate to be the shooting star of the family. His ambition and the brains of his sister, Nina, were responsible for his rapid rise from respectable poverty to riches.

In the beginning, it was not the idea of Alexis to marry his old friend Barbara Hutton, whom he had always looked upon with unromantic eyes, according to Miss Maxwell's article. Since their first meeting at Biarritz, he had thought of her as a plump, cozy little companion who wrote him friendly, perplexed letters, to which he responded with almost brotherly advice.

But, says Miss Maxwell, it was Nina's brain that settled Barbara's fate. And it was to send her talented brother around the world and half way around again before he married the five-and ten-cent store heiress in the ancient Russian cathedral in Paris.

Miss Wilkinson To Make Debut At Tea Nov. 3

Capt. and Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson have selected Thursday, November 3, as the date of the tea at which they will present their daughter, Miss Ann H. Wilkinson, to Capital society. The party will be held at their home in Arlington, Va.

On November 23, Capt. and Mrs. Wilkinson will give a dance for young people for their daughter at their home.

Richbergs Back From Trip Abroad

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Richberg and their daughter, Eloise, returned to their home at 109 Brookside drive, Kenwood, Md., last evening from a trip to Europe.

Mr. Richberg, former WPA administrator, and his family arrived in this country on the S. S. Manhattan, which docked in New York last Thursday.

A highlight of their European trip was a sailing voyage with the United States Envoy to Belgium and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies on their yacht, The Sea Cloud.

Early last summer Mr. and Mrs. Richberg spent some time visiting friends at Great Barrington, Mass., after which they took a cottage at Rehoboth Beach for the first part of August.

At Rehoboth, they were joined by their daughter, who had been on a camping trip to the North Carolina mountains. Later that same month the three of them left for the continent, where they toured for several weeks, and from which trip they have just returned.

Eugene Robertses Here After Stay in Newport

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts and their family arrived here yesterday after a summer at their home in Newport. The stopped in New York for a brief stay en route.

Mrs. Roberts' mother, Countess Laszlo Szchenyi, who has been at Newport with her sister, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, has gone to New York.

MRS. L. E. GALLAGHER.

Margaret Nolan Becomes Bride

Autumn foliage, palms, ferns and white chrysanthemums formed the setting for the wedding yesterday morning at 10 o'clock of Miss Margaret Mary Nolan, daughter of Thomas Michael Nolan, of Washington, and the late Mrs. Nolan, to Lawrence Eugene Gallagher.

The ceremony took place at the Holy Comforter Church, the Rev. Patrick Begley officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin made with a tight-fitting bodice, a long train and leg-o'-mutton sleeves coming to a point over the wrists. Her long veil fell from a tall headdress, and she carried a prayer book with a spray of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. C. L. Pierce Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. C. L. Pierce, the matron of honor, wore a gown of bronze green velvet, with matching shoes and headdress. She carried yellow chrysanthemums and fern. Miss Cynthia Eldridge, the maid of honor, was attired in a fuschia frock made like that of Mrs. Pierce, and carried bronze chrysanthemums and fern.

Dr. David M. Nolan, brother of the bride, served as best man, and two other brothers, Thomas A. Nolan and Edward F. Nolan, were ushers.

A reception followed the ceremony at the bride's home, which was decorated for the occasion with white chrysanthemums, oak foliage and ferns.

Couple to Live In Washington

When she left for her wedding trip, the bride was wearing a plum colored suit trimmed with black Persian lamb, and teal blue accessories. On their return, the couple will live in Washington.

Among out-of-town guests at the wedding were C. L. Pierce, Charles and Lawrence Pierce, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Golden and Miss Elizabeth Gallagher, of Scranton, Pa.; Mrs. Fanny Forde, Mrs. John Wallace Moore and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Welsh, of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. William Kelly, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. William E. Nolan and Mrs. William Marchant, of Port Jervis, N. Y.

Wedding Party Conrads' Guests

Mr. and Mrs John Fairfax Conrad, whose daughter, Miss Virginia Fairfax Conrad, will be married to James Payne Carroll, jr., at noon today, entertained yesterday evening for members of the wedding party at the Heigh-Ho Club.

The guests, who had just finished the rehearsal for the wedding, were Dr. and Mrs. E. G. Colner, Harwey Williams, Lois Welch, Quinn Tamm, Miss Florence Kelsey, Dr. and Mrs. Henry Tracey, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bonavita, Mr. and Mrs. Blair Price and Mr. and Mrs. Chesterman Constantine.

Crisis Puts Crimp in Social Affairs Here

Schedules Postponed
Hulls Have No Plans
Farleys Out of Town

The recent flurry on the Continent has had somewhat of a backfire in the Capital city, with the result that a season which should be fairly well launched has hardly started. Cabinet hostesses are for the most part making no official schedule as yet, and arranging their days so that their harrassed husbands may relax completely during their few free moments.

Secretary of State Cordell Hull and Mrs. Hull have planned nothing for the season as yet.

Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, jr., wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, is still at their farm at Fishkill, but expects to return to town for the winter within a week or ten days. The Secretary's plans for the week-end are necessarily nebulous.

Mrs. Harry H. Woodring, wife of the Secretary of War, left Washington on Thursday, and after a couple of days in New York, is now on her way to Fitchburg, Mass., where she will collect the young Woodrings, and return with them to town next Wednesday.

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and Mrs. Cummings will entertain at dinner this evening. Among the guests will be Judge John J. Parker, of Charlotte, N. C., presiding judge of the Fourth Circuit.

Postmaster General James A. Farley is now in Rochester, N. Y., at the Democratic State convention, having left Washington last Thursday. He will return to New York City the first of next week to join Mrs. Farley, but is not expected back in town before another ten days.

Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Claude A. Swanson have no entertainments planned for the week-end.

Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, who left Washington on Thursday, spoke last evening before the Democratic State convention banquet in Grand Rapids, Mich., on the topic "Liberalize and Live." He is expected to return to town during the week-end.

The Secretary of Agriculture, Henry A. Wallace, is also out of town. On Thursday he spoke in Hutchinson, Kans., at a farm meeting, yesterday found him in Fort Worth, Tex., where he spoke before the cotton farmers. Tomorrow he will broadcast a speech from the University of Chicago, in that city, on farm subjects.

The Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Roper are spending the week-end quietly in town, as is Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Frances Parrott Completes Plan For Her Wedding

Miss Frances Malinda Parrott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Parrott, of Falls Church, Va., has completed plans for her wedding Thursday, October 20, to Everett Braughton Coxen, son of Mrs. Josephine Coxen, of Alexandria.

The ceremony will take place at 8 o'clock in the evening in the Columbia Baptist Church in Falls Church, and will be followed by a reception for the bridal party and members of the families at the home of the bride.

Miss Parrott will have as her maid of honor Miss Emmie Harwood. The bridesmaids are Mrs. Carlton Walsh and the Misses Elizabeth Murr, Evelyn Markwood, Rubylee Parrott, a cousin, Betty Hunt, and Eunice Kemper.

Harry Coxen will serve as best man for his brother, and the ushers will be John Parrott, the bride's brother, Richard Moncure, Carlton Walsh, Francis Mann and Archie Gordon.

3 Capital Belles Off For West Point Hops

Miss Carol S. Fries, daughter of Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, and Miss Marion Edwards, daughter of Mrs. Edwards and the late Col. G. H. Edwards, and Miss Lucia Kelsoe, left yesterday morning to spend the week-end at West Point.

They will attend the hops at the Military Academy and will return to town late Monday evening. Miss Fries' parents, who left last month to attend the American Legion convention in Los Angeles, are making a leisurely journey home

Dr. Woolley Lays Unrest To U. S.

Democracies Blamed Educator Talked Here Parley Advocated

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Democratic powers are paying the price for ignoring innumerable opportunities in the last 20 years to put international affairs on a basis of reason rather than force, says Dr. Mary E. Woolley, chairman of international relations for the American Association of University Women. Dr. Woolley, who was among the speakers Thursday night at the meeting there in behalf of Czechoslovakia, remained in Washington yesterday for the session of her committee at the A. A. U. W. clubhouse.

"If, in 1931 when the Japanese invaded Manchuria, the nations had unselfishly refused to recognize any situation resulting from lack of adherence to the Covenant of the Pact of Paris—if they had said to Japan, 'Go further and you will be an outlaw among nations; had applied economic and financial sanctions . . . the situation could have been controlled.

"But we were all considering our own selfish interests; we did not want to lose trade.

Early Action Would Have Curbed Outlawry

"No nation could have stood a month against the power of sanctions," Dr. Woolley declared, "but the powers failed to use them. The result was that the Japanese went on; Italy marched into Ethiopia; Germany remilitarized the Rhine and now Czechoslovakia is the latest sacrifice to the 'might-is-right' theory."

Dr. Woolley belivees that if the United States even now were to join the League of Nations, it would give new spirit to Great Britain and France, confidence to the smaller nations and would warn others that there was united sentiment in behalf of justice and common security.

Pointing out the League of Nations is the only hope of smaller countries, she asserted her conviction that, were the powers ready to stand together through the League, their moral force would control those with predatory ideas.

The American Association of University Women has never favored isolation, Dr. Woolley explained. It is the sentiment of the organization that the United States should co-operate in efforts for collective security—"on the basis of reason, not force," she added.

She would favor our President's accepting the role of arbitrator in the European drama if he is called upon to do so.

"We are in a position unlike any other country of the world, said Dr. Woolley. "We have a kind of independence which no other has. Our position with other peoples is one of confidence. They are often irritated with us and sometimes scornful, but they realize we have the great advantage of not having inherited the suspicions and old intrigues of Europe. We are free from prepossessions.

Urges Co-operation At Conference Tables

"As far as the attitude of those who think our entrance into the World War should have taught us a lesson once and for all as to international co-operation—well, they are not thinking the problem through. Our co-operation then was on the basis of force, not of reason. War is like taking the lid off the Pandora box, letting loose all the passions of men. The loss of idealism goes hand in hand with the loss of life and destruction of cities. But, around a conference table, there is opportunity to bring out the best in men."

She confessed relief that war has been staved off in Europe, but shame that the great powers of the world permitted the breaking up of Czechoslovakia. This country shares responsibility with those of Europe for what has occurred, she believes, because of its failure to exert the moral force it could have wielded had it been a member of the League of Nations.

As the interview in the A. A. U. W. clubhouse was concluded, Mrs. Jaromil Sladek, of Prague, who is remaining in Washington because of the condition in her country, greeted Dr. Woolley whom she had met in Geneva. She expressed bitterness at the fate of her nation and the failure of its allies to come to its aid.

Dr. Woolley and the association officers spent the entire day in committee session, preparing the program of their department for the year.

University Women Plan Their Program

Sorority Unit Seats Officers

Zeta Chapter of the Kappa Gamma Sorority held its installation ceremony at a banquet last night in the Hotel Raleigh's grand ball room. Zeta is the sixth chapter in Washington. The colors of the national sorority, crimson and gold, were used in the decorations and in the menu as well.

Honor guests at the installation included Dr. Jessie Sprowls, of the psychology department of the University of Maryland, director of the society's instructors; Dr. John Bently, of American University; Mrs. Helen McChesney, president of the national sorority, who will preside; Miss Mercedes Gabriaith, national vice president, formerly of Washington, who flew from Chicago to be at the meeting last night; Mrs. Joe Orr Davis, national secretary-treasurer; Miss Florence Mermes and Miss Betty Hoff, associate secretaries.

Among other guests were the officers of the Zeta Chapter, Miss Julie Hood Oden, first vice president; Miss Martha Clarke, second vice president; Miss Ruby Lee Saunders, secretary; Miss Esther Blanford, treasurer; Miss Nova La Motte, initiate of the Alpha Gamma Chapter, Baltimore; Mrs. Vera Strock, Alpha Gamma, Baltimore, and Dr. Jules Strobel and Miss Ida Sisson, of the Beta Chapter.

Miss H. Ida Curry, Social Worker, Returns to D. C.

Miss H. Ida Curry, social worker and former Washingtonian, has returned to make her home with her sisters at 1420 Girard street northwest.

Miss Curry retired in June as an assistant secretary and superintendent of county child welfare of the State Charities Aid Association of New York State, and has been spending the summer on a ranch in Montana.

She was the pioneer in organizing rural public units of child welfare and has been a consultant and lecturer in the field of public welfare organization and administration. She is chairman of the consultation committee of the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

Sorority Gives Dinner

Alpha Gamma Chapter of Alpha Theta Beta Sorority gave a dinner last evening at the Wardman Park Hotel, starting its fall program. Eighteen members were present and some of them were joined by their escorts, and attended the supper dance in the Metronome Room of the hotel.

Plan Hadassah Lectures

Harris & Ewing.

MRS. SAMUEL DODECK, right, chairman of the education committee of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, talking with Mrs. Hyde Buller, who will give the first of a series of lectures in the Hadassah Institute course of Jewish education, to open Monday afternoon. They will be held at the Jewish Community Center, Mondays at 2 o'clock.

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Master of the Air

The great steadfastly will refuse
Their strength and power to abuse.
—Old Mother Nature.

Fearless the Duck Hawk towered above the clearing around the sugar house in the Green Forest until to the watchers below he was a mere speck, and they soon lost sight of him altogether. A Homing Pigeon had escaped him by plunging headlong into the protection of a thicket and there, panting with fright and exhaustion, it had been picked up by the Old Naturalist.

"I'm glad that horrid Hawk didn't catch you," crooned Sue as she gently stroked the frightened bird. "I hope a bigger Hawk or an Eagle or something will catch him."

"That is a vain wish and a foolish wish," said the Old Naturalist gently. "It is vain because he is truly master of the air and he can outfly all other birds unless it be some of the swifts, and he has been known to catch these. There are other Hawks bigger than the Duck Hawk and of course Eagles are much bigger, but the Duck Hawk can fly circles around them and doesn't know the meaning of the word fear. And, my dear, your wish is foolish because that bird was doing no wrong; he was merely trying to get food to satisfy his hunger. He does not seek to kill because he finds pleasure in the hunt, as some Men do. He kills because it is necessary in order that he may live."

"How fast can a Duck Hawk fly?" Sammy wanted to know.

"That depends," was the reply, "One was timed flying at the rate of 180 miles an hour."

"Whee!" cried Tommy. "Why that is three miles a minute!"

"True," agreed the Old Naturalist. "Probably that record was made when the bird was at top speed in pursuit of prey and such speed couldn't be long sustained. Have you read of falconry?"

All three nodded. "You mean hunting with trained Hawks the way they did in older days in Europe," said Sue.

"That's it," replied the Old Naturalist. "Several kinds of Hawks were used, but the best ones, because the fastest and the keenest hunters, belonged to the branch of the family known as Falcons, and the best of these was for Peregrine Falcon. Our Duck Hawk is the American Peregrine Falcon, and when taken young has been trained just as were the Falcons of long ago. It has but one enemy to fear and that one is —"

"A Man with a gun," Tommy finished for him.

"And the collector of eggs," added the Old Naturalist. "Perhaps it is for this reason," he continued, "that the nest almost always is on a ledge high up on a cliff, a ledge almost or quite impossible to climb to. And sometimes it seems that these masters of the air are so utterly fearless that they scorn even the Man with the gun. I once knew a hunter to shoot and kill a flying quail and have a Duck Hawk strike the falling bird before it reached the ground and dash away with it before the astonished hunter recovered from his surprise in time to shoot."

"Of what use is the Duck Hawk?" Sammy asked.

The eyes of the Old Naturalist twinkled. "That depends on the point of view," he replied. "When he boldly visits a chicken yard and takes a chicken from under the farmer's very nose the farmer can see no good in him whatever. It is the same way with the hunter when he sees a game bird taken that he wanted to kill himself. But what do I see? A beautiful feathered champion of independence, magnificent in his complete mastery of that most difficult of elements, the air; fearless, asking no favors; self-reliant, courageous and a true sportsman, for he glories in a fair chase and scorns to take advantage. He kills for his immediate needs and is content. Of Pigeons there are many and always will be. Of these masters of the air there are comparatively few. We can spare them what they need. So when I see a Duck Hawk I feel like doffing my hat and saying, 'All hail, Master of the air!'"

Sigma Phi Gamma Will Hold Fall Dance Tonight

Miss Peggy Connor, president of Epsilon Province of Sigma Phi Gamma International Sorority, and a member of Delta Sigma Chapter, is acting chairman of the dance being sponsored by the province tonight at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Epsilon Province is composed of the chapters in the District, including Gamma Sigma, Delta Omega, Epsilon Alpha, Epsilon Pi, Gamma Rho, Delta Mu, and Delta Chi. Members of the first four are co-operating in arrangements for the dance of the fall season.

Miss Connor's assistants are Mrs. Hazel Shipstead, Miss June Beaver, Mrs. Gertrude Johnson and Mrs. Alys Meglen. About 500 are expected to attend.

Miss Dorothea Schumann, formerly a member of the chapter in Chillicothe, Ohio, and now affiliated with Delta Sigma Chapter here in Washington, will entertain informally at a small cocktail party before the dance.

Mrs. Buller To Lecture Here

The Washington Chapter of Hadassah is presenting an innovation in its educational program this year in the form of an Institute of Jewish Education. It offers courses and lectures on Jewish culture throughout the year.

Mrs. Samuel M. Dodek, chairman of the educational committee of Hadassah, which is sponsoring the institute, has announced the first course of lectures opening Monday, to be given by Mrs. Hyde Buller. Her subject is "The Novel as a Social Instrument in Contemporary Jewish Life." The courses will be given at the Jewish Community Center on Mondays at 2 p. m. Mrs. Buller's lectures will be October 14, 21, 24 and 31.

Mrs. Buller is well known in Washington, having done much lecture work in the several years that she has been here. She was graduated from Wellesley College in 1933 with honors in Greek and did special work in English literature and German. Her thesis on "The Religion of Aeschylus" was published and Wellesley College sent her to the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, Greece, to study archaeology with special reference to the Greek theater.

She also traveled extensively for a year, living for some time in the old cities of Damascus, Syria, and Jerusalem, Palestine, to study social conditions. On her return, she worked at Wellesley College, directing plays in both English and Greek.

In her capacity as a lecturer, Mrs. Buller gave a series of talks on "Social Conditions in the Near East" at the Boston Women's College Club; lectures on "The History of Contemporary Drama" at the Jewish Women's University Club in Boston; several courses of lectures on the "History and Theory of Criticism" for the Temple Helillath Israel, in Brookline, Mass., and also has addressed many other organizations.

She also acted as the seasonal director of the Little Theater of Temple Israel, in Boston, and was the director of theater of the Boston Women's Scholarship Association. Since her residence in Washington, she has returned to Wellesley to stage and direct several Greek plays.

In her lectures for the Hadassah Institute, Mrs. Buller will discuss the twentieth century trends in the novel, and point out their social instrumentality in contemporary Jewish life. She will discuss such novels as Jacob Wasserman's "The World's Illusion," Franz Werfel's "Forty Days of Musa Dagh," Arnold Zweig's "The Case of Sergeant Grischa," Leon Feuchtwanger's "The Oppermann," and many others.

Club Re-elects Mrs. Keyser

The Entre Nous Club yesterday elected Mrs. Charles P. Keyser, its founder, to serve again as its president. She has held that office ever since the club was organized, more than 15 years ago at her home.

The election yesterday took place at the Hospice, 1525 Sixteenth street, a room of which the club has furnished. Plans also were made for a card party there October 14.

Officers, in addition to Mrs. Keyser, are Mrs. Charles Ferguson, first vice president; Mrs. Charles Dasher, second vice president; Mrs. Robert Lyon, recording secretary; Mrs. William Sault, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Otis J. Rogers, treasurer; Mrs. James Underwood, auditor; Mrs. William Badgley, historian; Mrs. George Cook, director to the District of Columbia Federation; Mrs. Eugene Woodson, alternate; Mrs. William Scott, chairman of publicity.

Original paintings for the room at the Hospice were given yesterday by Mrs. Lloyd W. Biddle, former president of the District of Columbia Federation, and Mrs. Miles Trowbridge, both artists.

D.A.R. Here Opens Season With Talk

Opening the season, Columbia Chapter, D. A. R., met on Tuesday evening at the home of Miss Florence Dickinson, 1836 Kenyon street. Vacation experiences were exchanged, and a talk was given by Mrs. A. J. Kress on her recent trip to Europe. The regent, Miss Phebe Ann Ross, presided.

"MADAME CHAIRMAN"

By Suzanne.

THE ALUMNAE ASSOCIATION of St. Agnes School, in Alexandria, last night sponsored a style show in the auditorium of Maury School there for the benefit of a fund with which it expects to make a gift to St. Agnes School.

Miss Virginia Beverley Coryell was chairman of the committee in charge, with Mrs. Evelyn Dupre Morrsi and Charles Ellet Cabell as her assistants. Miss Dorothy Jean Catrow is president of the alumnae group.

ANNE G. MURPHY, who is employed by the Veterans Administration, has been awarded a three-year scholarship at National University School of Law by Kappa Beta Pi, international legal sorority.

Miss Murphy is the daughter of Mrs. M. T. Murphy, of New Britain, Conn., and is a graduate of New Britain high school and the Teachers College of Connecticut.

THE WOMAN'S ALLIANCE of All Souls Unitarian Church will start its new year with a board meeting, called for October 7 by the president, Miss Florence Bingham.

Mrs. R. S. H. Dyer, chairman of the program committee, has announced for the first general meeting, October 14, a talk by Dr. U. G. B. Pierce. Music will be a feature of the season's programs and will be arranged by Mrs. Donald D. Sells and Mrs. Edward H. Walter. The business meetings will be held on Fridays at 11 o'clock.

Mrs. Frederick O. Smith is chaiman of the annual bazaar which will be held in December, with Mrs. Frank Eliot chairman of the book committee for the event. Mrs. Eliot will sponsor the program for October 28, which will include a review of books for Christmas, and a talk on children's books by Mrs. H. T. Vosper.

MRS. FRANK M. HOADLEY, of Chevy Chase, spoke yesterday at the opening luncheon of the Woman's City Club of Baltimore, on "Club Dividends." The City Club meets in its own clubhouse on Mount Vernon place.

THE VENTURE CLUB, a junior group of young business women sponsored by the Soroptimists, entertained prospective members Wednesday night with a dinner at the Lewis Hotel Training School. The girls prepared and served their own dinner, with Dorothy Hering, president of the club, and Jerry Smiley, secretary, assigning each a task as she arrived.

The prospective members were Joan C. Doyle, Catherine Muckelbauer, Vivian C. Roberts, Margaret Jamison and Mary Elizabeth Wilson.

THE NEWSPAPER WOMEN'S CLUB has postponed the tea it was to have given Monday afternoon in honor of the Irish Minister and Mrs. Robert Brennan, due to Mr. Brennan's illness.

Chest League Holds Session

"Community Chest League members have the responsibility of arousing interest in the human needs of Greater Washington. It is one of the most constructive things that has ever happened in the history of the Community Chest."

So stated Coleman Jennings, president of Washington's Community Chest, at the first meeting of the league held yesterday at the home of its acting chairman, Mrs. James Clement Dunn, 27 Observatory Circle, and attended by her various group chairmen.

Mrs. Dunn, presiding, called on Randolph G. Bishop, assistant director of the Chest, to outline in general the program of the league, and asked the committee chairmen for their reports.

Mrs. William W. Mackall, jr., chairman of the social welfare exhibition, reported that her group was taking over a vacant store at the corner of Twelfth and G streets, to be known as "Exhibition Hall," where the social welfare agencies would have their exhibits from October 18 to November 4, open from Monday through Friday each week from 11 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Mrs. G. Howland Chase, chairman of the "Open House" tours, announced two "Go-and-See" tours of the various Chest agencies would start from Exhibition House at 2:15 and 4:15 each day. All of those wishing to visit any one of the agencies will be taken around by motor corps members under Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr. The members will wear uniforms consisting of white rubber coats with red collars and trench caps of the same material with red feathers.

Plans for the opening luncheon of the league, to be held in the Italian garden of the Mayflower on Monday, October 17, were outlined by Mrs. Wilson Lee, chairman of this committee, who is being assisted by Mrs. William J. Flather, jr., and a group of prominent women.

Other chairmen who made reports at yesterday's meeting were Mrs. Walter B. Fry, chairman of the Metropolitan Area Organization, whose work, assisted by her vice chairman, Mrs. W. A. Moyer, is to encourage members of the 1,045 organization groups in Washington to take the tours. Miss Elizabeth Houghton, chairman of the photographic corps, who, with her corps of several Junior League members, will take pictures of the activities of various agencies; Mrs. David Cushman Coyle, chairman of the committee on educational institutions, who is to contact educational groups.

A.F.L. Group Calls for Senate Fight on Smith

Building Trades Vote Ask Public Statements Green for 30-Hr. Week

By the United Press.

Houston, Tex., Sept. 30.—A showdown fight in the Senate with President Roosevelt over his reappointment of Donald Wakefield Smith to the National Labor Relations Board was demanded of the American Federation of Labor tonight by its influential building trades department.

The President reappointed Smith on August 27 after the federation's executive council had accused Smith of being unfair and of being biased toward the Committee for Industrial Organization.

Tonight in closing its three-day meeting preparatory to taking part in the federation's annual convention, which opens here Monday, the building craftsmen adopted a resolution proposing that each Senator and each candidate for the Senate be required to state publicly whether he would agree to oppose the nomination when it comes before the upper House this winter.

Condemn WPA Policies

The resolution also asked that federation officers call on all affiliated bodies to take an active part in the fight to defeat the appointment, on the ground that it would be "most detrimental to the welfare and progress" of the A. F. L.

The delegates also adopted and sent to the executive council a resolution sharply condemning labor policies of the Works Progress Administration. Other measures praised activities of the United States Housing Authority and the Public Works Administration but denounced lending policies of the Federal Housing Administration.

If accepted by the federation's council as part of the organization's sweeping attack on the NLRB, and many experts believed tonight that it would be, the anti-Smith resolution would have the effect of placing Senators on record for the first time in the A. F. L.-C. I. O. controversy.

Green Asks 30-Hour Week

The building department acted after hearing William Green, president, attack the board, demand changes in the Wagner act under which it was created, call for an immediate 30-hour work week and warn that the federation would fight to the end against Government control over the economic lives of the Nation's workers.

Green also spoke today before the union label trades department of the federation. In both appearances he cautioned that excessive Federal expenditures were justified merely as a stimulus to industry and that continued heavy spending would threaten the credit of the Nation.

Failure to See President Irks Senator Smith

mittee room, and the Senators returned to their offices to await the appointment.

The storm broke when word was received that it was impossible for Mr. Roosevelt to receive them but that Brown and Tapp, who were familiar with the matter, would confer with the committee.

Some of Smith's resentment was communicated to waiting farmers. J. S. Wanamaker, of the American Cotton Association, told reporters: "I can't understand it. We have been waiting around like puppies all afternoon to see him."

Case Held Desperate

When a newsman suggested to Smith that the President's time had been taken up with the international situation, Smith replied: "But we have a deplorable domestic situation here. The case is more desperate than I have ever seen it. He at least could have given us a few moments."

Meanwhile, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace was defending the cotton control and opposing a high loan rate in a speech at Fort Worth, Texas. Wallace told Texas farmers an unreasonably high loan rate probably would mean the Government gradually would take over the cotton marketing machinery and bring "a drastic change in our business system."

"I am in favor of following policies which avoid this kind of development as long as possible," Wallace said. "But I want to tell you frankly that any plan for Government loans on cotton at rates far out of line with supply and demand will take this country rapidly in the direction of complete Government operation of the entire cotton marketing, processing and exporting industry."

Will Meet Today

Wallace, likewise, criticized domestic allotment proposals and said proponents of such plans and high Government loans should "argue it out with each other" and afterward might be ready to go along "with the rest of us down the middle of the road."

Wallace urged preservation of the present farm program, tightened by re-enactment of cotton processing taxes to finance parity payments to farmers. He had urged the same solution on wheat farmers in Kansas the previous day.

Following the Kansas speech, Senator Smith had opposed re-enactment of processing taxes, as "taxing one part of society for the benefit of another." He told reporters that Wallace is "no oracle."

Acting Secretary of Agriculture Brown and Assistant AAA Administrator Tapp were invited to a meeting of the Senate cotton conference called for 10:30 this morning, when higher loans for wheat and cotton again will be urged.

Gas Station Held Up

Robert L. McNish, manager of a gas station, Fourteenth and Webster streets northwest, yesterday was robbed of between $40 and $50 by two white men, who held a pistol. The men locked him in the lavatory and escaped on foot.

Meeting Postponed

A meeting of the National Association of Retired Federal Employes, scheduled for tonight, has been postponed until Saturday, October 8. It will be held in Room 43, National Museum.

Full Text of Gen. Moseley's Statement

Following is the complete text of Maj. Gen. George Van Horn Moseley's statement on his retirement from the Army and from command of the Fourth Corps Area. The statement was attacked by Secretary of War Woodring.

Today marks the completion of my active career in Uncle Sam's Army—a career that, in the course of 43 years, has taken me over the face of the globe, brought me in close contact with people in all walks of life and at times projected me into the midst of international quarrels. In the days of Aguinaldo, I started fights during the Philippine Insurrection, and during the last Mexican revolution, 1929, I stopped one by walking between the lines of the fighting forces, finally bringing one of the armies home with me across the border into Texas.

I was an official observer of the French and German armies just prior to the outbreak of the World War—a war which kept me in France for over two years. At the conclusion of that conflict, I saw the Near Eastern problem at first hand as a member of a party that traveled through a country infested with bandits and thieves exactly as it was in the time of Christ.

"Hangs by a Thread"

But today I wish to talk about the future rather than the past—to talk, as a private citizen, about the problems that you and I and every other loyal American must face and solve today and tomorrow. For if my 43 years as an impersonal observer and student of domestic and world affairs qualifies me to estimate the current situation, not since the days of the secession has the future of America hung by so narrow a thread. Have we not he character, courage and the foresight to put our house in order while the rest of the world is so balanced in its warlike operation that no foreign military strength is left free to threaten us?

This is not a cry from a military man for more soldiers and more ships of war, although our national defense must be kept adequate. Rather, it is an appeal for better men and women as integral parts of the Nation itself. Our dangers are at home and in the home. The republic of the United States, like the once omnipotent republic of ancient Rome, cannot be destroyed from without until weakened by decay within.

But the signs of that decay are already in evidence. The Roman citizen sold his freedom for government largess and a life of easy sloth. Today statisticians estimate that over 20,000,000 people—approximately one-sixth of our total population—are getting Government subsidy directly and indirectly. Is this a temporary expedient gratefully accepted as such by the vast numbers receiving this bounty? Far from it. There is now a determined effort on foot to organize on a permanent basis those on relief with a view to demanding more. And the unfortunate attitude of some of our Government officials is typified by the remarks of Mr. Aubrey Williams, deputy WPA administrator, when he told this radical relievers' organization, the Workers Alliance, that he thought the Government subsidy was here to stay. In conclusion, he said, according to press reports: "I have got a conviction that the American people have tasted blood here. The men who stand for these sort of things are the men you are going to send to the elections."

More Relief, More Debt

Throughout the years that we have been increasing our relief rolls and enlarging the national debt—a debt that cannot be paid in your lifetime or mine—we have been passing laws and establishing measures intended to raise the standard of living by redistributing the wealth, while at the same time shortening the hours and restricting the output of the individual worker. We forget that wealth must be produced before it can be distributed. We cannot work less and produce more. A 30-hour week substituted for a 40-hour week inevitably means a lowered standard of living and less real income for the worker except as the hourly work rate can be speeded up to make up the difference.

We have arrived at the dividing of the ways where all democracies of history have failed. The problem before us is just this—have we the character, the determination and the ability to solve our problems by the vote? Or must we accept the statement so often repeated that all theories of government which assume the majority of people virtuous, willing and anxious to act virtuously on every issue are purely Utopian? If the majority cannot be depended upon to act and vote virtuously on issues vital to our well being; if we are simply to drift along the easiest way, then certainly American democracy is headed for destruction. The majority vote must make dictatorship clearly impossible if democracy is to stand in a world of dictators. For, make no mistake, the world drift is away from democracy, away from individual freedom, away from individual responsibility, and America is caught in that drift. There is much encouragement, however, in the results of the September elections, where the integrity and the independence of the American voter has been shown.

Trend to Dictatorship

We do not have to vote for a dictatorship to have one in America. The issue is not as clear-cut as that. We have merely to vote increased Government responsibility for our individual lives, increased Government authority over our daily habits, and the resultant Federal paternalism will inevitably become dictatorship. For, when we make the Government responsible for finding a living for all of us, that Government must inevitably crack down on talk of the more abundant life and shift the emphasis to the enforced duty of the worker to produce as a patriotic act—to produce or be liquidated.

Dictators and dictatorships evolve unnoticed among the conditions that produce them. Thirty-four years ago a timid, agitated, unkempt Socialist crept into a Socialist meeting in Lausanne, Switzerland. He had fled Italy to escape military service he held repugnant. Who could foresee that the timid Socialist would develop into the ruthless Italian dictator, who today arbitrarily orders the daily lives of all his compatriots? Or that this same Mussolini, who sold himself to the British as a defender of world peace and domestic tranquillity, would later ally himself with the brigand nations who are today despoiling their weaker neighbors and would imbue his peaceful Italian compatriots with visions of a resurgent conquering Rome?

Improve the Citizen

But in a democracy we can only improve our politics by improving the individual citizen. Stability of government rests upon his character and his integrity. Recently, the foreign minister of Turkey remarked of the British democracy. "No matter what happens, never will we be found in a camp opposing Britain. Britain may lose a battle but never a war. She has money, a navy and character." What are the facts in America today? Crime, graft, disease and illiteracy are widespread, too often motivated by either the connivance or the willful neglect on the part of public officials high and low. It is our great misfortune that in America our successful men of demonstrated ability can seldom be induced to run for political office. Too often our leaders in other fields take little interest in better government, not even taking the trouble to vote.

In addition to a lack of outstanding leadership, our Government has recently suffered from an indigestible mass of untried theories and ideas upon which we have lavished the greatest peacetime appropriations in our nation's history. Many of these ideas are sound—as ideas. Some can ultimately be incorporated permanently into our system of government to its benefit and that of its citizens. But many costly experiments have been visionary—doomed to failure from the outset. Others appear to cloak a sinister ulterior motive behind a humanitarian front, and these are being eagerly pushed by the alien element in our midst. Not long ago a radical organization meeting within a stone's throw of the Statue of Liberty stated that it stood for the Constitution of the United States, but that it planned to modify that Constitution to conform to its own un-American doctrines.

"A Strange Mixture"

If we are amazed at the changes that we see on every side we must bring ourselves to the realization that the present-day voting American people are a new and strange mixture. We welcome the immigrant of the right sort, but the objection today is that so many come, not with the thought of becoming good Americans, but with the deliberate intention of replacing our system with their own un-American theories of government. Unfortunately, the expedient course politically seems to be to appeal to the weakest traits and to the un-American citizens rather than to those who would hold to those fine old basic principles which have made America outstanding in the history of the world.

In a democracy it is fundamental that every citizen have full confidence in the integrity and fair-minded impartiality of his Government. The Government must be fully entitled to that confidence and respect. But today in America we often see class marshaled against class and unfair preference is sometimes shown. For the first time in the history of the Army we have been compelled to give preference to the applicant of a certain definite class over and above his equally qualified fellow Americans. I do not want a return to horse-and-buggy days, but I would welcome a return to the principles enunciated by Newton D. Baker, who, when Secretary of War, wrote on this subject:

"The Government of the United States is the creature and representative of all the people of the United States. Its public institutions are for the use of the whole people; its operatives and employees must be freely drawn from those who are qualified by skill and character without reference to their membership in unofficial trade organizations, membership in which is voluntary, so far as the Government is concerned, and should not be made compulsory either by law or by exclusion from opportunity, which would have the effect of law."

In the Army we cherish ideals and insist upon standards of fair play that I would like to see followed by the nation as a whole. Could all the standards throughout the nation be as high as they are in the Army—standards of health, sanitation, discipline, loyalty and respect for authority—then we would be the strongest nation in the world: yes, the strongest known to history! Today, when doctrines subversive to American Constitutional Government are being preached and duly constituted civil authority is often openly flouted, the Army, with its unquestioned integrity and unhesitating obedience to lawful authority, stands firm as the one stable element in an unstable and shifting domestic scene. That Army will not fail unless it should be called upon to act in violation of all those wonderful traditions which have governed it in the past and made it what it is today. The Army of the United States, unlike certain other armies, will never march for any leaders except one lawfully appointed and acting fully and lawfully in the interest of all citizens and holding high the Stars and Stripes forever.

Admiral's Son Killed in Mid-Air Crash

Hessler-Henderson.

Lieut. William S. Pye, jr., U. S. N., son of Rear Admiral Pye, shown above with his wife, the former Delia Douglass Pease, of this city, was pilot of a Navy plane that collided in mid-air with a ship operated by Charles Erickson, aviation cadet. The crash occurred over the Pacific, 10 miles off Coronado Beach, Calif. Both pilots were killed.

Lieut. Pye is well known in Washington. He was graduated from the United States Naval Academy in 1928.

He was married in November, 1933, to Miss Delia Douglass Pease, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alan Warren Pease. He and Mrs. Pye had been living at Coronado for some time. The youngest of two children is only a few weeks old. Admiral Pye also is at Coronado.

A brother, John Briscoe Pye, is a midshipman at the Naval Academy. Relatives in Washington are Mrs. Pye's mother, who lives at 1739 N street northwest; an aunt, Mrs. Forney M. Knox, 3125 Cathedral avenue northwest, and a great-uncle, Dr. W. Sinclair Bowen, 3125 Cathedral avenue northwest.

60 Texans Injured As Bleachers Collapse

Tyler, Tex., Sept. 30 (AP).—An estimated 60 persons were injured, two seriously, tonight when a section of wooden bleachers collapsed at the annual Rose Festival.

Sixteen persons were hospitalized, and first aid was given to others who received only slight injuries. Approximately 200 persons were in the section which fell.

porated permanently in our system of government, but others have been costly experiments of a purely visionary character, he said.

Sees "Sinister Motive"

Some policies now being pursued, he charged, "appear to cloak a sinister ulterior motive behind a humanitarian front, and these are being eagerly pushed by the alien element in our midst."

For the first time in the history of the Army, Gen. Moseley continued, the military service has been compelled to give preference to the applicant of a certain definite class over and above his equally qualified fellow Americans. He also said that "today in America we often see class marshaled against class and unfair preference shown."

High officials of the military establishment all expressed regret at Gen. Moseley's statement. Although admitting that his remarks would not be considered disloyal if made by a private citizen, they emphasized that in the Army every officer and enlisted man must trust and respect his commanders.

Civilian officials of the War Department remarked that it was "too bad" that Gen. Moseley should mar his unblemished record by such a statement as he left the service

Policeman's Car Towed Away for Illegal Parking

It's the early bird who gets the legal parking spaces, so that when Policeman Roy M. Kesselring of Second Precinct arrived late for Traffic Court yesterday, he forgot his own strict application of the law and parked his auto in a "no parking from 8 to 9:30 a. m." zone at Fifth and F streets northwest.

When Kesselring returned from court to get his car, he found it gone. The police had impounded it and had it towed to headquarters.

It was not learned immediately whether Kesselring paid the usual $5 fee charged offenders for regaining their autos.

POTOMAC MEDLEY: Situated conveniently for the anti-Nazi liberals of the C. I. O. and NLRB, there's a little Bavarian restaurant on Fifteenth street where they enjoy good German cooking. On the rear wall is a painting of Gedesberg, where Hitler and Chamberlain had their chat . . .

In these troublous times, when French Ambassador de St. Quentin tries to mind-read what Americans will do in the next war, he is consoled by a bust of Lincoln on the bookcase in his private office and by a portrait of Washington over the mantel. No picture of Lafayette.

Over the airwaves from London to a group of listening Americans yesterday came the suave suggestion that Chamberlain deserves the Nobel peace prize . . . They all laughed uproariously and sardonically.

Why not give it to Hitler, the dove of peace?

To its new Enlisted Reserve, the Army hopes to lure 25,000 to 45,000 soldiers who become civilians each year. . . . The big inducement is $24 a year to keep themselves in readiness, send in changes of addresses; no drills. . . . In 10 years this would build up a tidy little reserve skeleton army of 250,000. When discharged the average soldier still has 19 or 15 years of young manhood ahead.

The latest tale to add luster to the prestige of robust, lusty Thurman Arnold concerns his reaction to loud outcries that his monopoly safari was to be a "witch burning" expedition. At the next meeting of the committee he solemnly called his colleagues to order.

"Are you in favor of burning some witches? Do you want to burn a few witches?" he gravely asked each one in turn.

Not one wanted to burn a witch. "Now," he said, "our investigations can continue."

Confident are Surgeon General Parran's men that two or three treatments for syphilis halt a victim's menace as a transmitter of the disease so long as treatments continue. To illustrate, Dr. R. A. Vonderlehr, the syphilis ace of the Public Health Service, tells about the Government doctor assigned to a new town who had to hire a nursemaid to care for his infant son.

* * * *

To be positive that the infant would be safe from the disease, he hired a girl who was under a treatment for the ailment.

"I might be nervous and ignorant about another girl contracting syphilis," he explained, "but I knew this girl couldn't infect the baby so long as she was taking shots."

One eminent official here has a unique way of keeping always before his eyes an image of the Republic's population. Under the glass top of his desk he keeps a little typewritten list of population groups:

War vets, 15,000,000.
Elderly people, 20,000,000.
Farmers, 30,000,000.
Reliefers, 12,000,000.
Economic royalists, 2,000,000.
Democrats, 27,000,000.
Republicans, 17,000,000.
Union men, 22,000,000.

Lewis Proposes Idle Youth Training Here

Conditions Cited Red Flays Director Statistics Held 'Phoney'

A practical program for training unemployed youths will form a part of the recommendations of Burdette G. Lewis, director of the local relief inquiry, he indicated yesterday following a series of conferences with social welfare experts and District and Federal officials.

"The importance of the conference," Lewis explained, "lies in the fact the problem of proper training of unemployed youths, particularly those on relief, has become the most acute in the country.

"The District situation is highly involved because of the large number of colored and white young persons of both sexes who are unable at present to find access to CCC camps, the NYA, or private employment."

Will Attend Parleys

Among those attending the parleys were representatives of the Board of Education, the United States Office of Education, the CCC, and the following out-of-town experts:

Dr. Edgar A. Doll, director of research of the Vineland (N. J.) Training School; Mrs. Kate Burr Johnson, formerly public welfare director of South Carolina, and Ernest N. Roselle, associated with the Yale Institute of Human Relations.

Meanwhile, Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma at the Capitol for the day, expressed belief the time for releasing the Lewis report was up to the citizens advisory committee headed by Ringgold Hart.

"I think maybe it would be better to hold it until Congress meets so as to avoid controversies," he said.

Communists Assail Lewis

The District Communist Party assailed Lewis in a letter for his statement on "phoney statistics" of the public assistance division. Martin Chancey, secretary, charged him with "squandering public funds in a supposed investigation of relief, when actually you are playing politics in the service of the die-hard reactionaries of this city who have fought tooth and nail against making adequate provisions for the unemployed."

Public Welfare Director Elwood Street said he had received no invitation up until last night from the citizens advisory committee to submit an answer to Lewis' charge of padding PAD rejection figures.

He said that he could take no action in any case until authorized to do so by the board of public welfare.

92 English Kin Sue Here For Last of Clerk's Estate

Mary Ann Spencer Died in 1907 Value of Residue Was $140,000 Court Action Involves Sale of Building

Ninety-two English heirs of Mary Ann Spencer sued in District Court yesterday for the last of the $140,000 estate which she amassed while a $1,500-a-year Treasury Department clerk.

Miss Spencer, an outdoor woman who was one of the last District women to abandon the bicycling fad in the early years of the century, died in June, 1919, when she was more than 70 years old. Her will, made in 1907 when her estate was about $30,000, directed that her property be spent on a memorial for her and her parents in Arlington Cemetery.

Miss Spencer left no near relatives, so the only claimants of her property were English cousins. At their behest the District Court of Appeals in 1936 set aside the will, on the ground that she did not intend to spend so large a sum, but directed that $17,500 be used for a vault in Congressional Cemetery. The rest was given the relatives.

Suing yesterday for authority to sell the last remaining portion were Christopher J. Spencer, of Wakefield, Yorkshire, England, and 91 others. Named defendants were Francis A. Wapshott, of Boyne Hill, Maidenhead, England, and nine others, including any unknown heirs.

The property to be sold is an apartment house at 336 Second street northeast, which the petition said was assessed at $16,000 and yielded more than $200 a month in rents.

5,000 Children Seen Menaced by Diphtheria Here

Five thousand District children are still unprotected from the deadly menace of diphtheria, Health Officer George C. Ruhland warned yesterday in an appeal to parents to have their children immediately immunized against the disease.

He declared "these are the diphtheria months," and revealed ten new cases—one fatal—were reported this week.

The health officer pointed out there were a number of clinics and hygiene stations ready to give inoculation service. He declared the District has not had a single case of smallpox in the past six years and asserted diphtheria can be wiped out just as efficiently

Hogan Predicts Uniform Routine In State Courts

Atlanta, Sept. 30 (AP).—Frank J. Hogan, president of the American Bar Association, expressed belief today routine of State courts eventually would be made uniform in the interest of "simplified legal practice."

Here for a two-day institute to acquaint lawyers of the southeast with new civil procedure in District Federal courts, Hogan said in an interview establishment of the new Federal rules "is a long step in the direction of simplified legal practice, and represents the combined co-operative effort of bench and bar in the United States."

Firm Protests Restrictions On Meter Bids

Manufacturer Complains Assails Limitations Makes Trial Offer

Protests against specifications laid down for bids on installation of parking meters in the District have been registered with the Commissioners and the Comptroller General, it was revealed yesterday by M. H. Rhodes, head of a large meter manufacturing concern in Hartford.

Rejecting bids received July 5 and August 16, the Commissioners, according to Rhodes' charges, have issued "an even more restrictive specification," which eliminates free competition and violates the Congressional act which provided for preliminary experimentation with meters on Washington streets "without cost to the District."

Rhodes pointed out that his company, although bidding under protest, because of what it considered the restrictive character of the first two specifications, nevertheless submitted the low qualifying bids July 5 and August 16, but now finds itself completely excluded from competition. Bidding, he said, is now limited to two manufacturers of "so-called automatic parking meters."

The decision to rule out the manual meter in favor of the automatic can be based only on the decision of the District Traffic Department "because no preference has been expressed by the Bureau of Standards," according to Rhodes' letter to the Commissioners.

Rhodes concluded his letter to the Commissioners with an offer to furnish for trial until June 1, 1939 all of the meters to be installed, at no cost to the District, or any number the Commissioners desire "provided that any other manufacturer or manufacturers will install the balance of the meters on the same basis."

And Now for The News From Crisfield

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 30.—Following a recent downpour of rain in Crisfield, when water was left standing almost knee-deep on Locust street, as well as other streets in that section of the city, William C. Dize, jr., 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. William C. Dize, who live on Locust street (not far from Main street, rushed into the house with a long stick.

He went directly to the kitchen cabinet, procured a knife and went about the business of cutting notches in the end of it. Finishing with his whittling, he found a piece of string which he attached to the end of the stick.

As he has an infant brother, it was nothing for him to find a safety pin around the house, which he fastened on to the end of the string. He then placed the long stick with the safety pin dangling on the end, over his shoulders, and started out the door.

His mother, rather curious regarding his unusual antics, asked him where he was going, and he calmly and seriously replied, "Goin' fishing!"

According to his mother, he wasn't gone out of the house more than 5 minutes, before he returned with a small perch dangling from his crude fishing line.

His mother was taken back with the suddenness of his return, as well as his catch of the finny tribe. When she asked him where he had made his catch, he pointed out in the street and said "Out there!"

The question is where did the fish come from?

Stilts for Chickens Only One Idea

Crisfield, Md., Sept. 30.—A number of city newspapers recently carried a story of where W. R. Stevenson, prominent businessman, had proposed stilts for his chickens.

He offered the idea as a successor to one he had about crossing his chickens with ducks to permit them to stand the water during recent heavy rains.

The story so attracted attention that he received a letter from Wilmington, Del., which stated they had read his story and lent him a clipping from a newspaper in that city.

The party who wrote to him suggested other ideas, among them were:

"How about outboard motors for chickens or water wings? How about crossing lightning bugs with mosquitoes so they can be seen in the dark?"

Parks Service Joins Traffic Safety Drive

Commission Indorsed Trade Group Backs It Wender in Favor

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Civic support of a proposed traffic safety commission for Washington was voiced on two fronts yesterday as the National Capital Parks Service enlisted in the permanent accident prevention program of The Washington Post and Junior Board of Commerce.

Indorsement of proposals to establisn in the District a co-ordinating safetly unit with a paid executive officer and salaried personnel came from the Board of Trade traffic committee.

The group, headed by Col. L. C. Crawford, voted to recommend that the trade board support legislation for establishment of the safety commission.

Indorsement Sought

Harry Wender, chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations, announced he would call for indorsement of the plan at a meeting of the federation tonight.

The permanent commission idea, he said, has already been adopted by his committee.

As part of The Post-Junior Board movement, C. Marshall Finnan, director of National Capital Parks, yesterday pledged his department to continuing safety efforts on Washington streets.

A total of 195 vehicles—among them 70 trucks operated by five CCC camps in and near the District—were enrolled.

Will Display Emblem

Finnan agreed to display The Post-Junior Board safety emblem on all vehicles operated by the Park Service.

At yesterday's Board of Trade traffic meeting, Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the local A. A. A. club, cited the improved safety records of large cities throughout the country which have adopted the permanent commission plan.

"Washington," he said, "lags far behind other cities in traffic control work. As the Nation's Capital, it should be first—and an important step is formation of this proposed commission."

The plan also received commendation from Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

More than a year has been spent in preparing suggested legislation for establishment of the commission, Col. Crawford said. In addition to himself and Wender, the plan was drafted by Col. A. B. Barber, of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Maj. O. C. Halleran, of the American Legion; George Keneipp, manager of the Keystone Auto Club; Burton W. Marsh, A. A. A. safety director, and John Nolen, jr., director of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

D.C. Planners Would Widen Two Streets

Independence Is One 190-Ft. Lane Urged E. Capitol Is Other Many Items Favored

Development of two more monumental thoroughfares in the District moved another step forward yesterday when the National Capital Park and Planning Commission definitely went on record in favor of the transformation of Independence avenue and East Capitol street.

Ending its September meeting, the commission established a 190-foot width between building lines for Independence avenue, from the Capitol to Fourteenth street southwest, and indorsed similar future treatment of East Capitol street for its entire length.

The planners' action on the two impotrant streets was but one of a large number of items considered at the session, other business rnging from approval of the proposed Fourteenth and Upshur streets site for the new home of Wilson Teachers College to authorization of the transfer of a downtown triangle from the Treasury to the National Park Service.

Much Land Involved.

Under plans recommended yesterday, Independence avenue—already paved and widened between Twelfth and Fourteenth streets—would eventually be devoted exclusively to public and semi-public buildings eastward to the Capitol. The transformation, which involves no small amount of land acquisition, would make the thoroughfare comparable to its "twin" to the north of the Mall, Constitution avenue.

Similarly, plans submitted by William T. Partridge, consultant, and approved in principle, envisage the conversion of East Capitol street into a wide vista lined on either side with public and semi-public structures. Distance between building lines would range from 180 to 240 feet. The latter point will be discussed soon by the commission's co-ordinating committee.

Speedy action on a design for Independence avenue was necessitated by the rushing of plans for erection of the twin Social Security-Railway Retirement buildings at Tihrd street, and the probability that other Federal buildings will go up in the southwest section.

New Morgue Planned

The following measures also were approved:

Transfer of the District Morgue from the Maine avenue waterfront to the Gallinger Hospital grounds. The new morgue is to be erected as a PWA project.

Purchase of several undivulged sites by the Alley Dwelling Authority for future low-cost housing projects.

Transfer of the vacant triangular tract at Fourteenth street and Pennsylvania avenue, site of the old Poli's Theater, from the Treasury to the office of National Capital Parks for development as a park.

Construction plans, submitted and explained by Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, District highway director, and Lieut. Col. David McCoach, Engineer Commissioner, for the Fort drive link between Conduit road and Fort Totten. An application to PWA for $1,000,000 to build the link is still pending.

Teachers College Site

Transfer of the Fourteenth and Upshur streets site, where the old Tuberculosis Hospital formerly stood, to the Board of Education as a location for Wilson Teachers College. Part of the trace would be converted into a recreation center. Meantime, by approval of the planners, the vacant hospital building could be used temporarily by the District Health Department for administrative purposes.

Plans for completion of Banneker Recreation Center (colored), including a new school building in the northwest corner of the huge tract with a children's playground and athletic field adjoining.

The Park and Planning Commission also directed its technical staff to co-operate with the Agriculture and War Department on arrangements for transfer of Arlington Experimental Farm from the former to the latter. An act of Congress will be necessary to effect the shift.

The transfer, made possible by increased facilities at Agriculture's experimental farm at Beltsville, Md., is for the purpose of expanding Arlington National Cemetery. It will give the cemetery much needed additional grave space.

9 Are Held Here In Narcotic Raids In $36,000 Bonds

In seven swift raids, 26 persons were arrested and nine held under bonds totaling $36,000 yesterday.

Members of the pickup squad, headed by Lieut. Joseph Shimon and two Treasury agents, staged raids on places alleged to have been frequented by peddlers and addicts of narcotics, arresting 26 colored men and women in the Northwest and Southwest sections of the city. Several thousand dollars worth of narcotics were seized.

Navy Selection Board Will Meet Nov. 15

Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson announced yesterday that a selection board to choose captains and commanders for promotion to the next higher grade would meet on November 15. A board to select lieutenant commanders for advancement will convene December 8, he said.

Moving Day Shows 10 Per Cent Increase Over Capital's Figures for Last Year

Transfer Abodes in Rain Rents Stay Up New Homes Lure Many

Despite the rain and misty gloom, the moving season reached its peak yesterday, with big and little vans augmenting traffic jams, and the moving squad "quarterbacks" tolling their signals and grunting and tugging with furniture until late into the night.

So far as could be ascertained—although in this case there was some conflict of opinion—more than the usual number of weary housewives flopped down on a couch or bed hastily set up in new quarters and, forgetting war and everything else, vowed again that moving was the worst experience imaginable.

October 1 again is living up to its reputation as the moving day of the year. True, some of the experts on the subject said it was slipping. There was the usual amount of disagreement among the experts.

For the most part, families signing new leases, effective today, are receiving no reduction in rentals. Rents have remained fairly stable in the last year, although they still are below the 1929 peak, realty companies pointed out.

W. Herbert Gill, commercial manager of the Washington Gas Light Co., said the number of connections and disconnections made by the company was about 10 per cent greater than last year. He attributed increased shifting about to a larger number of available apartments and houses.

Charles C. Koones, chairman of the property management committee of the Washington Real Estate Board, said a large number of people were moving into new quarters at this season of the year. Last spring, he explained, there was a corresponding exodus. Some realty concerns said the demand for newly constructed units was greater than ever.

Koones said the substantial volume of new construction here in recent years had been approximately sufficient to take up the rise in demand due to increased Government personnel under the present Administration.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, president of the Smith Transfer & Storage Co., Inc., said his company was doing the largest volume of business at this season in its history. The company has rented equipment for the rush, he said, and is keeping vans going until late at night. Likewise, vans will be in operation Sunday.

The Washington Post Sports

18 WASHINGTON: SATURDAY, OCTOBER 1, 1938 X*

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

With the air of a man who has done something constructive, Mr. Charles Leo DeOrsey unceremoniously dumped a mess of newspaper clippings on this department's desk and said:

"It is high time that the truth be known. Here is the evidence. I am no little nettled by the baseball fairy-tales I have been reading about Gabby Hartnett's early baseball career."

POVICH.

Mr. DeOrsey shoved his clippings under our nose, which of course did not require much of a shove. However we continued to look inquiringly at Mr. DeOrsey whom we have known for some time as a reformed sandlot ball player and practicing attorney in Washington. We were wondering what DeOrsey's particular interest in Gabby Hartnett might be.

"These clipping are about Gabby Hartnett," said Mr. DeOrsey a bit impatiently. "Ever hear of him? He's the manager of the Chicago Cubs who are going to win the National League pennant, in case you've forgotten. And if the radio can be believed he just hit a home run against the Cardinals a few minutes ago."

As we examined the faded and slightly yellowed clippings, DeOrsey persisted. "I would have you know," he said, "that Charles Leo Hartnett and Charles Leo DeOrsey have more in common than our given names. I would have you know that we played side by side in the Blackstone Valley League in Massachusetts when we were kids. I would have you know that Charles Leo DeOrsey gave Charles Leo Hartnett his first chance in organized baseball. I refer you to those clippings."

Dozens of faded box scores did show that on the American Steel & Wire Company's baseball team at Worcester, Mass., a chap named Hartnett and a fellow named DeOrsey were teammates. Hartnett was the catcher, DeOrsey was the centerfielder, clean-up hitter and apparent big shot on the club.

But DeOrsey was reserving his trump card. Presently he played it.

HARTNETT (1922)

HARTNETT (1938)

"Now look at this, my friend," he said. "For me at least it has always made nice reading these last 16 years." Into our hands he shoved a crinkled old clipping stamped "Worcester Telegram, March 12, 1921."

"The Worcester club of the Eastern League yesterday signed Charles Leo Hartnett, tall young semipro catcher of Milville, Mass. He was signed on the recommendation of Charles Leo DeOrsey, captain of the American Steel & Wire Co. team."

DeOrsey's triumph seemed complete enough to this department with that bit of evidence, but there was more that he insisted on telling.

Tall, Stringy Kid Then

"Gabby Hartnett's dad used to be the motorman on the old electric trolley between Worcester and Woonsocket, R. I. I lived at Northbridge between the two towns and old Mr. Hartnett used to beg me to give his boy a chance to play ball with the Wire Co. team. Just to please him we took Gabby on.

"He was a tall, stringy kid then. Two of the Hartnett's of 1920 could hide behind the Gabby Hartnett of 1938. But he was a natural as a catcher. He could thread a needle at second base with most of his throws and he was plenty lively behind the plate. But he wasn't much of a hitter then. In fact he was a joke hitter. He wasn't our first string catcher. We had a fellow named Couillard who did most of our catching.

"I happened to be in the office of the Worcester club in the spring of 1921 when Jack McMahon, the Worcester manager received a letter from Tyler, his No. 1 catcher, in which Tyler said he was retiring from baseball. McMahon asked me if I knew of a good-looking young catcher he could sign.

"I told McMahon I had just the man for him in Hartnett and McMahon told me to bring him in. Gabby and I went to the Worcester Club's office together a few mornings later and after talking to him McMahon pushed a contract across the desk to Hartnett. 'Fill in your own salary terms,' McMahon told Gabby. 'I've just signed one young catcher for $175 a month and if your terms are more reasonable you may have a job with us.'

"Gabby brought the contract back the next day. He wanted that job badly. He made sure he underbid the other catcher. He filled that contract in for $100 a month.

"That's the story of how Gabby Hartnett signed with Worcester. It's a bit different from the magazine story I read a few weeks ago after Gabby was given the management of the Cubs. That story said that the Worcester club signed Hartnett after a Worcester scout had seen him knock a triple over the centerfielder's head with bases full.

More About That Triple

"I remember that game. Gabby was playing with the Millville team and I was playing centerfield for Northbridge. It was a game in connection with the county fair and one of the features was a parachute jump from a balloon. Gabby tripled with the bases full alright, but it wasn't much of a hit. Just as Gabby swung, the rightfielder shouted to me and pointed to the balloon. 'He's gonna jump' he yelled. I looked up and that's when Gabby tripled to centerfield—a Texas Leaguer I could have caught in my hip pocket if I had been looking.

"The Cubs bought Gabby in 1922 for $2,500 on the strength of the good season he had at Worcester. Hartnett then was like any other young kid joining a big league club. He sent me letters and pictures from Catalina Island every week. One of his first letters told me, proudly, that he was rooming with Grover Cleveland Alexander.

"Gabby thought that was quite an honor. What he didn't know was that Grover Cleveland Alexander was even then quite a problem to the Cubs' management with his nocturnal comings and goings. The veterans on the club declined to room with Alex. Gabby wasn't being honored. He was getting the works."

Cubs Battle Cardinals To 7-7 Tie

Chicago Blows Lead Deadlocked in 7th Miss Chance in 9th Play Two Today

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Sept. 30.—The Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals further complicated the hysterical National League flag race by battling to a 7-7 tie at Sportsman Park here today and leaving themselves a doubleheader to play tomorrow, next to the last day of the season.

Needing only to win today as their rivals, the Pittsburgh Pirates, were splitting a pair at Cincinnati, to practically sew up the league title, the tiring Cubs threw away the 6-1 lead they held going into the fifth inning and were lucky to escape defeat. The Cards had the bases loaded when Joe Medwick popped up for the final out in the last of the ninth.

The deadlock left the race still in doubt and the cubs crippled and weary for their final three contests, the Pirates still could win by taking their last two from the Reds if the Cubs fall apart, and they looked like doing just that late today.

Hartnett Hurt Again

Manager Gabby Hartnett, playing with a damaged finger on his throwing hand, had still another digit hurt by a fowl tip in the seventh inning and had to retire. He had swatted his tenth home run in the second inning with no one on base. Bill Herman, Chicago's second baseman and captain, was spiked on his big toe by Jimmy Brown in the eighth and was limping toward the last.

The tie broke the Cubs' string of 10 straight victories and further used up their over-worked mound staff. When Carleton and French could not hold the big lead given them, Hartnett had to call in Clay Bryant, half of his valiant "two-man pitching staff," to hurl the lst three innings.

It was off Bryant that the Cards scored the tying run in the seventh, Terry Moore driving Mickey Owen across with a towering two-bagger against the leftfield boards that Demarre touched with his glove but couldn't hold.

Root, Page to Hurl

As evidence of the extent to which his mound staff has been shot, Hartnett announced that Charley Root, the veteran, and Vance Page, rookie, who joined the club only a short time back, would start tomorrow's games. The Cards planned to counter with Bob Weiland in the first and either Paul Dean or Max Macon in the second.

The Cards pounded the three Cubs elbowers for 17 blows today, Stuart Martin leading the way with two doubles and two singles. Medwick also had doubled twice before he missed his big chance in the ninth. The Cubs collected 13 hits, themselves, drumming away merrily at the first three assorted Card pitchers to face them, but the best they could do off Curt Davis in the last two vital frames was a scratch single by Demaree.

Colonials Gain on Reverse Against Hurricane

Nowaskey Scores Lone Touchdown

Pass Paves the Way Richardson Stars Hurricane Tough 10,000 See Game

By Jack Munhall

While some 10,000 spectators were settling back in the damp stands of Griffith Stadium envisioning a scoreless tie as two rugged lines defied offensive tactics, the only local member of the Colonial squad strode onto the soggy field. A David among Goliaths, his 5-foot 6-inch figure dwarfed by his towering mates, Richardson motioned Vic Sampson to the sidelines, took his place in the lineup and accomplished in no time what both teams were unable to do all evening.

He produced a touchdown. About three minutes after his unheralded entry, the Colonials received the first break of the game when End Bob Nowaskey blocked a Furman kick on the Southerners' 46, Sam Babich recovering on the 41, and Richardson began to do things.

Uncorks Long Pass

The first thing of consequence he did was to uncork a swift aerial to Nowaskey for a gain of 29 yards and a first down on the 12. After Fred Sartore had moved the ball to the 8, Richardson did something else. He faded to his right, stopped and shot a pass diagonally across the field into the hungry hands of Nowaskey who caught it on the 1-yard line and fell over to score.

Richardson then held the ball and Nowaskey booted it through the upright posts for the extra point. Score: George Washington, 7; Furman, 0.

That also is the story of the game. It was a colorless but stubbornly-fought affair between powerful lines and the punting toes of C. V. Lipscomb, Furman triple-threat halfback, and G. W.'s Sampson. Handicapped by the uncertain footing the backs had little chance to get going.

Teams Play for Breaks

So both teams played cautious, unspectacular football, waiting for breaks which seldom came. In the second half the misty air was filled almost continually with towering boots as Sampson and Lipscomb often kicked on first and second down when it had become all too obvious that neither eleven had the power to push over a score.

Lipscomb had the edge in kicking but that was practically the only advantage the visitors could boast. George Washington outdowned them nine to three, gained 168 yards from scrimmage against their 68, completed three forward passes out of seven while they tried ten without avail and otherwise outplayed the visitors.

Defensively, too, the Colonials held their own as Nowaskey, a converted fullback, raced up and down the field bringing down Furman runners with bone-crunching tackles and spilling almost every play aimed at his flank. John Rebholz, veteran tackle, Babich, sophomore end and big Sunny Jones, Rebholz's running mate, also were in there piling up play after play.

G. W. Threatens Early

Sampson, the Colonial's dangerous broken-field runner, was hottled up to a great extent by the alert Furman line, the soggy field and the clever punts of Lipscomb. The visitors' star, having read no doubt what Sampson can do with plenty of open territory and a ball under his arm, kept his sky-scraping kicks well out of Sampson's reach. As a matter of fact, his ability to boot 'em out of bounds was a feature of the game.

George Washington's only scoring threat besides the touchdown was made in the first quarter when it marched 73 yards in a sustained drive which ended when Furman took the ball on downs on its 9-yard line.

The push started on the G. W. 18 where one of Lipscomb's long, spiraling punts had rolled out. Sampson and Urick, working together smoothly, combined to make two first downs, the second placing the ball on the G. W. '43.

An off-side penalty against Furman, plus a series of short gains by Urick and Sampson and a pass,

Terps Face Lions Today

Meade Calls Signals Three Regulars Out Weidinger Missed

Special Cable to The Post.

State College, Pa., Sept. 30.—A revamped Maryland University eleven, with Jim Meade calling signals from his halfback position for the first time in his career, will take the field against Penn State here tomorrow in an effort to win its first game of the season and avenge last year's heart-breaking loss to the Nittany Lion.

Meade, All-Southern choice last season when he led the Terps to a highly successful record, drew the signal-calling job in the absence of Charlie Weidinger, who, along with two other regulars—End Francis Beamer and Halfback Frank Hewitt—remained at home to nurse injuries.

Meade, called "Jarrin' Jim" for other than alliterative reasons, will be remembered for his great line smashing last year when he paced a Maryland comeback that tied the Lion eleven, 14—14, late in the fourth quarter. State finished on top, however, when Harry Harrison, fleet halfback, intercepted a desperate Terp pass and ran 25 yards for the winning touchdown.

Pirates and Reds Divide Double Bill

Cincinnati Takes Opener, 7-1 Bucs Grab Nightcap, 4-2 Bauers Halts Foes With 4 Hits Derringer Winner in First

By Paul Mickelson.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Cincinnati, Sept. 30.—Russ Bauers, comic-reading lumberjack from the north Wisconsin woods, rescued his Pittsburgh Pirate mates from elimination in the National League pennant race today with a four-hit performance that gave the booting Buccaneers a split in the day's double-header with the Reds.

All but dropped out of the race as big Paul Derringer licked them, 7 to 1, with a five-hit job in the opener, the Pirates came back to retain their flickering hopes behind Bauers' hitting and pitching to score their first victory in five games, 4-2. The timely victory kept the flag race alive for at least another day as the on-rushing Chicago Cubs squared off with St. Louis.

The 8,661 cash customers, who had a field day in the opener as Derringer and his mates combed three Pirate flingers—Jim Tobin, Bill Swift and Mace Brown—hooted and yelled. As the Pirates came out dejectedly for the second half of the bargain bill, there wasn't a soul who's bet a lead quarter on their pennant hopes that a week ago were so rosy.

But Bauers' helping his own cause with a triple and a double, turned back 15 men in a row from the third through the sixth inning. After they had manufactured a run off his slants in the second on a pair of singles and a fielder's choice, Bauers mowed them down until the eight, when Harry Craft singled and scored as Nolan Richardson's drive deflected off Lee Handley's glove for a scratch hit. Outside of that, the big lumberjack was complete master.

In the first game, the Pirates looked as much like flag contenders as the Philadelphia Phillies. Derringer held them to two hits over the first seven innings.

Cards Off For Opener

Play St. Bonaventure Game at Olean, N. Y. 30 Men Make Trip

Catholic University, bolstered by the news that Charley Moutenont, sophomore backfield flash, is ready for action after shaking off a bad cold, left yesterday for Olean, N. Y., where today it opens its 1938 football season Sunday against St. Bonaventure's College.

Thirty Cardinals, under the direction of Coach A. J. Bergman, made the trip to tackle the school's most formidable opening opponent in years. In the Saints the Cardinals face a big, rugged eleven which last Saturday created the season's biggest upset by defeating Manhattan, 7 to 6.

Probable Cardinal line-up includes Al Calabrese and Joe Bunsa, ends; Frank Cairo and Rocco Pirro, tackles; Pete Osinsky, center; Art Sabo and Johnny Carvelas, guards; Johnny Fiorellino, quarterback; Burke Vidnovic and Joe Guyon, halfbacks, and Henry Sant' Ambrogio, fullback.

St. Bonaventure's biggest threats, the Cards have been informed, are Quarterback Bunowski, an aggressive triple-threater, and Fullback Hryoyszyn (call him Mr. H.), an outstanding kicker and line bucker.

Deacons Defeat Citadel, 31 to 0

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 30 (U.P.).—Wake Forest's much-heralded sophomores, paced by Gallovich, Ringgold and Capt. Wirtz, easily defeated the Citadel, 31-0, tonight before a crowd of 5,000.

Hoyas Open Season With Tigers Today

Sophomores Dominate Opening Lineup Young, Green Players Show Much Promise Kick-Off at 2:30 P. M. at Griffith Stadium

By Jack Munhall.

The youngest and greenest but paradoxically one of the most promising Georgetown elevens in recent history inaugurates the Hilltop's sixty-third season of football this afternoon, meeting Hampden-Sydney at Griffith Stadium.

The kick-off, scheduled for 2:30 o'clock, will stir into action a predominantly sophomoric Hoya team, including in its line-up six of these unpredictable rookies, three juniors and only two seniors, a far cry from the usual Georgetown grid set-up.

It is a team that Coach Jack Hagerty secretly believes will elevate Georgetown to the position it once held in the Eastern football realm or else prove another keen disappointment.

If Jules Koshlap, the youthful passing specialist, and his sophomore mates—Earl Fullilove at tackle, Johnny Lascari and Bob KKeKrcher at ends, Al Matuza at center and Augie Lio at guard—justify the faith vested in their ability, then Georgetown can't miss. At least, that is the prevailing opinion on the Hilltop campus.

Two Sparkers

Koshlap, 180-pound lad from Wellington, N. J., and Joe Mellendeck, 1937 sophomore sensation, are the players Hagerty expects to furnish the spark so lacking last year.

The fleet, triple-threat Mellendeck and Koshlap, a fair runner and an excellent blocker in his own right, are considered potentially the most dangerous scoring combination in the city—a miniature reproduction of the Battles-Baugh act. When Mellendeck and Koshlap drop back together the enemy is completely at loss as to what is to follow. It may be a sweeping end run, a sudden pass, or even a quick kick. That is the advantage accruing to the possession of a pair of versatile backs and that is Georgetown's long suit.

Others in Backfield

Paired with Mellendeck and Koshlap in the Georgetown backfield are Charlie Wychunas, at quarter, and Myron Darmohray at full. Darmohray, 190-puond powerhouse, served as understudy to Jim Dooley last year and Wychunas, a clever runner and blocker, played the supporting role to Tommy Keating.

The Georgetown line, averaging 195 pounds, has as its mainstay Joe Frank, 195-pound tackle from Bronx, N. Y., a veteran star both on defense and offense.

Baugh Foresees Headache for Rose Bowl Committee

By "Slingin' Sammy" Baugh.
(Forward Passing Champion, National Football League.)

The possibility of a headache for the Rose Bowl committee looms as a result of last week's 19-7 defeat for Southern California by Alabama.

SAMMY BAUGH.

Suppose that Southern California, despite its defeat by the Crimson Tide, emerges as the champion of the Pacific Coast Conference; As champions, the Trojans would automatically be named as the Coast's contender in the Rose Bowl.

And suppose that Alabama finishes the season as the outstanding team in the East. Then the Rose Bowl committee would be virtually forced to invite Alabama to the Coast as the opponent of the Trojans.

Thus, for the first time in history the Rose Bowl would be presenting a battle between teams that have already met.

It would be strange all right, but the possibility is not so very remote. Southern California's defeat by Alabama is not to be taken too seriously at this stage of the season. It has no bearing on the Coast Conference race and the tip is out that the Trojans this year are the best team on the Coast. Last year's University of California champions had a tough time beating St. Mary's last Saturday.

Alabama is probably as good a bet to finish its season unbeaten and untied as any team in the East—probably a better bet. The Southern California game looked like the biggest hurdle on the Alabama schedule. The Crimson Tide appears ripe to beat Tennessee, Kentucky, Tulane and Georgia Tech, the other big games on its schedule.

There isn't another Eastern team, including Pittsburgh, which figures to get away with all its games as easily as Alabama. Pitt has the power, of course, but it's almost asking too much for a team to lick such as Temple, Duquesne, Southern Methodist, Fordham, Carnegie Tech, Nebraska and Duke on successive Saturdays.

It's not certain, either, that Pitt would accept a Rose Bowl bid. The Panthers turned it down last year, don't forget. And the field of Rose Bowl possibilities in the East is limited inasmuch as Harvard, Yale, Penn, Dartmouth and the other ivy colleges make a habit of refusing the bid.

My long-distance forecast is that the Eastern representative in the Rose Bowl will be Alabama or Fordham. the Rams, however, are faced with a stiff schedule that calls for beating Purdue, Oregon, Pittsburgh, St. Mary's and North Carolina on successive Saturdays. That may be asking too much, also.

The big game in the East today is, of course, the Yale-Columbia battle and I'll be pulling for my old Redskin teammate, Cliff Battles, in that one. Battles, as assistant coach of Lou Little's Columbia team, has been given almost complete charge of the Lions' backfield.

In Sid Luckman, Columbia has the man who is being touted as the best college passer in the land. That, however, is the opinion of Eastern critics. I'll match a half dozen Southwest Conference passers against Luckman and take my chances that they can outthrow him.

The top game in the Midwest is, of course, the Ohio State-Indiana affair at Columbus. It looms as one of the biggest hurdles for my old coach Francis Schmidt. McMillan's Indiana team was rated by many in the Big Ten as the best outfit in the Conference by the time the season ended, and I will not be surprised to see the Hoosiers upset the Buckeyes.

McMillan is reputed to have a swell crop from his 1937 Freshmen. In fact, the story I heard at Chicago was that McMillan's Indiana Freshmen last season were the only team that could have consistently beaten Pitt. That was laying it on thickly, of course, but the word is out that Indiana can win the Big Ten title.

Down In Front

By Richards Vidmer

Better Bulletins

New Haven—The outbreak of war seemed inevitable today as the Blue brigade was ordered to stand ready for an attack at any moment. The Columbia forces were reported marching toward the Bowl, and extraordinary precautions were being taken against a possible aerial raid under the direction of Flight Commander Sid Luckman, of the invading army.

VIDMER

Cambridge—Harvard stood firm in its refusal to accept Brown's demands in their entirety. However, some hope of peace remained as Gen. Dick Harlow expressed a willingness to immediate cession of certain areas with reservations. It was believed that he would agree to occupation of all territory outside the 20-yard line, providing Brown, in return, would guarantee not to press nearer the Crimson goal.

Ithaca—Little fear of armed conflict was expressed by the Cornell commanders today as Colgate continued to make threatening gestures at her frontiers. An official communique reported that light skirmishes might be anticipated in the vicinity of Schaellkopf Field, but that no major engagement seemed probable for at least a week.

Philadelphia—It was established conclusively that Pennsylvania would refuse to evacuate the territory demanded by the Eastern Army without offering armed resistence when George Munger, Penn's new minister of war, concluded his speech today with the ringing ultimatum: "Lafayette, we are here—here to stay!"

Pittsburgh—Sutherland's shock troops, mobilized last week when West Virginia was turned back without any casualties, stood ready to repulse the stubborn invasion of Temple troops today. The warning issued by Ward Lord Warner that he would accept no compromise and was prepared to strike failed to shake the morale of the Pittsburgh populace who accepted the situation with their usual calm.

Threatened Violence

Princeton—Tad Welman, newly appointed chief of staff on the Nassau front, prepared to launch his first offensive against Williams at 2 o'clock. A quick conquest was in prospect for the new leader.

Annapolis—All battleships, destroyers, submarines and airplane carriers were ordered to stand by for action in the event that the military forces of V. M. I. proved stronger than anticipated. The Cadets were reported marching up from the South with the naval base as their objective. Although Lieut. Comdr. Hardwick, in charge of the sea forces, anticipated no difficulty in protecting his fleet from threatened disaster, he issued a general plea for preparedness.

West Point—Col. Bill Wood refused to yield to the minority rights claimed by V. D. I. and declared that he would send the Army at full strength against the invaders from Virginia, with orders to keep up a continued attack with heavy artillery until the enemy was completely destroyed.

News From Western Front

Minneapolis—Having successfully withstood the assault of Washington's warriors last week, a new crisis developed here today as Nebraska advanced menacingly on Minnesota's stronghold. The attack, however, was not altogether unexpected as ex-President (of the Football Coaches Association) Bierman pointed out that he had been preparing for such a clash for a year. "The defeat of our troops by the Cornhuskers in October, 1937, was a distinct shock, but this time we are prepared. It shall not happen again," he said.

Columbus—Ohio State has refused the proposed withdrawal of its troops from this sector in keeping with the final demand of Indiana, and although a feeling of tension was apparent as the Hoosier hordes arrived on the outskirts of this town, it was apparent that the Buckeye battalions would not surrender without a fight.

Ann Arbor—Michigan's man power, reorganized under the supervision of Fritz Crisler, appointed after the four-power conference of last winter, will swing into the front lines today, as veterans of former wars anxiously await results.

State College—Guerrilla warfare broke out today as Maryland's Army of the Potomac came into the mountain retreat of the Nittany Lions. Heavy firing was the order on both sides with the outcome of the battle undetermined until a final check is made at the end of hostilities.

Minor Skirmishes

New York—Fordham's shock troops anticipated the quick dispersal of the uprising Upsala troops. Little doubt was expressed by Commander Crowley that the insurgents would be put to rout long before nightfall . . . Gen. Mal Stevens was given complete assurance that if his N. Y. U. squadron needed any assistance in repulsing the attack of Maine, he could count on the Democrats . . . Gas masks were issued to all those in Lewisohn Stadium as a precaution against the outburst of Benny Friedman, commander of the C. C. N. Y. contingent, in the event of a Buffalo success.

Earl McAleer Wins Medal in Rolling Road Golf

Cards a 71; Johnston Is Second

Leader 2 Strokes Up Burnett Qualifies 150 Golfers Play Rain Hampers Golf

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Catonsville, Md., Sept. 30.—Congressional's southpaw swinger, Earl McAleer, bucked an all-day rain and a tricky and waterlogged course here today to win medal honors in the Rolling Road Invitation tournament with a one over par 71 that bested a field of 150 Washington and Baltimore golfers in the two-day qualifying.

Out in even par of 35, including three birdies, McAleer returned in 36, one over regulation figures, for a two-stroke margin. A member of the Congressional team, and one of the city's finest golfers for the past ten years, McAleer faces Buck Armacost, of Baltimore, today in the first round of a tournament he can't possibly win, except for a special ruling of the committee.

Has Previous Match

For if McAleer, whose round today proved he is playing the best golf of the tournament, would get to the final round Sunday afternoon he will have to default as he is scheduled to play with his club against Capital in a Maryland State Golf Association team match, and he positively stated that he would play with the team, even though it meant defaulting should he reach the finals.

Volney Burnett, Kenwood's 1937 State champion, was the only other District player to make the championship flight, qualifying with an easy par of 39s for a 78 that was three strokes within the playoff circle. Burnett had birdies on seven and sixteen in his duplicate nines.

W. H. Johnston, Thursday's leader from Forest Park, was next to McAleer with a 73, while other low scores included a 75 for the host club's five time club champion and favorite, Spencer Overton, 77s for Ernie Caldwell Hillendale and E. G. Barnes, of Rolling Road, and a 78 for the Maryland and Middle Atlantic champion, Otto Greiner.

Starts With Birdie

McAleer, who played the course as a member of the Washington all-star amateur team in the summer, started with a birdie, after banging his second shot beside the pin and holing a 3-foot putt. He was back with par by three-putting the second, and went over when he missed a three-footer on the fourth.

The southpaw swinger holed a 75-putt on the fifth hole for another birdie, and after dropping a third stroke to par on the sixth he holed a birdie putt of 20 feet on the seventh, parred the next two and was out in 35.

Caldwell, playing in front of him, was also out in 35 and dropped a deuce on the tenth. McAleer duplicated this feat and then played the next eight holes in two over par for medalist honors, while Caldwell went eight over.

Carl Johnson, Beaver Dam, qualified for the second fiflight and Don Dudley, of Indian Spring, for the fourth, with 84 and 91, respectively, but otherwise the Washington delegation was marked by withdrawals, no cards or scores too high for the five flights of match play.

St. Alban's Eleven Tied

Baltimore, Md., Sept. 30.—Boy's Latin School held St. Albans, of Washington, to a scoreless tie as both teams began their gridiron campaigns today on a soggy field.

The squads were just about equal in every respect. Both registered three first downs. In the air however the local eleven held an edge, completing five of twelve passes while their opponents completed one in five.

For the first three-quarters the Latinists kept the visitors on the defense and once in the third quarter Rodgers crossed the pay-off line after Forbes blocked a kick but the score was not allowed.

In the final period St. Albans took to the air offense but could not score after forcing Boys' Latin back into its own territory.

Reach Semifinals Welsh Faces Willis Finals Tomorrow

The ill-starred fourth annual invitational tennis tournament sponsored by the Department of Playgrounds, moves into the semifinal round in both singles and doubles this afternoon at the Sixteenth Street reservoir courts, weather permitting.

Barney Welsh, heavy, pre-tournament choice to win the singles trophy, faces Rickey Willis, while Tony Latona battles the dark horse of the tournament, Lieut. James Farrin, in the other bracket of the singles. Play will begin promptly at 2 o'clock.

In the doubles, following immediately after, Farrin and Howard oppose Bill Breese and David Johnsen, while Latona and Ed Mather cross racquets with Welsh and Buddy Adair. Finals in both singles and doubles will be played tomorrow. Some 300 chairs will be available for the spectators on both days, free of charge. The seats will be handled on a first-come, first-served basis.

Starting out as a fitting climax to an otherwise dull season on the courts, the tournament struck a snag before the first ball was served when Hugh Lynch, seeded No. 2, broke a hand playing football and was obliged to withdraw. Next came an attack of the grippe that laid low Bill Breese, seeded fourth, which caused him to default.

Finally heavy rains prevented any matches over the first weekend, and then Price Colvin, ranking singles player of Baltimore who had not met defeat all season, and who was seeded third in this tournament, was ousted by Farrin. The latter, however, played great tennis in trimming the Monumental City star, and a close match is anticipated if he faces Welsh in the finals.

Navy Favored Today Over V. M. I. Team

Rain and Soggy Field Will Dim Cadets' Hopes Shelby in Virginians' Backfield Middies Stage Huge Pep Rally V. M. I. Alumni Gather for Game

By Lewis F. Atchison
A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Sept. 30.—One of the best of the early season football classics will be unraveled in this historic old fishing village tomorrow afternoon when Virginia Military Institute's highly touted cadets line up against Navy's eleven in a game that packs more dynamite than a 12-inch gun. The kick-off is scheduled for 2:30 o'clock.

The gloomy prospect of bad weather, with the accompanying soggy field, faced the teams as they romped through brief dress rehearsals this afternoon. Both elevens will be seriously handicapped from an offensive viewpoint if the weather is bad, inasmuch as their attacks are built around aerial games. Heavy footing, however, would be a boon to the heavier Navy team, which exhibited a bristling defense last week in stopping William and Mary's running attack.

The Cadets arrived here early this afternoon and shook the kinks from their legs in a brief but spirited drill. They found handling the wet ball difficult, and Coach Pooley Hubert indicated that similar conditions tomorrow would find his men punting and playing for the breaks. But almost in the same breath Hubert added that the Cadets would not play a strictly defensive game, but hoped to get a scoring jump on Navy.

Changes Will Stand

Two changes in Navy's line-up announced by Head Coach Hank Hardwick at the conclusion of Friday's drill, will stand. Both are in the line. Ken Hyson replaces Ben Jarvis at right tackle, by virtue of a surprising drive and improvement shown during the week; while Ward Witter will supplant the injured Dave Wolfe at right guard. Wolfe is on the shelf with an ailing shoulder that will preclude all possibility of his playing.

On paper it shapes up as a close and, perhaps, thrilling duel with the odds slightly in Navy's favor. Virginia Military fought a clever and well drilled Virginia eleven to a 12-12 stalemate last week in a bruising game at Charlottesville, while Navy romped over William and Mary to the tune of 25-0.

Veterans In Backfield

In their game the Cadets did nothing to lessen the high regard fans and critics alike hold for them while Navy still is pretty much of an enigma. Those who saw them romp through the Indians are still wondering whether it was the Middies' powerhouse or William and Mary's impotency that decided the issue. At any rate tomorrow's game should be a trustworthy criterion of the Tars' ability.

The Virginians will depend heavily on their sophomore talent because of casualties among the regulars, but reports from Lexington indicate that the second year men will fill the bill in good style. "Son" Shelby, a light but hard-running and accurate halfback who made his varsity debut against Virginia last week, will be in the starting lineup with the veteran trio of Andy Trzeciak, Paul Shu and Bud Kovar.

The three are considered among the best in Southern football circles, and if they fail to dent Navy's defense Middy supporters can rest assured that Hardwick has a grade-A ball club on his hands. Shu, a native of Alexandria, Va., and Trzeciak, are triple-threaters of first water.

Pre-game celebrations reached a climax tonight with the regiment of Midshipmen staging a rally in Bancroft Hall, while alumni of Virginia Military Institute held a reunion and rally at Baltimore. Indications point to a large turnout tomorrow, although Academy athletic officials announced that they will be ready to care for the fans.

In the event of rain and sloppy footing Navy will wear a new style of rainy-day pants made of material guaranteed not to absorb moisture.

Youngblood Heads District Soccer Association

George F. Youngblood, veteran soccer coach and official, last night was elected president of the Washington Soccer League at an organization meeting at the Y. M. C. A.

The league, which is affiliated with the United States Football Association, will maintain a permanent headquarters at the Central Branch, Y. M. C. A., this season, and hopes to revivie interest in the ancient kicking pastime which has been in decline the past few years.

Nine teams, which will begin play next Sunday, comprise the circuit. They are Heurich Brewers, Washington Sports Club, Italian-Americans, Prince Georges Boys Club, Marlboro, Del Rio, Young Democrats, Silver Spring and Shady Side.

Other officers elected last night were John Gunn, vice president, and James C. Ragland, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Cross heads the referee's committee.

Gophers Face Test Today In Nebraska

50,000 Expected Big Ten Card Tough Ohio State Vs. Indiana Irish Play Jayhawks

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—The days of early season "breathers" generally being a thing of the past in big time football, the Western Conference tomorrow will swing into a program of important battles which ultimately might play a part in deciding both Big Ten and National championships.

In one of the Nation's topnotch engagements, powerful Minnesota goes against stubborn Nebraska at Minneapolis. The Golden Gophers, after their 15 to 0 triumph over Washington, again are contenders for National honors, but the Cornhuskers always are rough for Bernie Bierman's crew, which probably will be without the services of Harold Van Every, speedy back who is suffering with a stomach ailment. More than 50,000 fans were expected to see the contest.

Ohio State, rated a strong contender for the Big Ten title, takes on Indiana, which has several promising sophomores who might blast the Scarlet and Gray hopes. A veteran line averaging 213 pounds, however, should make things difficult for the Hoosier back all afternoon. A crowd of 70,000 was anticipated.

At Ann Arbor, Michigan's reportedly rejuvenated Wolverines take on an old enemy, Michigan State, probably before a capacity house of 85,000 spectators. State will be after a fifth successive victory over Michigan, but there is a suspicion that Fritz Crisler's debut as Michigan coach will be at the expense of the Charlie Bachman aggregation this season.

Notre Dame, with a generally untried squad, nevertheless is favored to stop Kansas, even though the Jayhawks whipped Texas last week. Northwestern's Wildcats entertain Kansas State and were favorites over the invaders. The Wisconsin Badgers, "darkhorse" in the Big Ten scramble, take on Marquette University.

Coach Mal Elward professed to be worried as his Purdue Boilermakers prepared for the Butler game at Indianapolis and at Illinois Coach Bob Zuppke was hopeful of downing Depauw University of Chicago to take the edge off last Saturday's defeat by Ohio University. With an all-senior backfield and a sophomore-reserve line, Chicago encounters Bradley Tech, reputedly boasting one of its best elevens in years.

Iowa has an open date.

Pirates

in seven attempts in his batting championship race against Johnny Mize, of St. Louis, started the first scoring rally in the second inning with a single, went to second on Tobin's balk and scored on Lou Riggs' single. Singles by Myers, Berger and McCormick, coupled with Young's error, accounted for two in the third. Homers by Berger and Lombardi, with one on, netted three in the fifth. A single, a walk and Richardson's double accounted for the final Red run. Brown ended the game for the Pirates, making his forty-ninth appearance of the season on the mound.

Pittsburgh averted a shutout in the eighth on a walk to Handley, a single by Todd and a fielder's choice on Lloyd Waner's dribble to second.

Colonials

Sampson to Babich, which gained 12 yards moved the Colonials to the 16, where it was first and ten. Here the attack began to sputter and finally died. Sampson and Urick picked up only five yards on two line smashes and then Sampson twice was tackled as he sought a pass receiver, Furman taking the ball.

Boxers Near Ring Shape For Benefit

By Lewis F. Atchison.

If Petey Sarron, the midget mauler from Birmingham, is as washed up as some critics would have you believe, his agent, Jimmy Erwin, would like to have another similarly old and decrepit fighter under his managerial wing.

Erwin took a long, satisfied squint at Sarron during a spirited mix-up with Joe Green in their training joust yesterday and triumphantly shouted.

"Lookit that left . . . Lookit that fellow go . . . Lookit the way he's hittin' that Green. Does he look like a washed-up fighter to you? Does he?

Truthfully, he didn't. He looked anything but washed up as he mussed up Green's hair (quite a feat since his tonsure) and slugged toe to toe with Joey. He looked like a youngster on his way up, rather than an old man looking for a spot to park his tired carcass.

"People forget that Sarron's a late fighter," added Erwin. "He's only beginning to reach his peak, and since the left arm is okay, again I honestly believe he can grab that lightweight crown. Y'know we're supposed to fight Armstrong on the Coast after Christmas, don't you? We're on the Christmas card in Cleveland again, and after that it's the coast and Armstrong—any maybe the title."

"Jimmy's right," he said. "A fighter's no good until he's 24 years old at least. Braddock didn't win the title until he was 28; Baer didn't make a name for himself until he was 25, and there are dozens of others like them. Montana's the same way. He's really just beginning to be a good fighter even though he's been near the top a long time."

"Sarron has taken good care of himself all his life. He doesn't smoke or indulge in drinking, and keeps good hours. He's just beginning to reap the benefits of living a clean, wholesome life. Don't go overboard with the rest of 'em and say Sarron's all through, because nothing ever was farther from the truth."

Montana and LaMothe also looked good yesterday, although the half-pint Filipino had his hands full with Cyril Josephs, the West Indies colored boy. Josephs, a 123-pounder, didn't pull any punches on Montana, and it was a real war while they were in there. A repitition of such tactics in their respective bouts Monday night will guarantee a successful show.

Yale Meets Columbia

Lions Are Favored Luckman to Perform Opener for Both

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 30, (AP).—Yale and Columbia will unveil their latest football talent in the Bowl here tomorrow. More than 25,000 fans—depending on the weather—are expected to witness the opening kickoff in this important "Ivy League" contest at 2 p. m. (E. S. T.).

The Columbia Lions with Sid Luckman, quite a football trickster, were slight favorites to down the Yale Bulldogs who this year lack a "box office" attraction such as their most recent All-Americans, Larry Kelley and Clint Frank.

Nats Rained Out Close Here Sunday

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, Sept. 30.—The Nats' final game of the season with the Red Sox was rained off the schedule this afternoon and the Washington club returned to the Capital for its farewell appearance at Griffith Stadium on Sunday.

Tomorrow is an open date on the Nats' schedule but on Sunday they will meet the Athletics in a doubleheader. Manager Bucky Harris will give Washington fans a last 1938 look at Joe Krakauskas, sensational rookie southpaw, and Rene Monteagudo, diminutive Cuban left-hander.

3-Run Rally Wins Lyons Scatters Hits Connors Gets Homer Darkness Ends Finale

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Chicago's White Sox pounded out a 7-to-5 victory, then were held to a 3-to-3 tie by the St. Louis Browns today as darkness halted the second game in the eighth inning.

The Sox rallied for three runs in the eighth inning to win the opener. Ted Lyons allowed 13 hits in winning his ninth game of the season.

The Browns rallied to tie the score in the eighth inning of the second game after the Sox, aided by Connors' two-run homer, had taken a 3-to-0 lead in the third.

Frostburg, Md., Sept. 30.—The Freeman Hibernians tied the International Americans for first place in the Frostburg Soccer League by defeating Hearts of Midlothian, 6-2.

Field of 16 Named for Sprint Test

Preeminent Will Go
Rough Time Entered
No Steeplechase
Post Time 1:30 P. M.

By Walter Haight.

The game of trying to ferret out winners, sometimes referred to as the "sport of kings," shifts to the Capital's front door today with the opening of Laurel Park on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard. Rain or shine, and at this writing it looks like rain, the bangtails will ankle postward and hurry over the track in seven races, which will serve as the first program of a 25-day meeting.

From 10,000 to 20,000 customers, depending on the weather, will report to munch hotdogs, guzzle pop, cheer, root and form long lines in front of windows to buy pieces of pasteboard which they hope will be redeemed at big profits a few minutes later.

Part of the program was washed out yesterday. The steeplechase event, scheduled to be the first jumping race of the year at a major Maryland track, was called off, due to the reluctance of trainers to send their charges out on the slippery turf.

However, the line-up for the remainder of the card is a good one, with the top-spot occupied by the $7,500 added Capital Handicap, a sprint of 6 furlongs that promises to bring together a gang of speed horses of merit. Sixteen horses appeared on the mimeographed overnight entry sheets. Despite track conditions, upward of a dozen are expected to face Starter Jim Milton.

Preeminent to Compete

The line-up packed no surprises. Preeminent, despite the high weight assignment of 126 pounds, apparently will start. Yancy Christmas' Rough Time, winner last year in record time, is slated to compete. The remainder of the entries are: Mrs. W. M. Jeffords' Creole Maid, T. J. Hill's White Cockade, Shandon Farm's Gold Flag, H. P. Headley's Preeminent, Maxwell Howard's The Chief, A. C. Compton's Sun Egret, Millsdale's Mower, A. G. Vanderbilt's Pit Bull, Mrs. E. Degnem Ark's Finance, J. Y. Christmas' Rough Time, D. Christmas' Accolade, E. W. Duffy's Grey Gold, N. W. Church's Lavengro, J. A. Manfuso's Aneroid; F. C. Murray's Infidox, and A. C. Compton's Clingendaal.

Only one horse has won the stake twice in succession. He was George D. Widener's ill-fated Sation, who took the 1934 running under 130 pounds and won again in the next year under an impost of 136 pounds, highest in the history of the stake. Others have won the stake twice but not in successive years.

Daily Double Scheduled

Due to the absence of a steeplechase, the daily double will be on the first and second races. Post time for the first race is 1:30 p. m.

The Capital Handicap is the first of ten stake events to be run before the close of the meeting on October 29. These include two big money events for steeplechasers, the $5,000 Chevy Chase and the $3,500 Governor Ogle.

The Jones camera will again aid the judges in placing the horses. All winners, as well as any other horses designated by the stewards, will be given the saliva test. This work will be under the direction of Dr. Thomas A. Ladson, representing the Maryland Racing Commission. H. A. Frank is in charge of the mutuel department with the overseeing of the entire show falling on the shoulders of General Manager Frank Brady.

The track's publicity department adds its usual line: "Fans who plan on motoring here, will find all highways at their best. Daily special trains will be run from New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. These specials stop at the track's main entrance."

Phils and Dodgers Close With Twin Bill

Philadelphia, Sept. 30 (AP).—The Philadelphia National League baseball team has arranged to play a doubleheader with Brooklyn at Shibe Park Sunday to close its season instead of the single games originally scheduled for Saturday and Sunday.

Umpires Named

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—Roy Van Graflan and Louis D. Jorda were named today by President Frank Shaughnessy as the International League's umpires in the junior world series opening tomorrow between Newark and Kansas City. The American Association umpires will be William J. Guthrie nad George H. Johnson.

Our Guest Selector

Our Guest Selector for today is Edmund Plohn. The manager of the National Theater admits he has never been identified with sports in any capacity but he was born in Old Kentucky which qualifies him as picker of running horses. He came from New York to Washington and the E Street playhouse. Plohn almost played a winner at Havre de Grace. His friend, Ben Bernie, told him to bet on Wes, owned by the Old Maestro. He phoned to find out which race Wes was in and discovered that the horse had already ran and had won. Here's some Plohn expects to get into the money at Laurel today:

PLOHN.

1—Robespierre, Hardy Jim, Refreshment.
2—Patsey Begone, Dixieland, Cornwallis.
3—High Tension, Light Chatter, Toothpick.
4—Whichaway, Invermark, Trina.
5—The Chief, White Cockade, Sun Egret.
6—Nedayr, Challenphen, Room Service.
7—Panalong, Braving Danger, Howard.
Best Bet—Nedayr.

Industry's Tax 53% of Income

Taxes in industrial corporations in 1937 equaled 53 per cent of corporate net income after taxes, according to a report issued yesterday by the National Association of Cost Accountants.

In this report, based on data supplied by treasurers, controllers and accountants associated with 717 industrial corporations, it is pointed out that, while the total tax revenues of federal, state and local governments in 1937 amounted to over one-fifth of national income for that year, the tax burden on industrial companies was even greater, amounting in 1937 to one-third of corporate income before the taxes were deducted.

This study also disclosed that direct corporate taxes in 1937 amounted to 18.5 per cent of total direct labor payrolls and 3.4 per cent of sales prices for the reporting companies.

The study on industry's tax burden was initiated by W. Gordon Buchanan, C. P. A., of Washington, at a meeting of the local chapter of cost accountants.

General Motors Cuts Pontiac Prices

Detroit, Sept. 30 (AP).—Price reductions of from $20 to $25 on its existing six cylinder line and from $20 to $40 on eight cylinder models were announced today by the Pontiac division of General Motors Corporation.

New Financing

New York, Sept. 30 (AP).—New financing for the week amounted to $17,089,180, compared with $6,528,779 the previous week and $20,273,556 the corresponding week last year, it was reported today by Poor's Publishing Co. Municipal issues again accounted for the greater portion of the week's total.

Wheat Falls As War Fear Is Dispelled

Drops 2 Cents a Bushel
Lowest at Close
Trading Is Active

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Sept. 30.—Triumph of peace forces at the Munich international conference led to a quick fall of 2 cents a bushel in Chicago wheat values today.

Spirited trading was witnessed, especially a brisk selling movement on the part of recent speculative buyers who had acquired ownership because of fears of widespread war. Virtually the day's lowest prices prevailed as dealings came to an end.

Complete removal overnight of lingering doubts that the four-power diplomatic assemblage would achieve victory for peace dominated wheat market transactions from the outset.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛-1⅞ cents lower compared with yesterday's finish, December 63⅞-¾, May 64¾-⅞, corn 1¼-1½ down, December 48¼-⅜, May 51½-¼, oats ⅜-⅞ off, rye showing 1⅜-1½ drop, and provisions unchanged to 40 cents decline.

Stocks Advance Vigorously as War Fades
Rise in Foreign Bond Prices a Feature
Sterling Up 23⅜ Cents From Recent Low

New York, Sept. 30.—Security markets here and in other parts of the world today reflected the widespread relief at the dramatic shift from war to peace in Europe. There remained sketics who held that the recently threatening powers still are not entirely to be trusted. Few questioned, however, the probability that settlement of international differences by negotiation has superseded, for the time at least, bulldozing tactics and agreements forced by terrifying displays of military power.

Stock prices recovered sharply in New York, London and Paris on brisk buying, with skyrocketing quotations for foreign bonds an important feature, attended by substantial recoveries in all of the recently depressed European currencies. While downward price movements took place in some of the so-called war commodities, peace-time supplies of all kinds were in demand. Cotton and the nonferrous metals were firmer. Cheerfulness, meanwhile, succeeded pessimism in business quarters. A view generally expressed was, now that the many-sided European controversy seems on its way to permanent solution, we can devote attention to the not inconsiderable domestic troubles.

The extent of the upward movement was nowhere more apparent than in Government bonds, up 2 to 3 points; 6 to 11 in German loans and 19 in Czechoslovakian issues. In foreign exchange dealings, the pound sterling extended its gains and at the close was 23⅜ cents above the Wednesday low. For the second successive day the price of gold declined, yesterday's drop of 21 pence an ounce in London, making a total dip of 35 pence since midweek, when the yellow metal sold at 147 shillings an ounce, the highest since 1935. Announcement was made of further gold engagements for shipment to this country, including $10,477,000 from England and $703,000 from Holland.

Opening Is Active

On the New York Stock Exchange all groups shot upward under buying which aggregated 1,897,860 shares, a far more substantial total than in recent sessions when uncertainty and fear prevailed. The composite of the 100 key stocks in the New York Herald Tribune's average finished 1.27 points higher with 736 of the 860 issues traded showing gains. Only 41 stocks included in the list declined.

General Motors and Steel common each opened on blocks of 10,000 shares at $47.75, up 1.87½, and $59, up 2.12½, respectively. The former finished the day with a net rise of 1⅜ and Steel common added 3¼. Chrysler and New York Central had 8,000-share opening blocks at substantially better quotations which were held or extended during the balance of the session. The widest gain was in International Business Machines, which opened at $160, up $9.50 a share. The company, which does a world-wide business, would have been seriously affected by a European war.

Tickers fell behind the market for a time during the first hour when short covering added impetus to the upward swing. At the same time, brokers reported, that some of the day-to-day traders who bought at the bottom on Wednesday, had taken profits. After the first burst of buying and a short period of realizing, prices slipped back from the best levels of the day but support developed on dips and closing prices compared favorably with the day's highs.

Union Pacific led rail issues with a 4-point gain. The weekly carloading report showed loadings 15,411 above those of a week ago but substantially below those for the like 1937 week.

Wheat dropped nearly 2 cents at Chicago as speculators who had bought on war prospects let go. Cotton advanced 4 to 7 points.

Foreign Bonds Lead Rise

Listed bonds soared today, with foreign dollar issues outstripping United States Treasury and domestic corporate obligations, on the peace pact signed in Munich. Gains were wide in a fairly active session, and most of the losses occasioned by war fears now have been recovered. In the corporate division, Nickel Plate bonds took a contrary downward course on the suspension of interest payments, losses ranging nearly to 11 points. Trading in all issues amounted to $9,980,000.

The foreign section attracted much atteniton, owing to the heavy inroads made by the war scare. The rally proved equally decided with gains ranging to 10 points and many issues up 3 to 5 points. Czech 8s of 1951 advanced 4¾ points, despite the dismemberment, while the 8s of 1952 were motionless.

Trade Index At Highest Since April

Texas Showing Best
New York City Low
More Gains in August

New York, Sept. 30.—"A further rise in the United States Trade Barometer from 75.1 (revised) in July to 76.0 (preliminary) in August carried the index to the highest level since April," Dun & Bradstreet say today in their weekly review, which added:

"This was the second consecutive gain recorded since a seven months' unbroken decline beginning last November. The dip from last year's level, however, continued at 21 per cent.

"Trade barometers for the United States and for each of the twenty-nine regions reflect trends in consumer spending. The indexes—based on bank debits, department store sales, new car registrations, and life insurance sales—are computed by Dr. L. D. H. Weld, director of Research, McCann-Erickson, Inc., and are published monthly in Dun's Review.

"In comparison with the 1928-1932 average, the Texas region made the best showing, its barometer for July standing at 103.0. In general, the West and South continued to hold a better relative position than did Northeastern sections. New York City recorded the greatest decline, its index at 65.9 being the lowest in the twenty-nine regions, despite an increase of 1.4 points over the June level.

Second Month's Rise

"A second successive month-to-month improvement in trade activity was indicated by the 1.2 per cent rise in the United States Trade Barometer from July to August. Concrete evidence of an uptrend was first found in the July trade advance, the index in that month having made a 1.4 per cent gain over the June level, following a consistent decline for seven months.

"In spite of the fact that a rise in the adjusted trade barometer indicates a more than seasonal improvement, the August figure showed a widening of the percentage decline from the corresponding month last year, a 22 per cent drop in August comparing with 21 per cent in July. Inasmuch as trade did not show a convincing downtrend until November a year ago, however, a slightly wider dip in the margin of decline was not surprising."

Egly to Supervise Over-Counter Trading

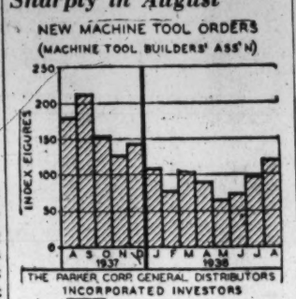
William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission yesterday announced the appointment of Henry H. Egly of New York as head of the newly established unit to carry out certain functions of the commission in connection with the recently enacted program of regulations for the over-the-counter markets. Mr. Egly, who has taken a years leave of absence from his business connections will report in the near future.

The new unit established by the commission will have the responsibility for setting up and perfecting the machinery whereby the over-the-counter business may accomplish the co-operative regulation sought by the act.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, Sept. 30 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agr.).—A few inquiries for wool were being received in the Boston market today but actual trading was quiet. An occasional small lot was being sold at steady prices compared with prices realized during the earlier part of the week. Sentiment in the market was improving and holders were inclined to resist low bids more firmly than during the past few weeks.

Tool Orders Rise Sharply in August



Boston, Sept. 10.—One more sign that the general trend of business activity is on the upward trend is the sharp August increase in new machine tool orders over July.—Machine tool orders last month were the highest for any month this year, up 23 per cent from July, but far under those of a year ago.

Cotton Higher December 8.06

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 30.—Cotton rallied today on foreign buying but with prices about $2 a bale above recent lows, realizing appeared later in the day. December reacted from 8.16 to 8.04, closing at 8.06. Final quotations were 4 to 7 points net higher.

The market opened 10 to 17 poins higher on active foreign and domestic buying, promoted by the peaceful solution of the Sudeten-German crisis. After the initial orders had been satisfied, however, demand let up and when the foreign markets had closed a slightly heavier tone developed under Southern hedge selling, profit taking, local and New Orleans selling.

Big Offerings Loom With Peace Pact

400 Million Estimate
More Are Under Way
Crisis Halted Rise

By the Associated Press.

New York, Sept. 30.—Plans for large-scale new corporate financing, held up by the recent war threats, were expected in underwriting circles today to go forward again as result of the peaceful settlement of the Sudeten German minority issue in Czechoslovakia. In some quarters it was estimated more than $400,000,000 in new issues may be brought out within the next few weeks.

Bond men noted the first clearing of the war clouds from Europe was accompanied by the filing with the SEC at Washington yesterday of plans for two large issues—$80,000,000 in Public Service Co. of Northern Illinois first mortgage 3½ per cent bonds and $55,000,000 in American Gas & Electric Co. first mortgage bonds.

Large Loans Coming

A number of other large loans were reported under negotiation, including $69,500,000 in Wisconsin Electric bonds. An issue of $37,500,000 in Virginia Electric & Power bonds, already registered with the SEC, was slated for public offering next week.

Interrupted for more than a year by the decline in security markets and in business generally, new financing started to revive last June on a moderate scale. In August new security issues filed with the SEC and reaching the effective stage where they could be sold under the 1933 securities law rose to $394,433,000, the largest total since June, 1937.

After Labor Day, however, war fears hit bonds along with other markets, causing underwriters to delay plans for bringing out additional issues.

Rites Set Today For Mrs. Nichols

Funeral services for Mrs. Viola Nichols, 31, who was slain early Wednesday in her home, 1303 P street northwest, will be held at 11 a. m. today at the home of her brother, Bernard Miller, in Winchester, Va. The Rev. E. T. Clark, pastor of the First Baptist Church, will officiate, and burial will be in Mount Hebron Cemetery.

Friends said Mrs. Nichols is the seventh person in her immediate family to die since July 1. A cousin, William Combs, husband of a cousin, was killed by a mysterious shotgun blast at Wardensville, W. Va., last month.

Mrs. Nichols' husband, Clarence Edward Nichols, 29, was ordered held to the grand jury in connection with her slaying, after police told a coroner's jury he admitted beating her with a rolling pin when she woke him several times.

Brig. Gen. Ennis, Civil and Spanish War Veteran, Dies

Newport, R. I., Sept. 30 (AP).—Brig. Gen. William Ennis, U. S. A., retired, reputedly the oldest living graduate of the United States Military Academy, died at his home here today. He was 97 years old.

Gen. Ennis, who was able to be about until a few months ago, saw service in two wars—Civil and Spanish-American—and was cited three times for bravery. He also served on the Mexican border and in several Indian campaigns. He was a native of Newport and was graduated at West Point.

His son and grandson are Army officers, Col. William P. Ennis, and Lieut. William P. Ennis, jr. He also leaves a daughter, Clara Ennis, of Newport.

Mrs. Gore's Rites Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Mrs. Lucy Sasscer Gore, sister of Lansdale G. Sasscer, president of the Maryland Senate, will be held at 3 p. m. tomorrow in Trinity Church, Upper Marlboro, Md. The Rev. J. C. M. Shrewsbury will officiate.

Mrs. Gore died Thursday in White Plains, N. Y., where she had lived for the past 15 years. A native of Upper Marlboro, she graduated from the National Cathedral School for Girls in 1904.

She leaves her husband, H. Rodgers Gore; three children, Lucy S. Gore, H. Rodgers Gore, jr., and Frederick Gore, of White Plains, and three brothers, Senator Sasscer and Dr. James G. Sasscer, of Upper Marlboro, and F. Harold Sasscer, Washington.

Rites for Lieut. Ely Set for This Morning

Funeral services for Lieut. Hanson Edward Ely, jr., United States Navy, retired, who died Thursday in Orange, N. J., will be held at 10 a. m. today in St. John's Church, Sixteenth and H streets northwest. Burial with full military honors will be in Arlington Cemetery. The Rev. Charles J. S. Ryley, of Upperville, Va., will officiate, and the honorary pallbearers will be Capt. Leigh Fuller and Capt. Louis Ely, of the Army; Frank Hanafee, John H. Davidson, Hunter DeButts, John Lawson, Jack Reese and Archi Randolph.

Conditions

The disturbance that was central over eastern North Carolina Thursday night has continued to move northeastward and is centered tonight about 100 miles eastnortheast of Cape Cod with slowly increasing intensity with lowest reported pressure 29.64 inches at Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, and 29.66 inches at Nantucket, Mass. This disturbance has been attended by general rains in the Atlantic States and by northeast gales along the Atlantic Coast from the Virginia capes to the Bay of Fundy. The highest velocity reported was 46 miles per hour at Atlantic City, N. J., and Nantucket, Mass. Local showers have occurred in the Plateau and northern Rocky Mountain regions and the North Pacific States. Another disturbance is moving eastward over western Canada. Coppermine, District of Mackenzie, 29.48 inches, and pressure remains low from eastern Hudson Strait to Iceland. Angmagssalik, Greenland, 29.28 inches. Pressure is relatively low over Missouri and Arkansas and portions of the adjacent States. St. Louis, Mo., 29.92 inches. An area of high pressure is advancing eastward over Quebec and Newfoundland. Botwood, Newfoundland, 30.36 inches, and another is moving eastward over Manitoba, Minnesota, and the northern lake region. Sioux Lookout, Ont., 30.26 inches. Pressure remains high in and northeast of Bermuda, 30.8. Escalibur, 30.39 inches. The temperature has fallen in portions of the Atlantic States and the northern Plains States, while it has risen in the Pacific States and the southern Plains States. Several stations in Missouri and Kansas report the highest temperatures of record so late in the season. The maximum reported was 98 degrees at Lebo, Kans.

The Thrill That Comes Once in a Lifetime

GOSH! A GEN-U-WINE 1869 CANADIAN QUEEN VICTORIA! I BET IT'S WORTH MOREN A DOLLAR
THE STAMP COLLECTOR STRIKES PAY DIRT IN AN OLD TRUNK——
R. H. M.

Bob Burns Says—

The American Legion boys are living the war all over again out here in Los Angeles, this week, and I want'a tell you, I've picked up many a hair-raisin' tale by jest keepin' my ears open.

The other day I joined a group of 'em jest in time to hear a fella say, "The way they charged was positively staggering. They charged like demons."

I butted in and said, "Are you talkin' about an experience you had on the fields of battle in France?" He said, "No, I'm talkin' about an experience I had the other night here in Hollywood in one of those high-priced night-clubs."

MR. AND MRS. — Joe Revives Some Memories—in Sunday's Post

AW, GEE, I DONT WANT TO GO OUT. ANYTHING IS GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME
DO YOU ESPECIALLY WANT TO GO OUT?
I WASNT THINKING OF ME. I WAS THINKING OF YOU
JUST TOAST AND TEA WILL DO FOR ME. JUST A BITE AND A SUP
WELL, ALL RIGHT, AS LONG AS YOU FEEL THAT WAY ABOUT IT
GREAT GOSH! ONLY COLD LAMB AND POTATO SALAD? IS THIS ALL YOUVE GOT FOR TEA?

TERRY AND THE PIRATES — Big Stoop Gets Some Action—in Sunday's Post — By Milton Caniff

WHAT DO YOU MAKE OF IT, PAT?
WE SEEM TO BE ON AN ISLAND...THIS IS PROBABLY AN ABANDONED PLANTATION OUR FAT FRIEND HAS SELECTED AS A HIDEOUT!
HE'LL HOLD US HERE TILL HE GETS HIS CASH—MEANWHILE HE'LL BREAK UP THE YACHT AND SELL IT PIECEMEAL FOR PLENTY!
WHEN HE GETS ALL THAT MONEY TOGETHER HE CAN SKIP TO PARTS UNKNOWN BEFORE HE RELEASES US...WHAT'S WRONG, SIR?—YOU'RE PALE!
...THERE'LL BE NO MONEY PAID, RYAN! LONG AGO I GAVE IRONBOUND ORDERS TO MY OFFICE NEVER TO PAY A CENT IF I WAS EVER ABDUCTED — NOW ALL OF YOU MUST SUFFER WITH ME!

DONALD DUCK— He Leads With His Chin. By Walt Disney

BIg CHIEF WAHOO — Cliff Dwellers' Writing Surprises Wahoo's Friend—in Sunday's Post — By Saunders and Woggon

IN A LAUNCH ON THE EAST RIVER WE MEET A MAN WHO IS TO PLAY A VITAL ROLE IN WAHOO'S FUTURE
I SAY, DR. HARVALE! A SWIMMER IS APPROACHING OUR STARBOARD SIDE, SIR!
LOOK! HE'S CARRYING SOMETHING! AN EXCEEDINGLY HEAVY BURDEN!
YOU OKAY, MINNIE?
GOOD HEAVENS, MAN! DID YOU SWIM ALL THAT DISTANCE CARRYING ALL THAT WEIGHT?
SURE! HEAP EASY! ONCE WAHOO SWIM FOUR MILES WITH TWO STEERS ON HIS BACK!
SUCH AMAZING STRENGTH! SUCH COURAGE! HMM! PERHAPS HEAVEN HAS SENT A CHAMPION TO PROTECT ME AGAINST THE FIENDISH AUTHOR OF THESE NOTES!

DON WINSLOW OF THE NAVY — Winslow Takes Over — By Frank Martinek

GREAT HEAVEN, WEST—HERE ARE MORE BOXES WITH PISTOLS GONE AND BRICKS INSIDE! THIS PLACE HAS BEEN LOOTED!!
WHY DIDN'T YOU REPORT THIS TO THE OFFICER OF THE DAY?
I WAS SCARED, COMMANDER—I'D LOSE MY JOB..
I BEEN TRYIN' TO FIGURE OUT FIRST WHO DONE IT... SAVE MY FACE A LITTLE.. MAYBE..
I SEE
AS IT HAPPENS, YOU'VE DONE THE BEST THING.. WE'LL KEEP QUIET FOR THE PRESENT—AND GET BUSY ON THIS CASE TOGETHER..

MICKEY FINN — Uncle Phil, the Autograph Hunter—See Sunday's Post — By Lank Leonard

THEN WE CAN START FOR HOME RIGHT AWAY, INSPECTOR?
YES, MICKEY—THE G'MEN WILL BRING DIXON AND HIS MOB BACK EAST FOR THE TRIAL!
THEY SURE SPREAD US ALL OVER THE FRONT PAGES, PARDNER!
YEAH—BUT PACK YOUR BAG, TOM—WE'VE ONLY GOT HALF AN HOUR TO CATCH THAT TRAIN!
YOU'LL BE BACK HOME WITH MA AND KITTY AND UNCLE PHIL TOMORRA' NIGHT, SUNNY!
I-I NEVER WANTA HAFTA LEAVE 'EM AGAIN, EITHER!
YOU WON'T, SUNNY! MICKEY AND ME'LL SEE TO THAT!
—BUT IN AN ATTORNEY'S OFFICE IN A SMALL SOUTHERN CITY!
MR. CLARK—LOOK AT THIS PICTURE!

NO NEED TO—I KIN PICK UP A TRAIL ON A PAVED HIGHWAY IF'N I HAD TO!
YIPPEE
MEANWHILE, BUCK, WHO CLAIMS TO BE THE CISCO KID'S COUSIN, IS TRYING HARD TO FRIGHTEN THE GIRLS AFTER CAPTURING THEM!
SO I DON'T SCARE YOU NONE, EH?
OH DEAR, NO!

BENNY — No Free Parking — By J. Carver Pusey

DON'T LET NOBUDDY IN—I DON'T CARE WHO IT IS!
YASSAH. WE GOT ALL D'DOAH'S GUARDED.
KIN I HAVE A CHEESE SAND-WHICH, RAY?
SORRY JOE—NOT NOW. BUT YOU CAN HAVE A CARLOAD OF 'EM AFTER THE FIGHT.
OP'RATER DON'T GIVE US NO CALLS. I DON'T WANT THAT PHONE T'WAKE 'IM UP.
NOW GO TO SLEEP OLD TIMER.
BOY OH BOY—SHE'S GONNA BE AT THE RING-SIDE—
SHE'LL BE THERE. I'LL BET MY END OF TH' PURSE.
—I HOPE.
